A claim has recently been made that a western lad of 12 summers was the youngest telegraph operator in the country. The papers have of late contained biographical sketches of the youth, and one Eastern Journal has seen fit to publish his portrait. Wixom, Oakland county, has a telegraph operator but six years of age. His name is Chauncy Ranch. He is the son of John R. Ranch, the Flint and Pere Marquette station agent at that place. Young Ranch learned the Morse alphabet when but 4 years of age, and has continued to operate ever since on a private line that runs from the depot to his father's house, about a quarter of a mile distant.

THE PRESIDENT IS DEAD.

His Long Suffering Ended and his Spirit Departs at 10:35 Monday Evening.

REPEATED CHILLS FOLLOWED BY FATAL EXHAUSTION — DEATH RESULTS FROM WEAKNESS.

Vice President Arthur Notified of the Sad Event and Takes the Oath of Office—The Country in Mourning.

THE FIRST NEWS.

The President died at 10:35. From what can be ascertained his death was from sheer exhaustion. Mr. Warren Young, assistant to Secretary Brown, brought the news from the cottage at 10 minutes before 11. The first indication that anything serious had occurred was the appearance of a messenger at the Elberon hotel who obtained a carriage and drove rapidly off. It is supposed that he had gone to summon the members of the cabinet who left here about 9:30 to-night. Attorney General MacVeagh has notified Vice-President Arthur of the President's death.

LATER.

11.15 P. M.—The cabinet has just arrived and gone in a body to Francklyn cottage. All are here except Blaine and Lincoln. Attorney Gen. MacVeagh has telegraphed them of the President's death. Great excitement prevails here, and the particulars cannot be obtained. The guard around the cottage has been doubled, and no one is allowed to approach it. The government has taken possession of the only telegraph wire which is connected at Elberon. It will be almost impossible to get further details to-night, as we are shut off from all communication with the cottage and its inmates.

THE LAST BULLETIN.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 19—11:30 P.M.—The President died at 10:35. After the bulletin was issued at 5:30 this evening the President continued in much the same condition as during the afternoon, the pulse varying from 102 to 106, with rather increased force and volume. After taking nourishment he fell into a quiet sleep. About 35 minutes before his death and while asleep his pulse rose to 120 and was somewhat more feeble. At 10 minutes after ten o'clock he awoke complaining of a severe pain over the region of the heart and almost immediately became unconscious and ceased to breathe at 10:35.

D. W. BLISS.
FRANK H. HAMILTON.
D. HAYES AGNEW.

MR. MACVEAGH'S DESCRIPTION.

11:20 P. M.—Attorney General MacVeagh has just come to the Elberon hotel from Francklyn cottage, and made the following statement: "I sent my dispatch to Mr. Lowell at 10 P. M. Shortly before that Dr. Bliss had seen the President and found his pulse at 106 beats per minute, and all the conditions were then promising a quiet night. The doctor asked the President if he was feeling uncomfortable in any way. The President answered, "not at all," and shortly afterwards fell asleep and Dr. Bliss returned to his room across the hall from that occupied by the President. Cols. Swaim and Rockwell remained with the President. About 10:15 the President awakened and remarked to Col. Swaim that he was suffering great pain and placed his hand over his heart. Dr. Bliss was summoned, and when he entered the room he found the President substantially without pulse, and the action of the heart was almost undistinguishable. He said at once that the President was dying, and directed Mrs. Garfield to be called, also the doctors. The President remained in a dying condition until 10:35, when he was pronounced dead. He died of some trouble of the heart supposed to be neuralgia, but that of course is uncertain. I notified Gen. Arthur and sent a dispatch to Messrs. Blaine and Lincoln, who are enroute from Boston to New York." The cabinet are now (at 11:30 P. M.) in consultation.

THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

It is supposed by the surgeons that death was occasioned by a clot of blood forming in the heart.

SCENES AT THE DEATH BED.

Dr. Bliss was the first one notified of the President's expression of pain, and upon entering the room he at once saw that the end was near. The members of the family were summoned to the bedside. All arrived. Perfect quiet prevailed.

Mrs. Garfield bore the trying ordeal with great fortitude, and exhibited unprecedented courage. She gave way to no paroxysms of grief, and after death became evident she very quietly withdrew to her own room. There she sat, a heart-stricken widow, full of grief but with too much courage to exhibit it to those about her. She was laboring under a terrible strain, and, despite her efforts, tears flowed from her eyes and her lips became drawn by her noble attempt to bear the burden with which she has been affected.

Miss Mollie was greatly afflicted, and bursts of tears flowed from the child's eyes, notwithstanding her noble effort to follow the example of her mother.

THE DEATH SCENE

Was one never to be forgotten. Perfect quiet prevailed, and there was not a murmur heard while the President was sinking. After death had been pronounced the body was properly arranged by Dr. S. A. Boynton.

NOTIFICATION OF FRIENDS.

Telegrams were immediately sent to the President's mother in Ohio, and to his two sons, Harvey and James, who are now at William's College, as also to Vice-President Arthur and other prominent business men.

THE UNDERTAKER.

Mr. Morris, the undertaker of the village, will be in charge of the remains.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

Eugene Britton, Coroner of Monmouth County, will hold an inquest over the body of the late President.—He has as yet made no arrangements for the inquest, and as far as can be ascertained he has not been notified of the President's death.

THE LAST MOMENTS.

New York, September 19.—From the Times' Long Branch dispatch:—The President died at 10:35 to-night. At the evening bulletin his condition was thought a trifle more comfortable. There was a feeling of congratulation on all sides that he had escaped another rigor, which had been anxiously feared since the chill of the morning. Dr. Boynton during the early part of the evening talked even a little hopefully, and people about the hotels prepared to retire at the usual hour, having almost no fear of any serious change before morning. At 10 o'clock Secretary Brown's cottage was dark and deserted. A few of the more vigilant newspaper men sat talking on the Elberon piazza. Dr. Boynton was among them. At 10:20 a colored messenger called Dr. Boynton out in the dark and whispered to him excitedly. The doctor turned back to the group of reporters.

"The President is sinking rapidly," he said, and disappeared in the gloom across the lawn toward the President's cottage. In a minute the scene had changed. There was a hurrying about the house, and word was quickly sent the length of Long Branch that the President was greatly worse.

At 10:30 Capt. Ingalls came across from the cottage slowly, as if nothing was wrong, and when questioned answered very quietly: "I was just sent for by the officer of the guard to send one of my men to the camp surgeon for mustard for an application to the President's body."

The reporters went out on the lawn as far as the guard line to wait for tidings. The report that the mustard had been sent pointed to the occurrence of another rigor. A voice was heard saying:

"IT IS ALL OVER; THE PRESIDENT IS DEAD."

It was Warren Young, one of the secretaries, who spoke. In an instant the little telegraph office in the Elberon Hotel was surrounded, and there was a shower of bulletins thrown upon the two paralyzed operators. No more than a simple announcement of the death could be sent off, as the government at once took exclusive use of the telegraph office at Elberon. No personal dispatches were sent. Warren Young sent the first official announcement off to Washington and to Mentor.

The President had been dead half an hour when at 11.40 Messrs. Windom, Hunt and James arrived from the West End. They went into the hotel office and were met by Attorney-General MacVeagh, who led them to the cottage.

At 11:15 the members of the cabinet are inside Francklyn cottage engaged in consultation. A great crowd waits outside for further particulars, and the excitement is intense. The President's words when he felt the death-pang attack him were: "I am suffering great pain and I fear the end is near."

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

NEW YORK, September 20.—From the Tribune's Long Branch dispatch: There were present when he awoke only Gen. Swaim and Col. Rockwell. But all the attendants were speedily summoned. Mrs. Garfield, Drs. Bliss, Hamilton and Boynton, and Col. Rockwell and Private Secretary Brown reached the room within a few moments. Mrs. Garfield sat upon the bedside holding the hand of her dying husband. Dr. Hamilton stood on the opposite side and others were grouped about the President, who was unconscious even before the first of those summoned reached the chamber. No other persons were in the room. Mrs. Col. Rockwell with her daughter and Miss Mollie Garfield, sat on a lounge in the hall. The colored servants of Francklyn cottage were grouped outside the door of the sick room peeping in. The President was breathing heavily and at increasing intervals. The doctors whispered to each other two or three times, but aside from this not a word was spoken. Two or three sighs and some suppressed sobbing was heard from the groupes of negroes in the door, but all the rest was silent. The heavy breathing of the President continued for about fifteen minutes and then ceased. Consciousness did not return. Death was absolutely painless. When all was over Mrs. Garfield quietly withdrew to her room. Dr. Hamilton smoothed the features of the dead President, and other physicians and attendants straightened his limbs. Mrs. Garfield returned about half an hour later and sat silently upon the bedside, tears running in' floods over her cheeks, but her whole demeanor manifesting her heroic spirit and self control in the supreme hour of her grief.

VICE PRESIDENT ARTHUR NOTIFIED.

NEW YORK, September 19.—From the Sun: At 11:30 a Sun reporter asked to see Gen. Arthur. There was no unusual stir about the house. The servant told the reporter that Gen. Arthur had received nothing later than the evening bulletin.

"The President is dead," said the reporter.

A deep silence ensued. A moment afterward a telegram was received. Gen. Arthur broke it open slowly. After reading it he buried his head in his hands and remained in this position for a long time. Meanwhile the dispatch was handed slowly arcund. It was the message from the Cabinet informing the Vice-President of the death of the President. By 12 o'clock the sound of cabs rattling up in front of the house filled the street.

It was 12:30 o'clock when Gen. Arthur received formal notification of the President's death signed by the Cabinet. He had not then decided what steps to take. He was again completely unnerved and again buried his face in his hands.

THE OATH ADMINISTERED.

New York, Sept. 20, 3:15 a. m.—In accordance with a dispatch received from the Cabinet in regard to taking the oath of office, messengers were sent to different Judges of the Supreme Court.

The first to put in an appearance was Judge John R. Brady, who was closely followed by Justice Donohue. The party, consisting of the Vice-President and the judges named, besides District Attorney Rollins, Elihu Root and the eldest son of the now President, assembled in the front parlor of No. 123 Lexington Avenue, Gen. Arthur's residence, where the oath of office was administered and he became President of the United States.

DECLINES TO BE INTERVIEWED.

The President has not signified his intention as to when he would visit the Capitol, and he declines to be interviewed as to his future course.

THE FIELD FUND.

NEW YORK, September 19.—Cyrus W. Field, in a card to-night, appeals for prompt contributions to the fund which he started some time ago for the benefit of Mrs. Garfield.

MACON CENTER.

Wheat is up and looks well, was sown uniformly about the first of September, and a greater acreage than usual.

Wheat is worth $1.35-6 at Gault. Will Brighton shipped two car loads Saturday. Hay $12 per ton.

People rushed in from all points of the compass to the fire at J. W. Baker's, Monday evening. Loss two clover straw stacks and a lot of sweet weed. The Dr. just rolled and smiled.

School commenced in the new school house Dist. No. 8, Monday morning, with Ida Martin at the helm. It is universally admitted that we have the toniest school house out. Miss Julia Eastlick is giving lessons on the piano to a number of scholars.

W. H. Osborn has engaged A. Eastlick to make the necessary repairs on his new dwelling in Tecumseh, by way of a new kitchen, changing of closets, doors and windows and a general fixing up. Mrs. Osborn's health is gradually improving and the neighbors regret very much their moving to Tecumseh.

A bran new daughter at Frank Gilmore's.

The family of Stephen Hunter is very sadly afflicted, he being prostrated with the diarrhea and his son Judson in a very critical condition from chronic consumption of the stomach and bowels, with but little hope of recovery.

Two men hunting in David Boyd's woods on Monday, found a lot of goods secreted under leaves beside an old log, consisting of a horse blanket, bridle, surcingle, jack screw, an ax and 8 clevices. Thieving, eh?

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn is not idle in the relief department. At the second meeting called at the Presbyterian church last night $232.50 was contributed, besides many supplies that were not appraised. Gifts of wheat and other grain, clothing, etc., were forwarded last week before any committee was appointed.

I have no doubt committees are good organizations and do their work carefully but where there are so many of them it seems as if a package would require a longer time to get there if each one had to tie it with his string. There is a kind of sympathy folded nicely in a marginal envelope, and another that gives a hand clasp and helps at the funeral. I appreciate the first but understand the other best.—When people are known to be dying of want, why not ship supplies directly to them now, and leave to the central committee the slower work of apportioning gifts according to second rate necessities.

There is still much sickness among us, and diphtheria is alarmingly near.

PEARLIE.

RIDGEWAY.

Evening News distributed by I. D. Loree daily.

Geo. Scollick is still very sick.

The boiler for the new stave mill is on the ground.

Michael Underwood is very low at this writing.

M. E. pulpit was filled last Sunday morning by Alden Wickham and evening by Rev. Sink.

The pastor of the M. E. church for the coming year will be Rev. Killpatrick. The many friends of the Rev. Geo. H. Fields regret very much that his health will not permit of his continuing.

Ridgeway has organized for a relief campaign in aid of the fire sufferers in the northern counties. A meeting was held at the M.E. church on Tuesday evening and the following organization perfected:

Central Committee—G. P. Waring, Rufus Raymond, A. J. Sutton, A. B. Clark.

Soliciting Committee—1st Dist. Henry C. Wilson, Rufus Raymond and Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson. 2d Dist. John Britton, Charles Dubois, Mrs. Joseph Thackray. 3rd Dist., Justus Lowe, Chauncey Dibble, Miss Ella Pattison. 4th Dist., Geo. Oliver, Geo. Smith, Mrs. Henry Coates. 5th Dist., C. L. Lowe; J. D. Arner, Mrs. T. H. Montgomery. 6th Dist., L. M. Soule, Norman Ackley, Mrs. Samuel Kniffin.—7th Dist., Jno. Ivison, J. G. Witt, Mrs. C. Atwell. 9th Dist., J. F. Exelby, J. Hicks.

Everybody is alive to the urgent necessity of the matter, and will contribute accordingly. Only get started and Ridgeway will roll up a contribution that will do her credit.

The district committees are requested to deliver all goods at the Gault freight house, accompanied by an invoice or list of articles, with estimated value.

ALICE CAREY'S SWEETEST POEM.

Among the beautiful pictures
That hang on memory's wall
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth the best of all:
Not forests guarled oaks olden,
Dark with the mistletoe,
Not for the violets golden
That sprinkle the vale below:
Not for the milk-white lilies
That lean from the fragrant hedge
Not for the vines on the upland,
Where the bright red berries rest:
Nor the pink, nor the pale, sweet lilies
It seems to me the best.

I once had a little brother
With eyes that were dark and deep,
In the lapse of that olden forest
He lieth in peace asleep.
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free as the wind that blows,
We roved there the beautiful summers—
The summers of long ago.
But his feet on the withered grass, weary,
And one of the autumn days
I made for my little brother
A bed of the yellow leaves.

Sweetly his pale arms folded
My neck in sweet embrace
As the light of immortal beauty
Silently covered his face:
And when the arrows of sunset
Lodged in the tree-tops bright,
He fell, in his saint-like beauty,
Asleep by the gates of light.
Therefore, of all the pictures,
That hang on memory's wall,
The one of the dim old forest
Seemeth the best of all.

A WILD RIDE.

Before I begin my story I must tell you that I am a commercial traveler, born and bred, so to speak, to the business.

I have my wits about me, and, as I often happen to have a good many valuable articles also, I have need of them.

I am an Englishman—English to the backbone—and live on roast beef, bottled ale and old port wine. I am one of the men who don't dream and don't fancy.

When I see a thing I see it. When I hear a thing I hear it. And what I saw on one particular occasion I mean to tell you.

You will not offend me if you doubt it. Nevertheless, I shall, as I said, tell the story.

It was in the year 18—, and the month was May, and the place was England. I had left London five days before, and now I was miles and miles away from it, in the very heart of the country, traveling toward a little town where I had business. It was an old-fashioned inn, and the people were kind and obliging.

Travelers did not stop often at that inn, I suspect, for they were as particular about my meals as though I had been a prodigal son come home for the holidays.

They killed the fatted chicken for me and made much of me altogether; and to crown all, as the train did not stop in time to take me on, as I wanted to go, and as it was only a matter of five miles or so, what did the landlord do but hunt up a rusty old coach that was tucked away in the coach-house, and ordered his man to drive me over that evening. It wasn't an extra, mind you. It was sheer good will. So I shook hands all around, and remembered the chambermaid and the waiter with half a crown each, and off I rode. It was getting dark fast, and the road wound away among the hills in a very romantic sort of a way; why, it made you think of ghosts, if you were a commercial traveler.

"Here's the place," says I to myself, "where the old gentleman of the road would have liked to have met me and my black bag fifty years ago."

A hundred years ago, anyhow, I would not have felt so safe as I do now.

Just then the coach came to a sudden pause.

"Hallo," cried I out of the window, "what's the matter?"

"It's more than I can tell, sir," said the man. "Black Jane has turned sulky; she won't move a step."

With that he began to shout, and crack his whip, I, with my head out of the window watching him, and suddenly the beast started off like mad, and I drew in my face and saw I had company.

While the coach was at a stand-still, a lady and gentleman had slipped in.

They sat on the seat opposite me, and though it was an intrusion, I had not the heart to find fault, for a prettier pair I never saw in my life.

If he was twenty-one years, it was just as much as he could be, and she was not seventeen.

I have seen a pair of china lovers on the mantle-piece the perfect image of what they were, as pretty, and dressed much the same.

His hair was powdered and hers too. She had on a yellow silk, lower in the neck than I would like a daughter of mine to wear it, and her arms would have been bare only for her long kid gloves. She had pearls in her ears and on her throat, and she had just the most innocent little face my two eyes ever rested upon. As for the boy, he had a chocolate velvet coat and white silk stockings, and lace ruffles at his wrists. And they had one large cloak—his, I fancy—cast about the two of them, though it dropped back a bit as they sat down.

"Two young folks going to a fancy ball, perhaps," said I, "and just took a lift on the way."

And I touched my cap to them, and says I:

"Fine evening, sir."

He did not answer me, but she looked at me and stretched out a little white hand.

"Oh, sir," she said, "look out at the back of the coach. I pray you, and tell me if he is gaining on us."

I looked out of the window.

"There's a man on horseback riding up the road," said I, for I saw one.

"Heavens!" said she.

"Courage Betty," said the young fellow. "They shall never part us."

Then I knew it was a runaway match.

"I see how it is," said I. "Keep up your heart, young man. If the young lady like you, she'll stick to you through thick and thin. I'll do my best to help you."

"Oh, heaven!" she cried again. Oh, my darling, I hear the horses feet. There are more of them. Oh, sir, look; tell me."

I looked and saw many armed horsemen following swiftly.

"Closer to my heart, Betty," cried the young man. "My beloved, they come."

He drew his sword.

Among other things he wore a sword.

I pulled my pistol from my pocket.

We all stretched our heads forward, and at that moment the coach turned a rocky point of the road, and I saw we were on the margin of a precipice.

All this time Black Jane had kept up her furious speed, and I saw we were in danger.

"Have a care," cried I.

"Faster!" cried the young man.

Suddenly there came a jolt and a scream from the lady. I heard him say, "At last we die together."

And the coach lay flat on its side—not over the precipice, but on the edge of it.

A man is a little stunned by a thing like

When I'd climbed out of the window and helped old Anthony up with the coach, and coaxed Black Jane to quietness, I remembered that no one else got out of the vehicle, and I looked about in vain for my pretty lovers. They were not there, nor were there any signs of the troop of horsemen I had seen dashing up the hill. They could not have passed us in that narrow path by any possibility.

"We ran a chance for our lives, master," said Anthony. "Yet I'm called a good driver, and Black Jane is the kindest thing I ever saw in harness. Thank God for all His mercies; It's a strange thing we did not go over the cliff."

"But where did they go? I asked.

"Who?" said Anthony.

"The two lovers—the pretty creatures in fancy dress. The people who were after them—where are they?"

"Where are——" began Anthony. Then he turned as pale as death. "All good angels over us!" he cried. "We have ridden with Lady Betty. It's the 10th of May. I might have known better than to try the road to-night. Protect us all. Yes, yes, we've ridden with Lady Betty."

"Who is Lady Betty?" said I. "As pretty a creature as ever I saw, at all events. Who is she?"

Old Anthony stood looking at me and shaking his head.

"It's an old story," he said. "Book-learned folks tell it better than I. But a hundred years ago and more, on this blessed night, my Lady Betty Hope, the prettiest lady, ran off from a country ball with her father's young secretary.

"They put one cloak over their heads, and an old servant drove them, knowing it was worth his life.

"But before they had gone far, behind them came her kinsfolk, armed and ready for vengeance. And when they reached this point they saw that all was over.

"'Better die together than live apart,' he said, holding her close. Then he called out to the servant, 'How goes it?'

'All is lost, sir,' said the man. The horses can't hold up five minutes longer.'

"Then drive over," says he.

The man obeyed orders.

"But ever since that night, sir, as sure as the 10th of May comes around, there's plenty here that will tell you that whoever drives a coach past this road after nightfall won't ride alone.

There's nobody that remembered the night would do it for a kingdom, but I forgot. I'm getting old, and I forget things whiles; and so we've ridden with Lady Betty."

That's the story old Anthony told me, and what went before is what I saw and heard. I'm a solid, sensible man, but facts are facts, and here you have 'em.

Death to Mosquitoes.

A correspondent in Harpers' Bazar writes about a certain demolisher of these pests, as follows:

"With the rest of the world, your writer has suffered greatly from those insatiable summer pests, mosquitoes; but now out of all his agony, he can calmly gather up the shreds of experience, and jot down a few facts that may help some poor mortal.

There is a remedy even for these ills, and it is quite probable that hundreds of your readers now have it in their house, though ignorant of all its uses, and the relief that is lying just at their hands.

The 'Pyrethrum roseum,' or 'Persian camomile,' is the powdered leaf of a harmless flower growing in Caucassian Asia in great profusion, where, for centuries it has been used to rid the natives of unwholsome guests from the insect world. It can be purchased of almost any reliable druggist at about seventy cents per pound all ready prepared for use.

With a finely powdered dust made from these flowers, the mosquito, the house-fly, the wicked flea, and the disgusting Cimex lectularius may all be promptly put to flight or calmly murdered—a murder conferring on the human heart a joy too deep for words; for certainly it is a joy to sit, as I do now, at my writing-table this hot July night, watching the expiring agonies of insects, and rarely feel a retributive sting to warn one of their presence.

In order to enjoy this vengeful, delicious sport, it is only necessary to heap up into a little cone one teaspoonful of the blessed drug pyrethrum, touch it with a lighted match, and watch the thin, blue fine of smoke as it rises to the ceiling and is wafted through the air, changing the busy drone of insect life to a weak wail of insect woe. Pretty soon down they come, plump onto the table and over your paper, spin on their tiny backs, and then sheath their lancets, curl up their hair-like legs, and interest one no more.

Up stairs our little ones sleep unmolested, though there are thousands of mosquitoes in the room; the pests are sick unto death, and cling sadly to the walls, too feeble to think of tapping the rich, warm blood that glows in ruddy little lips just below; the fatal fume of the pyrethrum has settled their business; and while it lingers in the room outsiders are unwilling to make an entry, though the windows are raised and the lattices only half closed.

Gauze bars were long since banished from our beds; indeed, we have not used them for nearly seven years. They are hot, stuffy things at best, and one must be sadly driven to attempt to sleep under such a cover; then, as we all know, the mosquito always finds his way through, no matter how carefully one may tuck up its folds about the couch.

Smoke from the Persian camomile, or its dusty powder, we have found most efficacious, and your readers will bless me when once they try it. The purity of the drug must be assured. This can readily be tested: it must have a bright buff color, be light, readily burn, and have a pleasant tea-like fragrance; one pinch should kill a dozen flies, confined in a bottle, at once: where it fails of these properties it has been adulterated.

In common use in large or breezy rooms, where from great dilution, it fails to tell, it nevertheless produces on insect life, through its volatilized essential oil or resin, undoubted nausea, vertigo, respiratory spasm and paralysis. It acts upon them through the minute spiracles, the breathing tubes that stud the surfaces of their little bodies, and from the delicate network of veins in their tiny wings.

To human beings, so far as I can ascertain, it is entirely innoxious and not disagreeable. That we—a family of eight persons, infants and adults—have lived for several weeks in an atmosphere of pyrethrum dust combined, during this present summer, is sufficient proof of my statement.

To the skeptic, I recommend an interesting experiment. Puff the pyrethrum into a close, warm room, where flies most love to swarm, just after dark, shut the door, and make another visit in thirty minutes. The sight of seeming millions of dead and squirming vermin on the floor will do his heart good—that is if he is human, and not an angel.

Uncle Eph's Mistake.

HE RAISES THE DEUCE LIGHTING HIMSELF TO BED WITH A ROMAN CANDLE.

Th' folks up 'long th' Dyberry thought they'd hev a reg'lar rip-teatin' ole sellybration one Fourth o' July, with fireworks an' all the modern improvements. They got a lot o' skyrockets an Romin candles an' fire-wheels, an' th' durndest passel o' permiskus waste o' good powder th't th' kommittee k'ld lay their han's on ez long ez th' money held out. I s'pose th' ole Dyberry woods hadn't seen sich a time sence th' Indians msty whoop an' howl an' caper round their camp fires.

Th' fireworks went off splendid. I s'pose there was powder 'nuff burnt t' keep th' hull o' Dyberry in ammunition fur a year. Nobody's Romin candles ever roamed pooto th'n these 'up on th' Dyberry. These candles was so hansome like th't some o' Uncle Eph Kimble's folks kep' a cuple of 'em, and stuck one inter a big candle stick on each end o' the mantletree in the sittin' room for a ornament.

Quite a w'ile arter the sellybration Uncle Eph were down the river with some lumber, an' he bought a bar'l of Jones' Philadelfy ale. When the bar'l come, he rolled it inter th' cellar o' his store, and it soon got noised around that they wa'n't never nothing know'd along th' Dyberry t' equal Uncle Eph's ale. One night a lot of fellers was gathered in Uncle Eph's bar, an' they was drinkin' ale pooty durn lively. Uncle Eph hed never drinked any o' Jones' ale afore, an' he was a doin' so thin' a kettle unusual far him, and was a tamperin' with the flowin' bowl hisself. The durn ale is infernal deceivin', and the first thing Uncle Eph knowed he were singing songs with th' boys that none on 'em hed ever heard afore, an' war telling yarns that made 'em all howl. When the olé man started for hum, ez he sez himself, he couldn't a told th' moon from a measure o' oats. The folks hed all gone ter bed an' the house were darker than Ejipt.

"B'gosh t'lmighty!" said Uncle Eph. Ye know it ez nat'ral fur him to say that ez it is fur him to eat, "the ole 'ooman's turned in, and—dont you see—I'm turned out!"

But he got in the house all right; got some matches out of th' tin box under the kitchen mantletree, and went a totterin around on his toes t' find a candle. He couldn't find none in the kitchen, so he got inter the sittin room, struck a match, an' pooty soon see the Romin candles, with ther long wicks a stickin' up on each end o' the mantle.

"B'gosh t'lmighty!" says Uncle Eph, talkin' to himself, 'they didn't leave me no kitchen candle, hey! Then, don' ye see, I'll light one of yer parl'r ones. I ain't goin' ter bed in the dark, b'gosh t'lmighty!"

So he takes one of the Romin candles out'n the candlestick.

"Seems ter me th' ole 'ooman's a puttin a heap o' taller inter her candles lately, don't you see?" said Uncle Eph, recognizing the big size of th' one he had in his hand.

He tetches a match to th' Romin candle an' starts for the bedroom door. He had jest time t' say, "B'gosh t'lmighty! those yer new-fangled candles don't give no more light nor an old fash'n'd taller dip!" when he began t' hear from the fireworks. The candle begun t' spit fire, and Uncle Eph begun t' dance and holler. He'd got ez fur ez "B'gosh t'lmighty!" when "bang!" went a blue ball o' fire ez big ez a coon's head, plum through one o' the winders. One of Uncle Eph's boys—young Doc, I think—heard the rumpus an' come a tearin' down stairs without nothing on but his shirt. Just ez he busted inter th' room, Uncle Eph had the Romin candle p'nted to'ards the door, an' "boom!" went a red ball square agin young Doc's stomick, doublin' him up like a ship knee. Uncle Eph's wife went a running from her bed t' the sittin'-room door, and when she see Eph in the middle 'v a blaze of fire, a dancin' around the room, hollern "B'gosh t'lmighty!" and duckin' an' bobbin' his head every time th' candle spit a ball, she know'd just what were up, and she tumbled down an' almos' died a laughin'. When the candle gin out she got up and went an' struck a light. She k'd hardly see in the sittin room fur the smoke, and she said it smelt like the Fourth o' July fall over agin. She found Uncle Eph settin in the middle of th' floor lookin' around kind o' lost like, ez if he didn't exactly know whether th' Judgment Day hed rolled around, or he'd ben struck b' lightnin'. Bime by he sort o' got a glimmer of what 'd ben goin' on. He looked up at his wife and sed, ez mild ez if he were askin' her fur another cup o' coffee at breakfast:

"Say, b'gosh t'lmighty, ole 'ooman, did you make them air candles? An' ef you did, what the devil did yer go an' put inter the taller?"

A Remarkable Blind Man.

There died in the summer of 1880, in the town of Burlington, Conn., James Goodsell, who was from his birth, during a life of nearly ninety years, totally blind. In early childhood, however, Mr. G. said that the darkness was in a few instances broken by faint glimmerings of light. Of four children, he and his sister were blind, the others could see. The sister, though at first possessed of ordinary vision, soon by a mysterious change, became wholly deprived of sight. In absolute darkness, the ordinary employments of a work-day life would seem impracticable, but this blind man would swing an ax with the dexterity of a woodsman, and actually felled trees; he was an accomplished grain thresher, and would frequently go alone a distance of two miles to thresh for the Burlington farmers, climbing the mows to throw down the grain; could hoe corn or garden stuffs as well as anybody, having no trouble to distinguish the weeds; he would set a hundred bean poles with more accuracy then most persons who can see, he would lead hay beautifully, and was so good a mechanic that he manufactured yokes and other farm articles with success. He had an excellent memory and was an authority on facts and dates. He could generally tell the time of day or night within a few minutes. One instance is given when he slept over one day and awoke at evening, thinking it was morning. For once he ate his supper for breakfast, but when informed of his mistake, slept another twelve hours so as to get straight again. He was familiar with forest trees, and knew just where to go for any timber he desired. He could direct a man where to find a chestnut, a maple or an oak, and the children where to go for berries. He was a good mathematician, and could compute accurately and rapidly. In olden days he was quite musically inclined, and, like most blind people, he had a genius in that direction. He was at one time leader of the Presbyterian choir in that place. For two years he and the blind sister kept house together, though she and the other members of the family have long since passed away. To crown all, he possessed one of the happiest of dispositions, and was ever genial and cheerful. To this end his generally excellent health must have largely contributed.

The Garden Spider.

The writer has often tested the intelligence and perseverance of the geometric spider by the following, it must be admitted, aggravating experiment. Taking a piece of paper and rolling it between his fingers, he has thrown it into the web, taking care that it is not heavier than the weight of a fly. The spider runs along with alacrity towards his supposed prey, and soon discovering its unpalatable nature, carefully disentangles it, and drops it clear of the web to the ground by stretching out his first pair of legs, just as a human being might reach out his arm. He then turns to his place in the centre, and in a moment or so a piece of paper is thrown into another part of the web. The spider acts as before, and will do so, without much variation, a few times. The fifth or sixth time he rushes at the paper with an appearance of anger, or runs an inch or two along the strands as if enraged, and then back again; pauses a moment or so, as if to recover his equanimity, and then goes briskly to his disappointment, and again carefully disentangles the paper. All these movements, from the evident feeling and intelligence shown, are full of interest to the observer of nature, and they are sufficiently varied in individuals to make the experiment worth trying any number of times. Occasionally, for example, the spider, after he has been deceived a few times, will stretch out all his feet upon the strands, without moving from his place, and shake his web angrily; or he will jerk the paper out much as one might flip it away from between the finger and thumb, with a decisive sharpness very significant of passion. After awhile the spider will give up attacking his supposed prey. Throw in a dozen, twenty, thirty bits of paper, and he will remain passive; but give up your sport for five or ten minutes, and you will again find him busily at work, going from piece to piece until the entire web is set free.

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. All interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

Yankee.

The word "Yankee" is older than the New England Colonies, and was used by Samoset in his historical "Welcome, Englishmen." "Welcome Yenghese" was what he actually said; "Yen-hese" being the nearest approach the Indian tongue could make to the word "English." Yankees and English are synonymous terms; and the word was applied to the northern English colonists by the Indians to distinguish them from the French on one side, and the Dutch on the other. The latter people soon adopted the term; and it was readily accepted by the New-Englanders themselves. It was never considered a term of reproach, but rather one of honor, by the colonists. The young "Macaroni" who came over as subalterns in the British army took the same delight in the opprobrious use of the epithet that our Southern brethren did at the commencement of the "late unpleasantness;" but both learned on closer acquaintance to have more respect for the Yankees.

Choice Extracts from Druggists.

"We know the value of malt, hops, calisaya, and iron composing 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

"The largest bottle and best medicine."

"The best blood purifier on our shelves."

"Our best people take 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Sure cure for chills and liver difficulties."

This same truth is a naked and open daylight, that does not show the masks and mummeries and triumphs of the world half so stately and daintly as candle-lights. Truth may perhaps come to the price of a pearl that showest best by day, but it will not rise to the price of a diamond or carbuncle that showest best in varied lights. A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure. Doth any man doubt that if there were taken out of men's minds vain opinions, flattering hopes, false valuations, imaginations as one would, and the like, but it would leave the minds of a number of men poor shrunken things, full of melancholy and indisposition and unpleasing to themselves.—[Lord Bacon.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

In the struggle of life the hero and the coward, the conqueror and the conquered, need sympathy equally. Often the mind which upholds others needs itself to be upheld; the honest heart that seems to be bold and true is fainting from secret sorrow, dying from some little wound which sympathy would staunch.

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 a bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

Some birds are always robin.

When a man gets tight the devil generally gets loose.

When dogs die do they go to "the happy land of canine?"

"On bended knee; or, the missing collar button," would be a good title for a work on profane history.

Persons who jump at conclusions are persons who leave the theatre before the curtain is half way down.

"Stealing the livery stable of heaven to serve the devil," is the way an honest Michigan deacon got it off in church.

A city missionary was asked the cause of his poverty. "Principally because I have preached so much without notes," he said.

"I am very much afraid of lightning," said a pretty lady. "And well you may be," said a despairing lover, "as your heart is made of steel."

The product of Bodie—great mines, little mince and saloons; or in other words Ophir holes, gopher holes and loafer holes. The latter predominate.

A New Jersy colored man whose wife had left him, said: "She would come back if I frowed her some sugar; but I ain't frowing no sugar, do you heah?"

An exchange says; "Give a girl long eyelashes and small hands and she will put up with number six feet and marry all around a curly headed girl with ones-and-a half."

Every donkey thinks himself fit to stand with the king's horse; every girl thinks she could keep house better than her mother; but thoughts are not facts, for the sprat thought himself a herring, but the fisherman knew better.

When a country editor, who is struggling along trying to raise a large family and build up a town on an income of five hundred dollars a year, discovers that a baseball pitcher hauls in four thousand dollars for the season it makes him sit down on a roller box and think.

To be treasured up not in one soul but in many souls—to live not your own life but in hundreds of others perhaps wiser, purer, happier than yours, to be woven in with the warp and woof of boyhood's strong firm web, to gleam and flash in the finer, subtler texture of girlhood, this is the teacher's great reward.

At Minneapolis, Minn., alone, the enormous amount of 300,000 cords of sawdust accumulates annually at the mills, which shows that saw-mill men would make a handsome profit on this material if they could only readily sell all of it. Heretofore, however, on account of the difficulty of disposing of sawdust at any price to any considerable extent, great quantities of it have been thrown into the streams on which the mills stand, and in many instances have tended to seriously obstruct navigation.

Another insignificant material for which good use has been found is waste rubber. The process, recently patented in Germany, where many tons of this rubber has been annually thrown away, is thus described: "The rubber waste is subjected to distillation in an iron vessel over a free fire, with the aid of super-heated steam. The lighter oils which come over first are separated from the heavier products. The latter, when thickened and vulcanized in the usual manner, are found to possess all the good qualities of fresh rubber."

Furnace slag is a third common material that is being profitably utilized. An American inventor named Wood has discovered how to make from slag bricks that are superior to those of the usual kind. For this purpose he converts the slag into sand as it is run from the blast furnace, and mingles with it a certain amount of selenitic lime. He likewise uses this slag in the making of concrete, cement and mortar. Mr. Wood has also succeeded in employing slag, reduced to a fibrous condition, as a non-conductor of heat, in clothing steam pipes and boilers. A notable use has also been made of slag in the manufacture of glass bottles and glass railway sleepers. Glass bottles containing this material are said to be stronger than those made of flint glass. A quite recent means of utilizing slag has been discovered by Mr. Frederic Ransome, who can make from it a firm, white cement of the greatest durability.

Curious notions of morality appear to prevail among certain inhabitants of the Orkney Isles, who, when a wreck has taken place on their coast, are, it seems, in the habit of carrying off for their own use everything they can lay their predatory hands on. This occurred recently when the bark Poolscar of Liverpool was wrecked out twelve miles from Kirkwall, the capital of Orkney. The enterprising natives confiscated coils of rope, cases of wine, spars, ship fittings, and stores, so that at the sale of what was left of the unfortunate vessel "there was not exposed so much as a tin of meat, pot of paint, ship's compass, clock, or any other of the small odds and ends generally sold upon such occasions." So clean a sweep had been made that even the legs of the cabin table had been sawn across close to the floor, and the table bodily carried away. These people, who consider plundering a wreck perfectly legitimate, are reported to be a "highly moral" race. An ordinary case of theft is hardly known, and the only reason why they make an exception in favor of the flotsam and jetsam of a stranded vessel is that "they still hold by the old principle that a wreck is a gift from Providence."

A Bostonian traveling in England gives his experiences in the Transcript of English extortion, as follows: I write it with the greatest unction and emphasis after my name, whenever I am asked to record it, "U. S. A;" not that I love England the less, but my country more and more: and I so regret that I forgot to bring with me an American flag and at least one torpedo for the approaching Fourth. But I have found, whatever the honour and privilege of my birthright, it is not an economy to be recognized here as an American. And recognized as such, at once, you inevitably are. "But how did you know I am an American?" I said to a chatty, intelligent Englishman, who, like myself had possessed a doorway to get out of quite heavy shower." "I should not have known," he answered, "had you not spoken." And so my speech "betrayeth" me everywhere, and everywhere at a cost. An American is, by the average Englishman, supposed to carry a railway in one pocket, and at least a silver mine in the other, with an oil well as a reserve. He knows you. He spots you. You are his gudgeon. Wherever you go you hear of the foolish things Americans have done, until the English idea is that the American exists simply as a shilling and sixpence dropping machine, and he keeps the machine well at it. They talk of ducks shedding water, but one sheds these silver favors at every step. It is no economy to be known as an American. It is a luxury, an extravagance, an imprudence.

"Don't I Told You So?"

One night last week a jolly old German farmer rode to Chestnut Hill after a physician for his wife, who was very sick. He dismounted from his horse in front of a saloon just as the boys inside had begun to make merry over the first keg of beer. He approached and lookhd cautiously around the scene. The foaming glasses were held high enough above the heads of the revelers, as one of the number pronounced a toast appropriate to the occasion.

The silent watcher licked his lips and wished his errand had been one not requiring so much dispatch. He was turning reluctantly away when the crowd saw him.

"Hello!" they shouted, "there's Fritz. Bring him in!"

He was hauled up to the bar, all the time protesting.

"Poys, I was in a quick hurfy. Old vooman sick like the tuyval. I was come mit her doctor, sooner as lightnin'!"

"Well, you can take some beer while your'e here, and kill two birds with one stone," was the reply.

"Yas, I kill von chicken mit a couple of shtones, und der old vooman die mitout der toctor; I ton't forget myself of it, eh?"

'Oh, she won't die. You don't get beer often, and you've got the old woman all the time. Fill 'em up again."

"Yaas, I got her all der time, but exposin she go ded, I ton't got her anymore somedimes. It's better to go mit ter toctor, seldom right away."

But he didn't go. As one glass after another was forced upon him by the reckless crowd, the object of his errand was floated further from his vision, until it was carried out of his mind altogether, and his voice, untinged with anxiety, joined in the drinking songs, and arose above all others.

Thus he was found by his son, late that night. The boy grasped him by the sleeve and said:

"Fader, come home."

Fritz turned, and at the sight of his son a great fear arose in his mind, swept away the fumes of beer, and brought him to a sense of the situation. In an awe-struck tone he said:

"Yawcub, how you was come here? Vas tomedings ter matter?"

"Yaw," replied the boy.

"Vell, shpoke up about it. Vas ter ole vooman—vas your mudder—is she dade? I can shtand dem best. Don't keep your fader in expense, poy. Shpid it out. Vas ve a couple of orphanses, Yawcub?"

"Nein," answered the boy, "you vas anuder. A leedle baby coom mit ter house."

Fritz was overcome for a moment, but finally stammered out:

"Vos dot so? I expose it vas not so soon already. Vell—vell, in der middle of life, we don't know what's to turn next up. Men exposes. Fill up der glasses."

The boy ventured to ask the old man why he had not seen the doctor.

"Vy, did she want a doctor? Petter she tole me so. I get him pooty quick. Never mind. I safe more as ten dollars doctor bill on dat baby. Dot was a good shild. Fill up der glasses. Whooray for dat little huck baby! Ve von't go home till yesterday."

Fritz got home at last, and was in Chestnut Hill again in a couple of days after some medicine. The boys couldn't get him into the saloon this time; he said to them:

"You bet I tend to my peesness now."

An exchange makes this suggestion for business men; "In all towns where a newspaper is published, every business man ought to advertise in it, even if it is nothing more than a card stating his name and the kind of business he is engaged in. It helps sustain a paper, and lets the people out at a distance know that the town is full of business men. The paper finds its way into thousands of places where handbills cannot reach. A card in a paper is a traveling sign-board, and can be seen by every reader. Think of these things and let your light shine."

An Established Remedy. Down's Elixir has been widely known and used as a cough remedy for fifty years. No other cough medicine has stood the test half this length of time. The people stand by that which is good.

The British Medical Journal says that garlic has always had a great reputation among anti-hydrophobia remedies, and is found as a principal integral portion in a large number of formulæ long kept secret. A young man bitten by a mad dog was shut up in a loft. In his delirium he seized upon some bundles of dried garlic, ate geeedily of it, fell into a deep sleep, and awoke calm and cured.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffling and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

A man, his wife and daughter went into a Hartford lawyer's office recently to arrange for a mutual separation. The man had some education, but the woman was evidently illiterate. The lawyer asked what the difficulty between them was. The man replied "incompatibility of temper." The wife and daughter fell back in their chair, threw up their hands and exclaimed, "Good God, only hear him!"

Clear head and voice, easy breathing, sweet breath, perfect smell, taste and hearing, no cough, no distress.—These are conditions brought about in catarrh by the use of Sandford's Radical Cure. Complete treatment for $1.

SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.
"An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."
IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.
The catalogue states exactly what the papers are: When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.
The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $825. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!
A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.
By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.
In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health, Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.
While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w.

THIS PAPER may be found on file at GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BUREAU (10 Spruce Street), where advertising contracts may be made for it in NEW YORK.

Ayer's
Cathartic Pills
Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.
AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.
As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.
While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

THE NATIONAL BEREAVEMENT.

The President is dead.

A great man has fallen.

Fifty millions of people mourn.

Between sunrise and noon on the second day of last July, a shock of horror and grief passed over the land, when the terrible news came that President Garfield had been shot down by an assassin, and that his life was trembling in the balance. After the first thrill of sorrow had passed away people were rejoiced to know that he was still alive and that there was a reasonable hope of his recovery. The daily bulletins were watched and read with the keenest interest, and the national heart beat with hope and confidence, or was depressed with foreboding, as the news from his bedside was favorable or otherwise. He seemed to be slowly improving for a few weeks when the dreaded crisis came, and for two days he trembled on the verge of the tomb. Many days of terrible suffering ensued, and then as a forlorn hope, it was decided to remove the patient from the malarial atmosphere of Washington to the ocean beach at Long Branch. The preparations were skillfully and carefully made, and the train with its precious freight sped to the cottage by the sea, flying over the rails at fifty miles an hour. The salt sea breezes revived him. Hope was again in the ascendency. But the fatal relapse came; the angel of death summoned his own, and upon the eightieth day of his sufferings, when the world was becoming hushed in sleep, within hearing of the sullen and mournful surges of the Atlantic, the immortal spirit of James A. Garfield left its poor, frail, shattered casket of clay and ascended to the Father on high.

President Garfield was a typical son, husband and father. The old gray-haired mother, bowed with years, mourns the loss of a high-minded dutiful son, that noble wife is bereaved of a kind and devoted husband, those grief-stricken children have seen an affectionate father laid low by the hand of an assassin. But the President was more than these. He was a successful teacher, a brilliant orator, an able debater, an heroic general, a wise counsellor and trusted legislator, a man of great intellectual force and varied scholastic attainments. In every position he was called to fill, he was found equal to its responsibilities. By natural gifts, by acquired learning, by long experience, he was finely equipped to fill with honor the exalted position to which the American people had summoned him. And he peculiarly personified the aspirations and genius of our Republic. His life's history exemplified the fact that in America the humblest boy may become the greatest man. Born in poverty, nurtured in obscurity, reared in want, he fought the good fight from youth to manhood, and became teacher, soldier, congressman, senator and President. His biography reads like a dream. James A. Garfield, therefore, belonged not to his family alone, but to the entire country. When, with uplifted hand, he took the oath of office upon inauguration day, he became President, not of a party, but of all the people. He was then the representative head of the Republic. And when Guiteau's bullet sped to its hiding place, the ball was aimed at the heart of every American citizen. We are all mourners in this sad hour. We can only bow to the decree of Providence with meekness and pray that He may sanctify this national bereavement to the ultimate welfare of our beloved country.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

EXPORTS.

The exports of domestic breadstuffs during August, from sixteen customs districts, amounted to $23,547,552. Last year they amounted to $31,731,866.

THE ASSASSIN.

The cell now occupied by Guiteau is in the north wing of the jail. The window which faced west has been walled up to within an inch or two of the top, leaving but a small space for the light to enter.

GEN. BRADY IN CANADA.

Ex-Second Assistant Postmaster General Brady has gone to Canada, taking his family with him. This fact is looked upon as somewhat significant, in view of the impending investigation. It is believed by some that he will not return very soon.

FRAUDULENT PENSION CLAIMS.

Commissioner of Pensions Dudley thinks he has discovered additional evidence of dishonesty in the existence of an extensive ring in the pension bureau, the business of which was to push through fraudulent claims. He expects to make some startling developments.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Work on the Washington monument has been stopped owing to the delay in furnishing the iron frame work which supports the elevator. The height already reached is 250 feet. During the month ending Sept. 2, twenty feet were added to the height of the monument.

PERSONAL.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Elmer is expected to return to the city Friday. He will be acting postmaster general, as Judge Tyner started on a month's vacation.

Mrs. Lincoln, widow of President Lincoln, will not visit Washington, but remain during the winter with her son, Secretary Robert Lincoln, until the 1st of November. During the last month Mrs. Lincoln's health has very much improved.

EXAGGERATED.

Gov. Sheldon, of New Mexico, in a letter to Secretary Kirkwood, writes that the Indian troubles have been greatly exaggerated. As a matter of precaution, however, Sheldon argues that arms be sent out to arm companies of citizens that have been formed lest the Indians that have been fighting might seek to join Nana in his raids.

GUITEAU'S NEW CELL.

Guiteau is now confined in a cell made expressly for him in the southern corridor, near the rotunda of the jail, which cannot be seen from the outside. It is of brick with a cast-iron door lined with plank, and is bullet-proof. A grated opening near the top admits light. Only two sentinels in the corridor can see him. He is much pleased at his new quarters, though somewhat nervous from his late fright. He sleeps well, and has gained a dozen pounds since his incarceration. He now weighs about 145 pounds.

MRS. SUSAN MAY BONAPARTE.

Mrs. Susan May Bonaparte, widow of Col. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte and daughter-in-law of the late Mme. Patterson Bonaparte, died at her residence in Baltimore, Sept. 15th. Her two sons, Col. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte and Charles Jerome Bonaparte, were present at her bedside. The immediate cause of her death was paralysis. Mrs. Bonaparte was the daughter of Benjamin Williams, Esq. She was born in 1812, and was married to Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte on the 31 of November, 1829. Mme. Bonaparte was opposed to the match, as she wished that her son should be wedded to one of the royal family in France. The deceased's husband was the only son of Mme. Bonaparte, and was born at Comberwell, England, July 7, 1805. He died June 17, 1870, and was buried in London Park cemetery.

NATIONAL BANK ACCOUNTS.

A statement has been published to the effect that the Treasury of the United States has determined to make a re-examination and revision of the accounts of the national banks, similar to the revision of the accounts of the State banks, now in progress under the direction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; that this re-examination will probably extend as far back as 1865, and that it is expected to result in the collection of an immense sum of money which the national banks have, inadvertently or otherwise, failed to pay to the government as a tax on the average amount of their deposits. With reference to the above statement Treasurer Gilfillan said to-day that he was not aware that the national banks had been making improper, incomplete, or erroneous deposit returns. On the contrary, he believed they had been complying with the regulations of the Treasurer's office relative to deposits. The fact that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has concluded to adopt in substance, and to apply to the State banks, the methods and requirements so long in force in the Treasurer's office, and in accordance with which the national banks have for fifteen years reported their average taxable deposits, shows that whatever reason there may now be for investigating the deposit returns of the private banks does not apply generally to the deposit returns of the national banks. It is safe to say that there is no occasion for a general overhauling of the national bank accounts, and that it will not be done. It is understood, however, that some particular cases will, perhaps, claim the attention of the Treasurer and receive an overhauling of their returns.

THE STAR ROUTE CASE.

The grand jury, which met in this city on Monday last, was on Wednesday discharged by the district attorney until Oct. 3. This action on the part of Col. Corkhill occasions a great deal of comment. His reason, as stated to the jury, was that there was nothing of importance for them to do. It is well known, on the contrary, that there are a large number of cases ready for the consideration of the grand jury, among others the star route. It was the plan of the managers of these cases to have everything else got out of the way before they were commenced. Col. Cook and Mr. Gibson stated last week that they were ready and anxious to begin just as soon as the grand jury could give them time.

All of the gentlemen interested in prosecuting these cases for the government are at this time out of the city—James Emer, McVeagh, Cook, and Gibson. It is openly suggested to-night that District Attorney Corkhill took advantage of this fact to postpone the hearing. It is believed by many that his sympathies are with Brady. He certainly could have done nothing to accommodate the latter more than he has by thus giving him another month in which to prepare a defense. Another objection to the postponement is the fact that it throws the work of investigation over nearer to the assembling of congress.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

A telegram received at the war department from Gen. Sheridan, dated Chicago, Sept. 10, has been referred to the Indian bureau. In it Sheridan says: "The Indian troubles in Arizona are confined to the White Mountain Utes, and there is as yet no reason to believe that they will spread. Bradley has gone toward Fort Apache with two companies of cavalry and three of infantry, and will be soon joined by McKenzie with six companies of the 4th regiment. Additional companies of infantry are being collected at Wingate, and the nine companies of infantry at Uncompahgre will be sent there if necessary. It is thought best to hold them in the Ute county a little longer, although the Utes seem to be going to a new place all right. Gen. Pope has been of the opinion that he controls sufficient troops to protect New Mexico and help Gen. Wilcox. If I get the slightest information that will lead me to believe that the trouble will spread, I will send the whole of the 3d cavalry and one regiment of infantry from the department of the Platte, one from Texas, and one from Dakota, and one more can be pushed out from the department of Missouri. We cannot prudently spare these forces, but will take the chances, as cold weather is coming on and the Indians will keep quiet in the north."

Secretary Kirkwood has requested Gen. Sheridan, through the war department, that if a movement of troops becomes necessary to leave the troops now guarding the Ute Indians until the last are sent away. The Indian bureau regards the outbreak at Fort Apache as temporary, and thinks the trouble is now all over.

THE public schools of Tecumseh will be closed next Monday.

SUGGESTIONS IN TIME.

What a Woman of Prominence in the Medical World has to say About Her Sex.

Synopsis of a Lecture Delivered by Mrs. Doctor Kenton, Before the Woman's Society of New England.

(Home Journal, New York.)

In all ages of the world, poets, scientists and men of prominence have looked with enthusiasm often akin to reverence upon women; but it is only within the last few years that she has begun to assume her right place, not only in society, but with the world in general. Why so desirable an end should have been so long delayed it is difficult to understand; but, that it has at last come is certainly cause for gratitude. In her social sphere, in her mental development and especially in her physical improvement woman has shown wonderful advancement and such as astonishes the world.

Let us consider for a moment the possibilities which present themselves to every woman. When the body is healthy, beauty is certain to appear, even in features and forms once plain; indeed it is the only known way to become beautiful, and all other preparations, powders, stays and laces are contemptible delusions. With health and beauty in all their attractiveness a new life dawns.

ENJOYMENT BEGINS,

and all the luxurious attendants of a healthy body come forth. The maiden feels the glorious possibilities of life; the mother becomes conscious of the grandeur of maternity and the joys of a family. All this is not only a woman's privilege—it is her duty, and it embodies the highest definition of "woman's rights."

A few weeks ago, I received a call from a charming lady, whose earnest face clearly showed that she desired advice and assistance. Upon questioning her, she stated that she believed she was suffering from a paralyzed liver, and wished to know if I could in anyway aid her recovery. Now imperfect as her statement was in regard to the disease which troubled her, there is no doubt that are suffering to-day from similar troubles, who do not recognize their cause so nearly as the lady did. Paralysis means death of the member paralyzed, and torpidity of the liver is the first stage of its dissolution. This is one of the most serious questions that can arise in the experience of any woman; for a torpid and diseased liver cannot be cured at once, and it carries with it the elements of disease to all the other parts of the system. With an imperfect liver, biliousness, langour, a sense of bearing down, constipation, displacements, uterine troubles and the thousand ills which are coupled in their train come thick and fast. Then follow impure blood and all the evils which an imperfect circulation cause. A derangement of the kidneys or liver causes disease in the organs which adjoin them just as certainly as a bad peach injures the other peaches in the basket. Not only this, but when these organs are in a healthy state, they restore and keep in order any irregularity which may occur in the lower portion of the body. No woman was ever seriously sick for any length of time when such was the case. No serious inflammation occurs when the blood is pure and no blood can be impure when the liver or kidneys are in perfect order.

I have seen very much of the troubles and ills to which women have been subjected, and I have learned to sympathize while I have sought to relieve. In endeavoring to carry relief I have tried to be free from prejudice and have in view but one end, namely—to help those who are suffering; and I feel it is my privilege to-day to state that I believe there is a means whereby those women who are suffering can obtain complete relief, and those who are in health be continued in its enjoyment. A few years ago a prominent and wealthy gentleman residing in Rochester, N. Y., was given up to die of Bright's disease of the kidneys. By means of a simple and purely vegetable remedy he was restored to perfect health, and has since been the means of saving the lives of many others. So efficient did prove in the case of many well-known men, that it began also to be used by ladies, and to-day thousands of women in all parts of the land, owe their restored health and continued happiness to the wonderful power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Mr. Warner has the written testimony of hundreds of the best ladies of the land, enthusiastically praising the remedy, and thankfully expressing their gratitude for health. These letters are sacred, and cannot be given to the public, but they overwhelmingly verify all the facts above stated. Nature has given woman a delicate, watchful, alert instinct, and she has found this remedy to be what her sex for years has needed, to restore and maintain the perfection of nature. She resents the imputation that she is bound to suffer all the ills that attack her. She recognizes that suffering is but an incident of her existence, and that this incident is wholly within her control, if she can find the necessary helps which nature provides! The changeable character of our climate, the oftimes exacting and enervating customs of society, of fashion and of necessity, all conspire to impair the vitality of women. If we add to these the exhausting duties of motherhood, and the mental anxiety for the success of her husband in all his laudable ambitions, which play upon her energies, is it surprising that thus burdened, she should break down under the physical strain? By no means—on the contrary the wonder is that she has maintained her physical strength as she has. The

of physical degeneration is impure blood. The performance of the natural functions of womanhood and motherhood is not a disease, nor should it be so treated. Disease is the result of the transgression of physical laws by our ancestors or by ourselves, and the natural coursings of the blood should not be considered. If, however the blood be impure, it is certain to produce its poisonous effects in the parts with which it comes in contact.

TECUMSEH, MICH. SEPT. 22, 1881.

THE SAD NEWS.

The news of President Garfield's death did not reach Tecumseh until Tuesday morning, as we have no night operator at the telegraph office, but upon the opening of the office in the morning, the fatal message came, and the sad intelligence soon became generally known throughout the village. A feeling of deep gloom settled upon the community and every man seemed to feel as though he had lost a personal friend. Business was suspended for a time. The different business houses of the village were speedily trimmed with appropriate emblems of mourning, the church bells tolled a requiem for the departed, and a public meeting was called at the Opera House in the evening to give expression to our feelings upon the great calamity that has befallen the nation. This meeting was held as announced, a report of which appears elsewhere. It was resolved to hold further commemorative services on the day of burial, and a committee was selected to arrange a program for that occasion.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

GREAT events are crowding upon us.

HARRY SNELL is home for a short visit.

MRS. NELLIE TEMPLE RAMSEY is visiting home and friends,

COUGHS and colds are very prevalent in this section now.

OSCAR HECK is clerking at Gainsley's New Dry Goods Store.

BREWER & Co. are exhibiting their tile machines at the State Fair this week.

O. W. BEAN has returned from a week's trip in the northern part of the state.

Do not forget that the stores close at 7:30 o'clock next Monday evening and after.

THOS. FISH brought his wife here from Buffalo, N. Y., and buried her on Tuesday.

WE much regret to learn that Mr. H. Schreoder is very sick. Hope he will be better soon.

MRS. MARKS and daughter Tennie, of Hillsdale, have been the guests of Mrs. E. Hand, for the past few days.

WHITENACK, BORDINE & Co. have a new show case for guns and ammunition, which makes a very fine show.

DR. C. M. WOODWARD has received the honor of an appointment as assistant surgeon for the Yorktown Battalion.

OUR merchants wish the community to bear in mind that the stores close at 7:30 o'clock next Monday evening and after.

WEB AND SEATON ANDERSON returned from New York last Saturday evening. Their new goods are arriving daily.

THE Rev. G. E. Wilson, of Clinton, will fill the Presbyterian pulpit next Sabbath morning in exchange with the pastor.

WE were in Manchester last Friday and made Mat Blosser a short call. Mat is well pleased with the present outlook for a heavy fall trade.

F. C. KING, of LaPorte, Ind., paid his Tecumseh friends a visit last Tuesday. A press of business prevented his remaining only one day.

ALL the dry goods, clothing and shoe stores close up at 7:30 o'clock, commencing next Monday evening and continue until Apr. 1st., '82

REV. G. W. PUDDEFOOT was in town over Sunday, and favored his old townsmen with two good sermons. He is prospering finely at White Cloud.

REV. R. S. PARDINGTON has been away for a few days attending conference. We are glad to see that he has been returned to his Tecumseh charge for another year.

COL. SPOFFORD returned last week from his visit to DesMoines. He went to Iowa to attend the State Fair, having missed but one session of the Iowa Fair in twenty-two years.

MRS. P. D. EDDY has returned from a seven weeks' visit among her old friends in Ogden, some of whom she had not seen before in twenty-five years. She reports having enjoyed a splendid time.

DR. HAUSE has his arrangements perfected for serving oysters in any style at a moments notice. He has a very nice place and any one who does not believe he serves a good stew just drop in and try one.

TECUMSEH was visited yesterday very unexpectedly by a golden-haired young gentleman from Eaton Rapids, and if reports from Adrian are true, he had better take lessons in horsemanship, or in future go on foot.

JUDGE TURPIE, of Indianapolis, has been sojourning a few days with his brother-in-law, Rev. J. Phelps of this village. His visit was cut short by a telegram from Gov. Porter summoning him home on important official business.

REV. J. PHELPS will preach a sermon next Sunday morning at St. Peter's church appropriate to the present national calamity.

AT the regular meeting of Macon Grange, to be held Sept. 23d, there will be a social and tea party. All members of the Grange are requested to be present as business of importance will come before the meeting.

C. MEAD, Sec.

DR. R. B. HOUSE has just added to his already well furnished apartments one of Mark's "Operating" Chairs.—It can be changed from a chair to a bed in a moment and can be raised and lowered as wanted. It will be a very useful article of furniture in a doctor's office.

JOHN H. GOFF, of Adrian, has gone to Sault St. Marie and hung out his shingle for clients. Mr. Goff has established the reputation of being one of the best young attorneys in the county, and we exceedingly regret his departure. We wish him success however, in his new home, and feel confident that he will achieve it.

WE dropped in to Gainley's new dry goods store last evening, and was surprised to see the stock on hand and especially the taste displayed in showing them. Mr. Gainsley has one of the neatest looking stores in Tecumseh. He comes to our town well recommended and we trust our people will welcome him as they should.

THE State Convention of Universalists will hold its annual session on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week at Portland. The committee have arranged a suitable program for each of the days. Tuesday—Occasional sermon, business session, sermon. Wednesday — Conference meeting, business session, the Sunday school, our state work. Thursday—Praise meeting, business session, communion sermon by Dr. Rexford, of Detroit; business session, sermon.

FRANK JOHNSON, whom we all remember as a Tecumseh boy, is now running the Wabash Restaurant in Toledo, is doing a splendid business and keeping the finest place of that kind in the city. He is located right in the central portion of the city on Summit st., and has all the conveniences to make every one welcome and happy who may come to see him. His Billiard Parlors are elegant, his Restaurant in splendid shape and his sample rooms the finest in Toledo.

THE LENAWEE COUNTY FAIR.

This local festival promises to be one of uncommon interest this year. In the first place, the premium list is a large and liberal one, opening the deor for the greatest competition in the numerous divisions and classes.—It cannot, it seems to us, fail to draw out a display in every department of the exhibition worthy of the intelligence, taste, skill and enterprise of the farmers, manufacturers, tradesmen and artisans of one of the foremost counties, not only of our own proud commonwealth, but of our great nation. The affairs of the society are in the hands of active and efficient officers, and everything is being done to make the fourth annual fair pleasant and profitable to both exhibitors and visitors. Oh, let everybody get ready, first to exhibit something nice in the department of horses, cattle sheep, swine, fowls, dairy products, grain, fruit, farm implements or domestic manufactures, and second to be on hand themselves on one or more of the days of the coming festival, from the 26th to the 30th of September, both days inclusive.—Hudson Gazette.

RESPECTS TO THE DEAD.

A Meeting of Condolence Held at the Opera House, Tuesday Evening.

At the request of many citizens, Col. Fitzsimmons, President of the village, called a public meeting at the Opera House Tuesday evening. Notwithstanding the shortness of the notice, there was a large and respectable gathering assembled to take appropriate action upon the national calamity which has befallen us in the death of President Garfield.

The meeting was called to order by Col. Fitzsimmons, and upon motion he was elected chairman for the evening. Dr. L. G. North was chosen secretary. A program of exercises consisting of music, short speeches, resolutions, etc., was then presented, in the order given below.

Prayer by Rev. J. Phelps.

Music, Hymn, by the choir, led by J. S. Strong.

A committee on resolutions was appointed by the chair, consisting of Rev. C. E. Conley, J. P. Slayton, Dr. R. B. House, H. W. Conkling, and J. Root, and the committee retired to draft resolutions for presentation to the meeting.

Brief addresses were then made by S. C. Stacy, E. B. Wood, Wm. Hayden, Prof. Fairfield, Col. Fitzsimmons and Rev. H. Shepard.

Then followed music by the choir.

The audience was then favored with another series of short addresses by John R. Clark, Rev. C. E. Conley, Dr. R. B. House, J. H. Osborn, T. E. Gridley, Rev. W. G. Puddefoot and Rev. Wm. Grandy.

The committee on resolutions then presented their report as follows:

RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS—In the providence of Almighty God, the worst fears of the nation are realized in the death of its chief magistrate, James A. Garfield, therefore

Resolved, That while we cannot divine the purpose of the Supreme ruler of the Universe in allowing the removal by death of one who seemed so eminently fitted to discharge the high and responsible duties of the office of President of the United States, we do now record our unwavering faith in His wisdom and goodness, and our sincere belief that He doeth all things well.

Resolved, That words are inadequate to express our sympathy for the stricken relatives now bereft of a son so dutiful, a husband so devoted and a father so noble.

Resolved, That in Mrs. Garfield we recognize an ideal type of heroic, christian womanhood; and believe the example of her enduring devotion to her suffering husband during these months of dreadful suspense will make the American home better and holier, while recollection of her shall remain.

Resolved, That we are truly grateful to those of our fellow citizens, who have so appropriately and beautifully draped their places of business in token of their sorrow for this sad event; and that it is our earnest wish that these emblems of national sorrow remain until the sacred remains of our President are deposited in the grave.

Resolved, That this meeting appoint a committee to arrange for the observance, with appropriate funeral rites, the day of interment.

Resolved, That, while we fully recognize the fact that the crime of the assassin Guiteau demands that he suffer the extreme penalty of the law, yet we would deeply lament any effort on the part of any of our citizens to forestall justice and to mar the majesty of Law.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the TECUMSEH HERALD for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
C. E. CONLEY,
W. H. CONKLING,
J. P. SLAYTON,
J. ROOT,
R. B. HOUSE, } Com.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

The chair appointed the following committee to arrange for appropriate services on the day of burial: Wm. Hayden, A. L. Brewer, Rev. Wm. Grandy, A. W. Mills, N. M. Sutton.

The meeting then closed with music by the choir and the benediction by Rev. J. Phelps.

The audience was deeply impressed by the solemnity of the occasion, the remarks were all well received, and the music was highly appropriate. It was a meeting of a peculiar character upon an extraordinary occasion. It will not soon be forgotten by those who participated.

The committee appointed above met at the office of E. B. Wood on Thursday forenoon and made the following appointments and arrangements for observing the day fixed for the Presidential obsequies at Cleveland. Union services of all churches at the Opera House, at two o'clock Monday afternoon. A. W. Mills is appointed to solicit funds to defray expenses.

Wm. Hayden appointed to arrange for the attendance of the public schools and to secure music. Rev. Mr. Pardington appointed to deliver the address with authority to appoint his assistants.

Pastors are requested to announce these services from the pulpit on Sunday.

The committee earnestly recommend that business be generally suspended on Monday, especially from 10 to 4 o'clock, also that the schools be closed for the day.

RELIEF FOR THE FIRE SUFFERERS.

What Has Been Done During the Past Week—The Rural Townships Waking up to the Work.

The total cash receipts handed in to the Tecumseh committee up to yesterday was as follows:

Tecumseh	$524 50
Raisin	154 86
Franklin	94 07
Total	$773 43

The shipment of supplies up to Saturday last comprised seventeen large boxes of clothing, bedding, &c., one barrel of pork, 200 pounds of dried beef, ten barrels of crackers, 120 pounds of cheese, one barrel of fish, 20 barrels of potatoes, several bags of corn, oats, bran &c., One large box was received from Raisin township containing fifty-two bedquilts and comforters, mostly new, and a large number of packages of clothing, shoes, &c.

On Tuesday last another carload of supplies was shipped, consisting of about 200 bushels of seed wheat, 80 packages of clothing and bedding, one cultivator, one harrow, harnesses and tools, and a large amount of corn, potatoes and oats. Most of this grain came from Franklin whose inhabitants seem to have resolved on dividing their surplus with the sufferers.—We understand there was one man in Raisin who utterly refused to contribute a cent, the only instance yet found in northern Lenawee.

Last Saturday evening, a meeting was held in Franklin to organize for work. P. S. McKinnon and J. W. Patterson of this village addressed the meeting and committees were appointed and instructed to proceed to business forthwith. The result has been magical. Several wagon loads of supplies were brought in last Tuesday and more than half of the town is yet to be canvassed. The work is proceeding at a lively rate in Raisin. The aid raised in the southwestern portion of that town has been taken to Adrian for shipment.

In Clinton the amount raised up to Tuesday footed up as follows:

Cash	$ 550 00
Dry Goods	175 00
Wheat	54 00
Clothing &c., estimated	400 00
Total	$1179 00

On Tuesday evening last a meeting was held in Ridgeway to organize, which was addressed by J. W. Patterson, and we learn that an organization was made on the same evening in Macon. These two towns will be heard from the last of the week with no uncertain sound. When Macon and Ridgeway buckle to any undertaking they mean business.

Since the above was in type we have received a report from D. W. Love, of Franklin showing what that town had raised up to last evening. The donations consist of cash, wheat, corn, potatoes and clothing, and the sum raised in each school district is given separately.

Card to the Public.

I beg to announce to you that on Oct. 1st, I will open a Marble and Granite Yard at the old stand formerly occupied by Gray & Son, Railroad st., Tecumseh.

In my experience for the past seven years I have endeavored to conduct my business in good faith, and with due regard to the interests of my customers. My efforts in this particular have met with such a degree of success, as to warrant a belief that I may extend my business and occupy a larger field, and therefore in my new location I hope with increased facilities and advantages to be able to reach and satisfactorily serve a large share of customers in this and adjoining counties, and to them I offer my services, and in soliciting their favors can assure them that I will give my best attention to their interest. I will make a specialty of Red and Gray Granite, making my purchases direct from the largest quarries of America and Scotland, and of Marble monuments and headstones I will always keep my large stock both in Clinton and Tecumseh complete and at correspondingly low prices. If favored with a share of your patronage I will give my personal attention to your orders. Very Truly Yours,

The Old House.

[Mrs. D. M. Jordan in Chi. Sat. Night.]

Does anybody know what has become of the jolly old-fashioned times that used to belong to our lives? They are missing, and we cannot find them. The days when the vacation of Thanksgiving meant joy and gladness, and reunion and merry feasting, when all the members of the family assembled around the pleasant board, and the great fire burned cheerfully in the great fireplace. How the brightly polished brass andirons caught the ruddy reflections of the blaze, and danced around like fairies. Does anybody remember such a fireplace? The hearth was of freshly painted red brick, and the mantel was high beyond the reach of the children. The brass candlesticks were turned up in a row, and the almanac hung at one end. The shovel and tongs had their separate corners, and there was a crane in the back of the fireplace, where the tea-kettle used sometimes to sing like a nightingale. Where are they gone?

There was a pantry, too, have you seen it? with a smell of cheese, and mince pie, doughnuts, and a tempting display of jars tied up with white cloths. There was always one not so tightly tied as the rest, and naughty hands would reach after the peach preserves sometimes. Anybody know where all those pantries have gone? There were two old rocking-chairs, with cushions pieced up from scraps of dresses. The paint was worn from the arms, and they tipped over if you rocked too far back, but we wish they could be found.

There was a kitchen, too. It went away with all the rest. A sweet kitchen where there was always a smell of good dinners, a spicy and aromatic odor of garden herbs. No tea or coffee has ever been found since with such a delicious aroma. There are thousands of great residences with every modern appliance for comfort, where they have state dinners with no end of pomp and show, and style; where the china is costly and the epergnes are of cut glass and silver, and the wines are costly.

They are splendid, but somehow, to-day, we want the old lost house. There are echoes which come down from its smoky rafters, and they fall upon the heart with a mingled feeling of pleasure and pain. There are voices, and footsteps, and laughter, and songs, and the patter of baby feet all mingled in the echoes. Sounds that we shall never hear again save in the mystic hall of memory. Reader, you know of such a house, and you can tell why the mention of holidays brings a nameless longing to look once more into the old empty rooms once so thronging with life,

"Echoing with girlish laughter, Ringing with boyish strife."

An Extraordinary Sleeper.

The following account of a laboring man, named Samuel Clinton, of Timbury, near Bath, is taken, so far as the substantial facts are concerned, from the Philosophical Transactions. On the 13th of May, 1694, Clinton, who was then twenty-four years of age, fell into a profound sleep, in which he continued for a month. Every effort was made to rouse him, but in vain. At the end of that time he awoke of himself, and went about his business as usual. Nothing more extraordinary occurred until the 9th of April, 1696, when he again fell into a profound sleep. Mr. Gibbs, an apothecary of Bath, was sent for after a few days, and bled, blistered, cupped and scarified the young man, all to no purpose. Victuals were kept before him, of which he occasionally ate without waking. Sometimes the act of eating was not fully accomplished, and he would be found with his mouth full of meat. In this manner he continued for seventeen weeks, till the 7th of August. He then awoke naturally, put on his clothes and went into the fields to his work. He was surprised to find it was harvest time, the period that had elapsed since he was at work sowing oats and barley having been a blank. From this time again, he remained well until the 17th of August, 1697, when he complained of a shivering and a coldness in his back, vomited once or twice, and once more fell asleep. Dr. Oliver, whose account of the matter appeared in the Philosophical Transactions, then went to see him, and found his pulse regular, and his body agreeably warm. He tested the sleeper in the most severe manner and tried by every artifice he could devise to surprise him into wakefulness, and was at last compelled to admit that the sleep was real. About ten days after, an apothecary (Mr. Gibbs, we presume) took fourteen ounces of blood from his arm, tied it up again, and left him as he found him, without the least movement having been made by the sleeper. About the end of September, Dr. Oliver saw him again, and a gentleman ran a pin into his arm to the very bone, but Clinton gave no sign of being sensible of what was done to him. Once, on the 19th of November, he woke up and spoke to his mother, but almost instantly went to sleep again and continued so till the end of January or beginning of February. He then awoke perfectly well, and, as on former occasions, had no recollection of anything that had occurred. He resumed his business, and nothing more is on record concerning him.

The Omnibus.

The long coach called an omnibus, with the entrance behind, and the seats along the side, facing each other, originated in Paris in 1827; and in 1831 it began to come into use in London. In large cities it is found the most economical form of carriage except those running on rails, for conveying the largest number of passengers through the streets. In Paris the public omnibuses are numerous and commodious, though their progress is slow as compared with those of London. One company has a municipal monopoly, and owns all the lines. The omnibuses on the several lines are of different colors; and the lines are lettered from A to Z, and from A B to A Z. In 1875 there were in London about fifteen hundred omnibuses, employing nearly seven thousand persons. The number was formerly much larger in proportion; for, in 1841, one company employed fourteen hundred omnibuses. But a large part of the city and suburban travel is now carried on tramways and underground railways. In New York City one was made in 1830, and run upon Broadway. In 1855 the number of these coaches employed upon various lines was four hundred and twenty-nine. This was a considerable reduction from the number of former years, owing to the construction of horse-railroads; and by 1873 the number was reduced to about two hundred.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only, One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Gov. Jerome has issued an appeal to the people of the United States in behalf of the northern sufferers in which he says: "Portions of four counties in the state, lying principally between Saginaw bay and Lake Huron, have been devastated by forest fires. A drouth almost unprecedented in this section of the country had prepared the way for this calamity, and houses barns, fences, crops, cattle, agricultural implements, household furniture, clothing and human life have been destroyed by its ravages. In some townships the destruction is complete and only a picture of ruin is left. It is known that more than 200 lives have been lost by burning and suffocation. Many individuals have become helpless through injuries and exposure, and some are blind. The number of men, women and children without shelter is estimated at 15,000. * * * I appeal under circumstances like these to the generosity of the people of other states, and ask them to co-operate in their abundance with the citizens of Michigan in relieving this destitution. Nothing will be wanting here in duty to the afflicted sufferers, but the demands are too great for the people of this state to meet alone."

THE contents of the North American Review for October cannot fail to arrest the attention of all readers. Every one of the topics discussed is of the highest present interest, and nearly all of the authors are eminent American statesmen, publicists and litterateurs. Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, considers "Some Dangerous Questions," namely, certain emergencies arising in the administration of the United States government, for which adequate provision is not made in the constitution or the laws. Among these questions, that of the succession of the Presidency in case of the inability of the elected incumbent, holds a conspicuous place; it is treated by the writer with much learning and in the most judicial temper. Prof. Geo. P. Fisher, of Yale college, contributes a profound study of The elements of Puritanism pointing out wherein Puritanism was transient in its influence, and wherein permanent. A stronger vindication of Puritanism perhaps never was written.—The number is full of grand articles.

Appleton's American Cyclopædia.

We wish to say to our friends, and in fact to every person, and all professions, do not fail, as you value the highest interests of business, social and intellectual life, in procuring this grand national work. It is worth to the American citizen more than all the other cyclopædias. It is the grandest library in the English language. We own it and speak from actual knowledge. We say to those wanting the work, get it at once before Mr. Gridley, the manager, leaves. We say to the citizens of the county that Mr. G. is indorsed by our best citizens as a gentleman and an honorable man, everyway worthy of the house he represents, and the confidence of the people.

THE AUTOPSY.

The following is the official report of the surgeons in attendance upon the late president:

By previous arrangement a post-mortem examination of the body of President Garfield was made Tuesday afternoon in the presence, and with the assistance of Drs. Hamilton, Agnew, Bliss, Barnes, Woodward, Reyburn, Andrew H. Smith, of Elberon, and Acting Assistant Surgeon D. S. Lamb, of the army medical museum, Washington. The operation was performed by Dr. Lamb. It was found that the ball after fracturing the right eleventh rib has passed through the spinal column in front of the spinal canal, fracturing the body of first lumbar vertebra, driving a number of small fragments of bone into the adjacent soft parts and lodging just below the panchess, about two inches and a half to the left of the spine and behind the peritoneum, where it had become completely encysted.

The immediate cause of death was secondary hemorrhage from one of the mesenteric arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood rupturing the peritoneum, and nearly a pint escaping into the abdominal cavity. This hemorrhage is believed to have been the cause of the severe pain in the lower part of the chest, complained of just before death. An abscess six inches in diameter was found in the vicinity of the gall bladder, between the liver and the transverse. It did not involve the substance of the liver, and no communication was found between it and the wound along the suppurating channel, which extended from the external wound between the loin muscles and the right kidney almost to the right groin. This channel, now known to be due to the burrowing of pus from the wound, was supposed during life to have been the track of the ball. On examination of the organs of the chest evidences of severe bronchitis were found on both sides, with broncho-pneumonia of the lower portion of the right lung, and though a much less extent of the left lung contained no abscesses, and the heart no clots, the liver was enlarged and fatty, but free from abscesses; nor were any found in any other organ except the left kidney, which contained, near its surface, a small abscess, about one-third of an inch in diameter.

In reviewing the history of the case in connection with the autopsy, it is quite evident the different suppurating surfaces, and especially the fractured tissue of the vertebra, furnish a sufficient explanation of the septic condition which existed.

THE WOUND.

The above drawing is a tracing from the back view of a torso in "Gray's Anatomy"—the recognized text-book in all the medical colleges in this country—and exhibits the configuration of the spine from the atlas to the os coccyx, also the lower ribs on the right from the ninth to the twelfth. The dashed line from A to B shows the course of the ball. It entered the body at A on the eleventh rib, which it fractured and then glanced to the left, passed through the first lumbar vertebra of the spinal column, and lodged just below the pancreas at B, About two inches and a half to the left of the spine, and behind the peritoneum, where it had become completely encysted. A little more than half-way between the spine and the resting-place of the bullet lies the mesenteric artery, which was ruptured by the eating away of surrounding tissue, causing the flow of nearly a pint of blood into the abdominal cavity. This was the immediate cause of death. The unbroken line A D indicates the supposed track of the fatal bullet, and at D the electric indicator and the surgeons discovered a solid swelling under the psoas muscle, which was supposed to be the ball, but which proved to be a small cavity filled with pus. C represents the main abscess cavity, which measured six inches by four, and had no communication with the wound.

THE LATE PRESIDENT.—A SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

James Abram Garfield was born Nov 19, 1831, at Orange, fifteen miles from Cleveland, Cuyahoga county, O. He was the youngest of the four children of Abram and Eliza Garfield. The father of the future president of the United States died when he was but 18 months old, leaving the mother with three other children besides himself—Mehitabel, aged 7; Thomas, a boy of 9 years, and Mary, 7 years old. With this young family Mrs. Garfield struggled along, and as the children grew they put their hands to the wheel and aided as best they could. James, by hard work, prepared himself for entrance to Williams college, from which he graduated with honor.

He was married Nov. 11, 1858, to Miss Lucretia Rudolph, who has always proved his counsellor and help meet under all circumstances. During the hours, and days and weeks while her husband has been lying wounded in the white house, she has won the encomiums of the whole civilized world by her devotion, self-control, and wonderful faith and energy.

In 1856 he became connected with Hiram college as its president, and soon developed his power as a public man, which resulted in his election to the state senate in 1859. On the 17th of December, 1861, Col. Garfield moved the 42d Ohio volunteers to the front, and was almost immediately assigned to the command of a brigade by Gen. Buell. With this provisional brigade Col. Garfield drove Humphrey Marshall out of Kentucky, for which President Lincoln conferred upon him the rank of brigadier-general, and dated his commission Jan. 11, 1862, the date when he defeated Humphrey Marshall. From Eastern Kentucky Gen. Garfield was transferred to Louisville, and from there he marched to join the army commanded by Gen. Buell. He arrived with his brigade in time to engage in the second day's fight at Pittsburg landing. He was actively engaged at the siege of Corinth, and in all the operations along the Memphis & Charleston railroad. In January, 1863, he was appointed chief of staff of the army of the Cumberland, and was with them through all the stirring scenes of that memorable campaign through Middle Tennessee. His last military service of note was at the battle of Chickamauga, and there he won his other star, and for his conspicuous services was promoted to be major general.

While in the field he was nominated and elected to congress from the district long made famous by Joshua R. Giddings, and generally known as the Ashtabula district. On entering congress in December, 1863, Gen. Garfield was placed upon the committee of military affairs. He was successively returned to congress each term, and in January, 1880, was elected senator from Ohio, to the seat which the following year was to be vacated by Hon. Allen G. Thurman, and which is now filled by the Hon. John Sherman. On this occasion Gen. Garfield received the unanimous vote of the republican caucus, an honor never before given to any man of any party in the state of Ohio.

During his congressional career Gen. Garfield was chairman of the committees on military affairs, of banking and currency, and of the appropriations committee. When James G. Blaine was elected to the senate in 1877 the mantle of leadership fell to Garfield and he wore it without challenge until he was called to go up higher.

The memory of the national convention is still fresh in the minds of the people, when on the morning of the sixth day of its session, and on the thirty-sixth and last ballot James A. Garfield was nominated by the republican party as its candidate for president of the United States. After an exciting campaign this nomination was ratified by the people at the ballot-box, and on March 4 James A. Garfield was inaugurated president of the United States.

GENERAL GARFIELD'S MOTHER.

The mother of the late president is by nature far from demonstrative, and the many distorted utterances of hers which appeared in the newspapers during the campaign, and especially since the assassination, do her great injustice. That she should have a mother's pride in her son would be natural, but of his achievements she is not free to speak. She loves dearly to converse about him ever since the great calamity, but always prefers to listen. A correspondent called at the house Friday afternoon. Learning of his presence, she entered the room as soon as she was at liberty, and made an inquiry about the funeral preparations. She listened eagerly to everything that was said, and the effort did not seem to fire her. Occasionally a mention of some little act of delicate courtesy on the part of the people would touch her heart, and a tear would glisten in her eye and reveal the anguish with which her heart is rent. She will sit quietly by the windows and read the papers for an hour at a time, then, unable longer to choke down the swelling sorrow, she will lay aside the paper and sit in silence, her thoughts busied with the dead past. The members of the family address her and seek to divert her mind, and with a weary smile that is more eloquent than the tears she seeks to restrain, she turns and tries to hide from others the suffering which she knows must be contagious. The sisters are made weak and nervous by the terrible news, following, as it does, in the wake of four other family deaths. It would seem that this would be the last blow, but, even after the nation's chief, death is not satisfied, but hovers once again above this stricken family. Almost prostrated by her own grief, Mrs. Trowbridge has the mournful task of watching by the bedside of a dying granddaughter. Mrs. Mary McConner and her little girl, 7 years of age, are stopping at the cottage, and consumption in its quickest form is spreading its film over the eyes of the girl. The case is absolutely hopeless, and the death of the little one is expected at any moment. Mrs. General Sheld, of New Mexico, called at the Larabee residence Friday morning to consummate arrangements for the attendance of the relatives at the funeral in Cleveland. The plans were not revealed, and it was very earnestly urged that all arrangements be suppressed from the papers, in order to insure the safety and promote the comfort of the aged mother in the highest degree. It is safe to say, however, that the departure will be delayed as long as possible, since all may rest so much more comfortably at the Solon home. "It is so restful there," Garfield used to say. Mrs. Garfield studied with the greatest interest the diagram published illustrating the direction of the bullet. She is most eager to learn every detail. Referring to the newspaper accounts of the discolored appearance of the dead president's face, the reporter inquired: "Would you have any desire to view the remains? It may be that you would prefer to remember him as he was."

"Oh! no," replied Mrs. Larabee, "I don't want to look at his face. I only want to think how he used to look."

But the little, pale-faced mother said, in faltering accents:

"Oh, I must see him; I must see him once more. He was my own boy, you know."

THE FEELING IN ENGLAND.

Sir Michael Hicks Beach, speaking at Winchcomb, said Guiteau's dastardly action had caused a thrill of horror throughout the country, and the news of the president's death had caused a fresh thrill of grief. Sir Richard Asheton Cross, speaking at Warrington, alluded feelingly to the death of President Garfield. Lord Churchill, speaking at Woodstock, said that during the struggle which the stout-hearted man had sustained with death, England and America watched at his bedside, and at every gathering of Englishmen the catastrophe will be deeply mourned. Charles Bradlaugh, speaking at Northampton, said that, as radicals and liberals, they might lay reverent and loving tribute upon President Garfield's grave, and send sympathy across the ocean. A resolution of condolence was then passed and forwarded to Lowell. The Times, in a leader discussing the court mourning, says: "It is seldom that such an announcement carries with it so deep a sympathy and entire concurrence, not only of a part, but of the whole British nation. General Garfield's has been truly a heroic career—heroic in its beginning, in its long struggle, and in its end."

THE ASSASSIN.

District-Attorney Corkhill declines to express an opinion on the subject of the jurisdiction of the district courts over Guiteau. He says, however, that he will be brought before the grand jury, which meets Oct. 3, and indicted, after which the question of trial will be finally settled. The assassin made the remark that he was feeling better than for some time before, but evidently his talk was bragadocio. He expressed a great desire to have some exercise, and asked for some paper to write to a friend. It is apparent that he is suffering as much as it is possible to suffer in mind, for he is fearing least sound.

On Gen. Crocker making the usual inquiries of the prisoner Friday afternoon, he answered that he had slept well, and, continuing, said: "I demand and expect ample protection by the authorities. I want the guards doubled and the strictest vigilance kept. This I want till the public mind has settled." He asked: "Where is President Garfield's body now?" and Gen. Crocker answered that it was in the city. He then wished to know if there was any crowd of people in the city, and was told that there were vast numbers of people here and more coming. Guiteau hung down his head for a moment and remarked: "Well, it couldn't be expected otherwise." After another pause, he said: "The greatest cause for alarm is from the strangers," and he again asked Gen. Crocker to use the greatest precautions for his protection. When asked if he had selected a lawyer yet, he replied that he had not but that he would want some one to assist him in the management of his case and though he was a lawyer himself, he would, when the time came, select a first class man.

One of the guards passing through the hall noticed that Guiteau's eyes were on his every movement, showing that he is getting even suspicious of the regular officers of the jail.

THE BEREAVED WIFE.

Mrs. Garfield spent the greater part of Thursday at the house of Gen. MacVeagh. At 10 o'clock in the morning she visited the white house. The place was almost deserted. No one was in the grounds. Mrs. Garfield was in a closed carriage with her son and Mrs. Rockwell. As the carriage drove up in front of the white house, young Harry Garfield sprung out, and Sergt. Dinsmore, Private Secretary Brown, and Assistant Private Secretary Pruden appeared at the door. The former rushed forward to the carriage just in time to assist Mrs. Garfield to alight. Mrs. Col. Rockwell alighted next, immediately after them a landau drove up containing Col. Rockwell and Gen. Swaim. The party stood on the portico for a moment. Mrs. Garfield attired in deepest black, was pale and silent. Suddenly she turned toward the door through which her husband had been borne, and as she did so tears welled into her eyes and chased each other down her cheeks. Noticing her emotion, Mrs. Rockwell wound her arm around Mrs. Garfield's waist and assisted the distressed lady into the house. Harry Garfield, with Private Secretary Brown, went on before and started to reach the private stairway by passing through the glass doors. Mrs. Garfield, however, shook her head, and the party then proceeded to the cloak-room and reached the stairway by that means. Upon reaching the upper floor Mrs. Garfield was shown to her own room, where for a few minutes she remained undisturbed. Presently she came out. Her features were calm again, as she at once proceeded to give directions as to the packing and shipping to Ohio of various articles. When this was concluded she requested to be driven back to Atty. Gen. MacVeagh's. The party descended the stairs once more, and when they passed across the portico quite a gathering of people were there. To several whom she knew Mrs. Garfield bowed sadly, but spoke no word. She had gone from the mansion, never to cross its threshold again.

A MOURNFUL SCENE.

At twenty minutes past 11 on Friday two closed carriages drove up to the east lower entrance of the senate wing, and the occupants alighted and passed up the private stairway to the vice president's room. All the corridors and passageways upon the main floor of the senate wing were quickly barred to all comers, and instructions were given by Sergeant-at-Arms Bright, of the senate, to the employes and capitol police on duty to keep themselves completely hidden in the recesses of the doors and windows while Mrs. Garfield passed through to the rotunda. The rotunda itself was entirely cleared, the guard of honor retiring from view for the time being.

In a few minutes the little procession emerged from the vice president's room, and, passing around through the east corridor, proceeded through the silent and deserted main passage-way of the building. Sergeant-at-Arms Bright led the way, and then followed Mrs. Garfield, leaning upon the arm of Gen. Swaim, Harry Garfield, Mollie Garfield, and Miss Rockwell, Col. and Mrs. Rockwell, Atty. Gen. MacVeagh and Mrs. Swaim. Not a sound was heard save the footsteps upon the marble floors as the little company, robed in sombre garments of deepest mourning, passed silently on to mingle their tears and pay the last earthly trib-

Adrian Times: John A. Fitch, a very careful man at the business, with large experience, runs a saw mill at Wolf Creek. While oiling a shaft, preparatory to sawing, Saturday morning, he fell on the feed pulley, cutting a terrible gash about nine inches long on the inner side of his left thigh, exposing and lacerating the deep muscles. He bound up his wound as best he could, and started for town. After riding about eight miles he became faint, and stopped at the house of Mr. John Morton, outside the city limits, where he was kindly cared for, and Dr. Rynd summoned. The doctor dressed the wound, and the injured man was made as comfortable as possible.

Adrian Press: A correspondent from Deerfield writes us that a young business man of that village, who is the son of a prominent republican refused to drape his place in respect for the memory of the dead president.—Some of the boys "chipped in" and bought and tied crape to each part of the store. Next morning his effigy was found hanging by the neck with a card stating that he had refused to buy crape. An inquest and autopsy was held disclosing that death was due to contraction of the heart, that organ having shriveled to microscopic proportions.

Worthy of Praise.

As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truly a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Billiousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints, even where all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at Hudson Gazette: The king of cattle men, Moses Sawyer, as the representative of Charles Price, set his seal upon a fine herd of thirty-four head the other day. It cost him an even $1200 to do it, however, and that staunch Wheatland farmer, Al. VanFleet, was the lucky winner.

LOOKING BACK.

This is the old farm house,
With its deep, vine tangled porch,
Where lover and rose wooing butterfly
And honey bee held debauch.
Oh, many a time and oft,
I have followed the lark aloft
And my heart, my heart flew back
On the dead years shadowy track,
And now in the dusk as a wanderer wake
I'm a happy and not little boy again!

Just such a rose-blush morn
As this in a buried June,
When the grassed way to the meadows lay
And the thrushes were all in tune.
In the sun-warming, loud exultant rose,
And the red faced woodpecker, "wuppo!" and "where o?"
Long ago in a buried June!

Days, when childhood was king,
Darkness and pain and sorrow
No rule of the heart awoke,
No hint of the future sorrow,
When care was a word and grief an idiom
Refrain of a sleepy lull song.

But so long ago,
Ah, the old years and sights
With its sad shade, after glow
Ere the day dips into the night!
O youth, have you left me quite?
O years have you stolen my sight?
Life wanes and the leaves and the hours fade,
And the bee, hope, sips the night.

THAT CLERK.

"Only think of it! A clerk! A saleswoman! It seems to me I'd have worked my fingers to the bone in some other way before I would come to that!" said Lizzie Doyle, going to the mirror and readjusting a twenty-dollar hat.

"So would I. But, then, what could she do?"

"At least she might have made herself a little less public. If there's anything I despise, it's these saleswomen."

"So do I. How much better it would have been to have gone into dressmaking or millinery, or something of that sort. But to stand behind the counter like a man!"

"Papa always did like those Stanleys," said Lizzie [illegible] petulant.

"Yes, we all liked them well enough until Mr. Stanley failed, didn't we?"

"No, not I, for one. Laura was always so independent in her notions. Don't you remember how hard she studied at school? It does seem as if she foresaw her father's failure."

"I wonder she did not try some better position then. She is certainly capable of being something better than a shop-girl!"

"Oh, I believe papa intends to promote her when Mr. Jobley goes west. She will then take Jobley's place as junior book-keeper. Think of that for a woman."

"That would be better than selling goods. I don't see how she can do that with her refined tastes. Why don't she give lessons, I wonder? It might not bring her in quite so much money, but it would be a deal nicer."

"Yes, and then we could recognize her," said Lizzie Doyle.

"That's what I was coming to," was the reply of her companion, a small sallow-faced girl, elaborately trimmed and flounced. "How are we to treat her now? We have been great friends, you know, that is, when she was in our set," she added, seeing Lizzie's brow darken.

"I'll tell you how I shall treat her," responded Lizzie, slowly drawing on a pair of perfumed, three-button kid gloves; "precisely as I treat all of papa's clerks. And I should like to see any of them presume."

"Oh, but Laura won't presume! You needn't be afraid of that; she's too proud."

"But how can you help it when you go to the store for church? She sits so near us, you know."

"Of course she'll give up that pew. She can't afford that."

"That's precisely what she does not mean to do. I heard her say the family must economize somewhere else and keep the pew. Her mother is hard of hearing and could not enjoy the services farther back. The children, too, must go to church. That is the last thing, she said, she ought to give up. I heard her say this to your father last Sunday."

"How provoking," said Lizzie, impatiently. "She will always be in our faces. But I shall have nothing to do with her. I know what it is for, the artful minx!—it's to keep near us. She knows she has got into papa's good graces; and Al, too, admires her. She's very plain."

"Laura is no beauty," was the reply, "but I don't think she's so very plain. She certainly has improved herself, though, by going into a store." And thereupon, the two girls went out for their walk.

It was near twilight that day when Laura Stanley walked briskly home and entered the neat two-story house to which her mother had lately removed such of her household effects as had been spared by the auctioneer.

"This is really pleasant," she said, sinking into a chair that had been drawn near to the glowing grate. "I had no idea mother, that you would so soon make the house so home-like."

"Are you tired, my dear?" asked her mother, a refined-looking woman, as she helped the daughter take off her cloak and hat.

"Rather, but I like the business; and it's a fine place for the study of character."

"I wish you had chosen something else, my dear."

"I don't wish so," said Laura. "There is nothing else would have brought a salary at once. I used to wonder what a certain person would be to me if I were not the rich Mr. Stanley's daughter, and now I know. It's a knowledge worth gaining."

"Do you meet many persons you are acquainted with?" asked her mother.

"Oh, yes; and it's amusing when they come upon me suddenly. O!—it's really—is this Miss Stanley? and sometimes up go the eye-glasses. Then I feel—well, as if I should like to freeze somebody, if I could, for a minute. Others see me and make believe they are examining goods; so absorbed are they that they go clear by me without looking up, and pass out in the same way. But such slights don't trouble me. I find out how much true friendship is worth, and who, out of all the seeming ladies I have been in the habit of meeting, are true, and who are false."

"Then you meet some that are true?"

"Yes, indeed; Judge Agate's wife, who always seemed to me so proud and distant, came up to me with a glowing face, and fairly congratulated me. She did it like a lady, too, and like a friend. There was nothing patronizing about her. And there were several others to whom my position makes no difference. They prize me for what I am. Yet what a price to pay for learning the value of true friendship," added Laura, with a deep sigh.

"I met Aggie Doyle to-day, and she wouldn't speak to me," said Alice, Laura's sister, who had come into the room and overheard the last remark. "Why should they not speak to me, I wonder?"

"Because your sister is a clerk in her father's store," said Laura, somewhat bitterly.

"That's no reason why they should treat me so," the child replied.

"Of course it isn't, nor is it any reason why Lizzie, her eldest sister should ignore me. I liked her so much, too. But to-day she came into the store and passed me, with such a glance after I had prepared a smile and a welcome for her. Mr. Doyle has been so kind since papa's death that I looked for better treatment from Lizzie. That I choose to overlook, for my own sake, and I shall have to meet her so often. But never mind, I must remember my place," she added. "I have to work for my living now—but I will be proud of it! Good-bye, old pile of lazy clay! Good-bye, ungrateful friends! Your coldness cannot hurt the real me; it is only the worthless young lady of fashion who feels it, and she is slowly departing this life."

"Have you filled all your invitations?" asked Lizzie's eldest brother, one of the firm of Doyle & Co., some days after the preceding conversation took place.

Lizzie was arranging a hundred or more tiny, cream-colored envelopes, which she tied together with some pretty, bright-hued ribbon.

"I believe so," she replied, with a smile. "I have asked every young lady of my acquaintance, and I think our party will be the finest of the season, if papa will have the carpets taken up in the west rooms and the floors chalked. Rutger will do them for fifty dollars, and you have no idea how beautifully he works."

"I think father will not refuse that," her brother replied. "I'll speak to him."

"Thank you, Al. Then I am sure he will have it done. I have asked him so much that I was almost afraid to ask him for more."

"Have you asked Laura Stanley?" her brother asked as he was going out.

"Of course not," said Lizzie.

"Of course not! and pray why not?" he asked, standing still.

"Why, Al, what an idea! She wouldn't expect it. Our shop girl—father's clerk; I wouldn't have her for the world."

"Then, if you are sure she would not come, you might have sent her an invitation out of compliment," her brother replied.

"I don't consider her an acquaintance," said Lizzie, and Al. walked out of the room with a shrug of the shoulders.

"Presently her father came in. "Lizzie," he said, "I particularly wish you to send a note of invitation to Miss Laura Stanley."

"Papa, you don't mean it," exclaimed Lizzie, chagrined.

"Indeed, I do mean it. What! slight the daughter of one of my most cherished friends, because she has come down in the world in a money point of view? I should despise myself for it."

"But, papa, she won't come," said Lizzie.

"Never mind whether she will or not. Write an invitation. I'll take it to her."

Lizzie sat down, pale and angry, to write the note. After her boasting of having "cut the Stanleys," it was very hard to be obliged to invite Laura. Her cheeks grew hot as she indited the polite little missive, while she remembered the many times she had ignored her to whom it was addressed. She would have disobeyed had she dared—would even have withheld the note after it was written, had her father not stood by to take it.

Later, her brother Al. came to her.

"I should like an invitation, Lizzie, for a young lady of my acquaintance," he said, in a quiet voice.

"Who is she?"

"The young lady whom I have asked to be my wife," he said, smiling.

"Oh, Al., of course you shall have it. I am to have a sister, then? Is she in the city? Will she be sure to come? I'm sure I can't think of anyone." And then she paused, puzzled at his shrewd smile.

"Do I know her?" she asked.

"You used to," he answered. "It is Miss Laura Stanley."

"Oh, Al." She sank down, covering her face with her hand.

"I was afraid she might feel the slight so keenly," he said softly, "that I hurried matters a little. So you need not be afraid now that she will not come. Will you not prepare an invitation?"

"I have. Papa has carried it to her. But oh, Al., a clerk!"

"A noble woman," said her brother, "who dares face the sneers of 'her set,' and take an honest position for the sake of those who are dependent upon her, rather than whine about her former dignity, and live upon charity. I wish there were more like her."

So Lizzie was forced, for once in her life, to eat humble pie.

The Profane Parson.

Once upon a time, in the dark ages of the nineteenth century, there lived a gentleman who held a commission in the army.

But he had serious scruples as to whether it was right or wrong to kill his fellow creatures at the bidding of others; or, in fact, whether it was not a crime to kill his fellow men at all.

He decided that it was wrong, especially the glitter and tinsel thrown about the murderous profession; so he sold his commission and entered the church, thinking that as he was an intelligent man, and not a mere machine, he might do more good to humanity in that line than in the other line.

One day, discoursing to a rustic congregation on the folly of using profane language, he told them that he himself was once guilty of the same folly, and addicted to the same vice, but that he had completely conquered the habit.

A flying insect, hearing the boast, winked his eye at the congregation, and thought, "I will put him to the test." So, making a circuit of the gentleman's head, he lit upon his nose.

"See!" said the reverend gentleman; "there is an illustration. At one time I would have sworn awfully at this fly; but, look, now! Raising his hand, he said gently, "Go away, little fly! go away!", but the fly only tickled his nose the more.

The reverend gentleman, raising his hand with some vehemence, made a grab at the offender, and being successful, opened it to throw the insect from him, when, in extreme disgust, he exclaimed, "Why, ——— it, it's a wasp!"

Can a country be "hard up" which consumes 50,000,000 gallons of whisky, 10,000,000 barrels of beer and 2,000,000,000 cigars in a single year.

A Queer Fish.

That most queer fish, the anabas—which respires and lives and thrives as well out of water as in it; which has its rampages upon the plains and fresh pastures as well as its gambles among the weeds under the briny waves, and which is even reported to climb aerial trees as easy as it does the coral shrubs of the sea—has been known from remote antiquity to exist among the wonders of the East, but never until now has it visited the Western world. France is the fortunate country which, thanks to the learned pisciculturist, M. Carbonnier, has welcomed into its aquariums a living anabas from the far-off Indies. There is nothing in the exterior appearance of the anabas to indicate its aerial habits or propensities. It is purely a fish in its formation, and its power of creeping or walking upon the earth is due simply to the fins and tail which control its movements in the sea, and which being only to the force of the finny deep. A post-mortem examination is necessary to discover the secret of its amphibiousness. In the head is found the special organ which invests it with the faculty of living two lives, as it were—aquatic and aerial. On each side of the head, instead of being hard and rigid, as with other fishes, the upper pharyngeal arches are divided into fine, irregular laminæ or plates, more or less numerous, forming cavities and little cells capable of containing a considerable amount of water. The theory of science has been that a fish dies out of water, not from immediate want of oxygen, but because the gills become dry and unsuited to its transmission. Hence, Culver believed that the labyrinthiform cavity in the head of the anabas was a reservoir of water which the fish carried full when it went upon its land excursions for the purpose of moistening its gills when occasion required. The French scientists, however, have discovered that it is nothing of the sort; that Culver, so long an undisputed authority in the matter was wholly mistaken; and that the cavity so far from being a water reservoir, as alleged, never contains water, but has simply a surface that secretes a certain humidity in which the air for respiration is maintained. The anabas inhabits all parts of India and the Indian archipelago, living mostly in marshes and inlets which are occasionally dry. When its habitaes are destitute of water the anabas, fish as it is, flees to the land in search of a livelihood. Its peregrinations continue many days, and sometimes even months. Nothing is more curious and interesting than its manner of locomotion. No sooner is it upon terra firma than it closes its mouth and its opercules or gill-covers, and no contraction or flapping is any longer seen; then, by a general movement, all its fins are erected, the pectorals being extended like two arms; the fish supports itself in an upright position by means of strokes right and left with its tail, then aided by an inferior propulsion of the anal fin it progresses with a lively and easy motion, using its arms like oars, as it were, and sculling from side to side alternately, in accord with the strokes of the tail. As to the ability of the anabas to climb trees, modern skepticism generally regards that merely a fish story, although enthusiastic naturalists continue to assert the fact, and even to verify by statements which challenge both charity and incredulity. In the latter part of the last century a Danish gentleman, M. Dubloff, communicated an account of the anabas to the Linnean Society of London, in which he stated that he had himself seen it in the act of ascending a palm tree, and had taken it at a height of five feet from the ground. And M. de la Blanchere, from whose statement in La Nature we have derived the fact here given, affirms that a friend assured him that he had shot an anabas in a tree. In view of this marvelous assurance, M. Blanchere naively remarks that truth is sometimes stranger than fiction.

Copying Faults.

Many people, when they are told to imitate the example of others, are very much like the Chinese tailor to whom was given a coat as a pattern for a new one which he was to make for an English sea captain. Unfortunately the sleeve of the pattern coat was patched at the elbow, and, when the new garment was brought home with great satisfaction by the tailor, there was a patch on the sleeve of the new coat just like the old one.

Such people not only imitate the faults, but are far more apt to excel in their imitation of the bad than in their following the good qualities. It is easier to copy the strut of a man who is vain than the calmness and quiet courtesy of the gentleman. It is much easier to imitate the lame walk of a wounded soldier than to pattern after his bravery and endurance.

Let the faults alone and look only for that which is truly worth copying, or you will teach the lesson learned by the sailor's parrot, brought as a present to his captain's daughter.

While lying ill with a severe cough he had taught the parrot many pretty phrases to surprise Fanny; and so, when the bird was brought to her room, Fanny was delighted to hear it cry out, "Long live Fanny! long live Fanny!" but the parrot always ended his pretty salute with such a natural imitation of the sailor's spitting and coughing as quite to take away Fanny's pleasure at the gift. She could never take delight in the bird's fine phrases for they were always accompanied by the too clever imitation of the sailor's unfortunate habit.

Copy only the agreeable and the useful, the true and the good.

"We know the value of malt, hops, calisaya and iron composing 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

Chemists tell us that a single grain of the substance called iodine will impart color to seven thousand times its weight of water. It is so in higher things—one companion, one book, one habit may affect the whole life and character.

The reputation of the Lion has suffered much of late years. Probably, there is no animal more associated with popular error than the "King of the Beasts." Dr. Livingston has stripped him of very much of his conventional celebrity. "When a lion," he says, "is met in the daytime, (in South Africa,) if preconceived notions do not lead travelers to expect something very noble or majestic, they will merely see an animal somewhat larger than the biggest dog they ever saw, and partaking very strongly of the canine features. The face is not very much like the usual drawing of a lion, the nose being prolonged, like a dog's, not exactly such as our painters make it, though they might learn better in the Zoological Gardens; their idea of majesty being usually shown by making their lions' faces like old women in night-caps."

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. All interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

Five of the sweetest words in the English language begin with H, which is only a breath: Heart, Hope, Home, Happiness and Heaven. Heart is a hope-place, and home is a heart-place, and that man sadly mistakes who would exchange the happiness of home for anything short of heaven.

A Testament Revisor's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists, and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, inquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

Lost wealth may be replaced by industry, lost knowledge by study, lost health by medicine, but lost time is gone forever.

Some thoughts are prayers. There are moments when, whatever be the attitude of the body, the soul is on its knees.

"If you don't stop your coughing," said the judge, "I'll fine you a hundred dollars."—"I'll give your honor two hundred if you can stop it," was the lawyer's reply.

Mr. Heep said to a drunken fellow, "If I were in your place, I would go out to the woods and hang myself." The answer was, "If yooz in my plaish, you couldn't get there."

"What time is it?" asked a customer of a restaurant clerk, as he settled for his breakfast. "It's a quarter after ate," replied the clerk, as he raked in the cash and twenty-five cent check.

Early one morning, a banker was found on his knees at his front door, trying to unlock it with a lead pencil, and saying, "Howze this? Somebozzy's been foolin' with ze combination."

An English physician says mosquito bites "drain the blood of its bad humor." But then, on the other hand, they put a man into a bad humor, so we can't see the advantage of encouraging the insect to bite.

One of the strange features of human nature is that a pious man will declare on his bended knees that he is the chief of sinners, and has nothing good in him, and then will get up and brand the man as a liar who corroborates these fervent statements.

A policeman who had offered his hand to a young woman and been refused, arrested her and took her to the station-house. "What is the charge against this woman?" asked the lieutenant. "Resisting an offer, sir," was the reply. "She was discharged, and so was the officer."

Here is a mode of speech closely related to the Irish bull. Got off as wit it is rather cheap, but when fallen into unconsciously is often very ludicrous. We clip from current exchanges a few specimens:

A Peoria paper says: "A child was run over by a wagon three years old, and cross-eyed with pantalets on, which never spoke afterwards."

A clergyman says: "A young woman died in my neighborhood yesterday, while I was preaching in a beastly state of intoxication."

A widow, intending to succeed her husband in the management of a hotel, advertised that "the hotel will be kept by the widow of the former landlord, Mr. Brown, who died last summer on a new and improved plan."

A correspondent, in writing of a recent celebration in the city of Cleveland, says: The procession was very fine, and nearly two miles long, as was also the report of Dr. Perry, the chaplain."

A JUST PUNISHMENT.—Early in the nineteenth century, a band of Highland robbers, headed by one Macdonald of Rosse, having taken two cows from a poor woman, she vowed that she would wear no shoes till she had complained to the King. The savages, in ridicule of her oath, nailed horse-shoes to the soles of her feet. When her wounds were healed, she proceeded to the royal presence, told her story, and showed her scars. The just monarch instantly dispatched an armed force to secure Macdonald, who was brought to Pesth, along with twelve of his associates. The King caused them all to be shod in the same manner as they had done by the poor woman; and after they had been for three days exhibited through the streets of the town as a public spectacle, Macdonald was beheaded, and his companions hung.

IMPORTANT to Travellers. Special inducements are offered you by the Burlington Route. It will pay you to read their advertisement to be found elsewhere in this paper.

The infant (Pearl) was worthy to have been brought forth in Eden; worthy to have been left there, to be the plaything of the angels after the world's first parents were driven out.

The modern sentimentalism about Nature is a mark of disease—one more symptom of the general liver complaint. It is well enough for a mood or a vacation, but not for a habit of life.

Conversation is a virtue, and he can be of no good nature that does not prefer it before all other enjoyments whatsoever. Company adorns our good parts, the most exalted endowments growing dull without it. Men acquire color and perfume from the qualities of their associates, and the conversation of good persons is contagious.

Nothing can be done in study without a spirit of fearless independence. He who is not prepared to set truth above all sect or party, or popular prejudice, or mere traditional belief, will never find her, and may as well abandon the search. And in these days of wavering faiths and contradictory philosophy this is hard. Let your independence be the thoughtful independence of a modest man, not the brawling aggressive independence of a fool.

Christianity takes sham, and artifice, and conceit, and hypocricy out of man, and makes him natural, modest, frank, real. When you see a person made narrow, and bigoted, and mean, by his belief, you may know his belief is a wrong one. Any view of God which makes a man intolerant, any view of duty which makes him harsh, any conception of eternity which makes him a coward and a hypocrite, is proved by its effect to be erroneous. A tree is known by its fruit, and a doctrine is always known by its influence.

Platitudinous Ponderosity.

The New England Journal of Education, in a serio-comic lecture, gives its readers some good precepts, "beaten in" with examples.

In promulgating your esoteric cogitations, or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable, philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity.

Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibleness, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency.

Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectation.

Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast.

Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittaceous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity, and vaniloquent vapidity.

Shun double entendres, prurient jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent.

In other words, talk plainly, briefly, naturally, sensibly, truthfully, purely. Keep from "slang;" don't put on airs; say what you mean; mean what you say. And don't use big words!

An Established Remedy. Down's Elixir has been widely known and used as a cough remedy for fifty years. No other cough medicine has stood the test half this length of time. The people stand by that which is good.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

Don't Waste Vital Energy.

The most vigorous persons do not have too much vitality. People generally inherit a lack; or at least find that much vital energy has been permanently lost in their childhood and youth through the ignorance or carelessness of their parents. Often it is impaired by wrong indulgences in early manhood. The endeavor with all persons should be to husband what is left, be it much or little. Therefore—

1. Don't do anything in a hurry.

2. Don't work too many hours a day, whether it be farm-work, shop-work, study-work, or house-work.

3. Don't abridge sleep. Get the full eight hours of it, and that, too, in a well ventilated and sun purified room.

4. Don't eat what is indigestible, nor too much of anything, and let good cheer rule the hour.

5. Don't fret at yourself, or anybody else; nor indulge in the blues, nor burst into fits of passion.

6. Don't be too much elated with good luck, nor disheartened by bad.

Positively—be self-controlled, calm and brave. Let your brain have all the rest it needs. Treat your stomach right. Keep a good conscience, and have a cheerful trust in God for all things and for both worlds.

Clear head and voice, easy breathing, sweet breath, perfect smell, taste and hearing, no cough, no distress.—These are conditions brought about in catarrh by the use of Sanford's Radical Cure. Complete treatment for $1.

Physiologically, soup has great value for those who hurry to and from their meals, as it allows an interval of comparative rest to the fainting stomach before the more substantial beef and mutton is attacked, rest before solid food being as important as rest after it. Let a hungry and weary merchant or lawyer begin boldly with roast beef, and what is the result? The defeat is often as sudden as was the attack. When the body is weary, the stomach cannot stand the shock of an ill-masticated half pound of beef. But if a small plate of soup be taken, nourishment will soon be introduced, and strength to receive more substantial material will follow.

Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters are purely vegetable—the product of the hills and valleys.

It is very hard to live in this world, and keep the tenderness, the purity and trust of a little child. Happy are those who do; but, if the petrifying waters of deceit and hate and malice and ingratitude harden some hearts, who shall wonder?

Warranted.—Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment is warranted to please all who use it.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $850 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I did."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $525. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,080.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then Surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w.

TECUMSEH, MICH., SEPT. 29, 1881.

It has been suggested in several quarters that the mourning display used about the country should be sold and the proceeds donated to the fire sufferers of Michigan. The suggestion is an admirable one, and if faithfully carried out, it would result in a large addition to the relief fund. It is estimated that the mourning display in New York City alone cost half a million dollars.

Time makes all things even. Michigan mourns the loss of one of the brightest luminaries in the scientific world, and a man who was driven from our own University by influences which should make our citizens hide their heads in shame. Now that he is gone, his talents and services begin to be appreciated. Prof. Frieze, in presenting his annual report to the Board of Regents has this brief but noble tribute to the memory of Prof. Watson:

"In the early part of the year we were shocked by the announcement of the sudden death of Prof. James C Watson. He had scarcely yet become established in his newly adopted home at Madison. We had not yet ceased to think of him as one of our number, and still identified with our interests. We received the remains of our recent colleague at the University and attended them to their last resting place with every token of honor due to one who is universally acknowledged to have been foremost and brightest of all our Alumni."

The remains of our lamented President have been consigned to their final resting place, and the proper tribute of respect and admiration has been paid to his memory. Now let the trappings of grief be quietly laid aside, and let us address ourselves to the duty we owe to the living. Hundreds of our fellow citizens in Northern Michigan are suffering for the necessaries of life. Mayor Carleton, of Port Huron, under date of Sept. 25th, announces the present needs of the people in the burnt districts. He says: "We are glad to announce that we have all the clothing that we need.—Bedding, underwear, provisions, grass and clover seed, tinware, tableware, and money are imperatively needed.—Our cash receipts up to noon to-day are $121,000. The donations have been generous and timely, but the needs are vast. The generosity of the American people has inspired the sufferers in the burnt region with new hope, and their first needs being supplied, they are industriously engaged in building new homes. We will have 1,500 people to house and feed during the coming winter. Grateful for the donations already made, I am compelled to ask you to continue in your several cities this great work of charity. I can only renew the assurances that the contributions received will be faithfully used and I am confident that this appeal for aid will not be in vain.

The spectacle which was presented to the world by the American Republic on the 26th inst, probably never will occur again. Boards of Trade were closed, the merchant ceased his sales, the anvil and the loom were silent, a stillness more than that of any ordinary Sabbath settled down upon the land, and the whole nation became a body of mourners. People flocked to the Forest City by thousands, only to catch a glimpse of the casket containing the President's mortal remains, and when that casket was lowered to its rest near the shores of the beautiful lake, millions of hearts joined in the petitions which then ascended to the Heavenly throne. Never has there been such a universal show of public sorrow since America began. During the long weeks of his intense suffering and his heroic struggle with death, men had ceased to regard him as a political friend or foe and had come to honor him as a man and respect him as a christian, and finally when the Angel called him away, the hearts of the people bowed in anguish and grief. The outward show of sorrow was profuse and costly, but it was not a solemn mockery. It faithfully mirrored the sincere grief, the kindly, neighborly sorrow, which the nation felt for the great man who was gone, for the life which was so wantonly sacrificed without a shadow of cause. Such a scene will never be witnessed again in this generation, and let us hope that it may never occur again in our country's history.

THE LAST RITES.

ute over the casket which sealed from view the form and features of the dearly loved husband, father, and friend. After remaining about twenty minutes in the rotunda they returned quietly and with the same privacy that marked their entrance, and, passing though to the senate wing, entered their carriages and returned to the residence of the attorney general.

DR. FRANK H. HAMILTON.

Dr. Frank H. Hamilton gave the following interesting points in the case of the late President Garfield: Not one abscess was found on the lungs even the size of a pin's head. What has been mistaken for abscesses by some persons present at the autopsy were sections of the ramification of the bronchial tubes, each one of which contained muco purulent matter, and which were demonstrated at the time not to be abscesses of the structure of the lungs by scraping the surface of the inclosed lung, and thus withdrawing the pus and mucus from the bronchial tubes.

It would have been possible, providing it had been positively known where the ball was located in the president's body, to have removed it by a surgical operation by going through the side of the body by a vast incision. Daylight must be had for such an operation—following the track of the wound, removing the whole of the body of first lumbar vertebra, cutting through vital structures which lie on the front and sides of the vertebra, then exploring in the dark in a wound at least twelve inches in depth, with a positive assurance that your knife would not escape the nerves, arteries, and veins which lie in this region, and through which the ball had miraculously passed; but long before the incisions and explorations had terminated the president would have ceased to live.

In front and on the sides of the vertebra lie the great abdominal aorta carrying the blood to the whole of the lower portion of the body, which aorta is at least half an inch in diameter; the great vena cava carrying the blood to the heart, and which is still larger in its dimensions; the ganglionic system of nerves forming plexuses and meshes covering a large portion of the surface of the vertebra, the thorax duct, which carries all the nutriment gathered from the intestines to the heart—the wounding of any one of which in the slightest degree would have been inevitably fatal.

AT WASHINGTON.

Down Pennsylvania avenue there marched, on Friday afternoon, Sept. 24, an historical procession, marked and eventful in comparison with the greatest that has passed along this thoroughfare, so rich in historical associations. The city was draped in mourning. Flags were at half mast and bells tolled as the dreary notes of funeral dirges filled the air. Upon the houses and at the open windows swarmed an eager crowd of spectators. Upon the sidewalks a dense throng pressed against the ropes employed to keep the street clear. As the hearse carrying the late president, drawn by six gray horses, came slowly down the avenue, followed by a glittering procession of guards of honor, there was much in the scene to recall inauguration day. The same troops and the same gaudy uniforms were in line behind the president on the 4th of March. Then their arms were in position upon their shoulders, and they marched to the lively time of martial music. Now with arms reversed they slowly tramped to the wailing measures of a drum. To those who, however, witnessed that bright one. The sun shone clear and warm upon the nodding plumes and flashing uniforms of a small host of officials, whose presence and numbers so surpassed in size the small funeral section of the procession as to cast a shadow almost entirely its sombre character.

MRS. GARFIELD

did not attend the funeral further than the depot of her children. She came to the capitol a little before 11 o'clock and paid a last visit to her husband's coffin. She was deeply veiled and accompanied by her children, Mrs. Rockwell, General Swaim, General MacVeagh, and Colonel Rockwell. When they entered by the lower private entrance upon the senate side of the capitol, strict orders were given to keep the passageways clear and to permit no one to enter the rotunda or to cross the passage where Mrs. Garfield and her party were to return. She remained nearly half an hour in the rotunda. When she came out she was deeply veiled. She was driven rapidly away afterwards to General MacVeagh's house, where she remained until it was time for her to join the special train. The proceedings in the rotunda were well arranged. Twelve hundred tickets were issued. No one was admitted without a pass. The rotunda, therefore, was only comfortably filled, and not crowded. Ranged around the open space about the coffin were brown leather sofas taken from the senate chamber and the house of representatives. Back of these, in circles reaching to the outlying wall, were chairs for the invited holders of tickets. Members of the Army of the Cumberland stood in the open space about the coffin as guards of honor. There were no other guards. The absence of the military guard of honor was in accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Garfield. The doors of the rotunda were not well guarded by the police that duty being given up to the senate and house messengers. The hour of the ceremony was 3 o'clock. After 2 o'clock the people began to come in slowly. The members of the diplomatic corps were among the first arrivals. They were in full uniform as they were on the 4th of last March. The principal legations were represented. The Chinese, with their yellow hats and red tassels and purple silk suits, sat by the side of the Turkish ambassador, conspicuous in his red fez and a dark blue uniform, bringing out in strong relief his swarthy face. Few of the leading ministers were present, as many are absent from the city. The most conspicuous figure in the diplomatic row was an attache of the Austrian legation in a dashing hussar uniform. The dazzling brilliancy of his polished steel helmet was shaded by a long black plume. The gaudy lace and glittering uniforms of the diplomats were in direct line with the rival brilliancy of the uniforms of the army and navy officers present. At twenty minutes to 3 there was a movement in the crowd, and then every one with one accord arose. Then came in, arm-in-arm the two ex-presidents, Grant and Hayes. They walked in from the senate wing of the capitol directly to seats placed for them at the foot of the coffin. Both were dressed in black. While the crowd was still standing, President Arthur came in, leaning upon the arm of Secretary Blaine, preceded by five members of the supreme court, Waite, Miller, Harlan, Matthews, and Strong, and followed by the cabinet, with the exception of Gen. McVeagh, who was confined to his house from indisposition. The supreme court judges sat at the head of the coffin. Next to them sat Arthur and the cabinet. President Arthur was less nervous and embarrassed. There was a look of pride and dignity upon his face as he stood erect a moment before taking his seat. Physically speaking, he is a very handsome man. Mr. Blaine is much above the average size, but President Arthur, as he stood by his side, reached fully half a head above him. Mr. Blaine looked badly to-day. His face wore the same ghastly look that shaded Matt Carpenter's during the year that preceded his death. All of the cabinet members' faces showed traces of sorrow and deep chagrin, but none showed such a pallid look of loss and trouble as that worn by Secretary Blaine. Across from the cabinet people were the under secretaries at the white house with their families. Back of them were the house members to the number of fifty or sixty, and the army officers. Back of the cabinet sat the senators. Upon the seats reserved for the members of the Garfield family sat the wives of the members of the cabinet. Mrs. Blaine sat at one end, with Mrs. Hunt at the other. All of the ladies were in deep mourning. Just behind the coffin stood a chorus of twenty-four voices, selected from the Philharmonic society, under the leadership of Prof. Anton Gloetzner, a pupil of Liszt. As the clock hands upon the white faced clock reached 3, Prof. Gloetzner raised his hand and the group sang modestly and with touching harmony: "To Thee, O Lord, I Yield My Spirit," from the oratorio of "Saint Paul." The acoustic properties of the rotunda are wonderful. The music echoed until it filled the space with the rich, full sounds of an organ. The ceremonies after were very simple, and in good taste. A selection from the bible was read by the Rev. Dr. Hankin, then Rev. Mr. Errett, of Cincinnati, made a prayer.

THE FUNERAL TRAIN.

The funeral train left Washington at 4:15 p. m. Both sides of the track were lined with people as far as could be seen. At Baltimore it is estimated 100,000 people stood with heads uncovered during the passage of the train through the city, and at every town and village on the route the assembled thousands united in the last sad tribute to the honored dead. The train reached Cleveland Saturday at 1 p. m., and were escorted by the First City Troop, the Cleveland Grays, and Oriental and Hollenden Commandery, K. T. The line of march was down Euclid avenue to Erie street, to Superior, and thence to the catafalque. Mrs. Garfield and her family and her immediate friends were taken to the residence of James Mason.

THE LAST RESTING-PLACE.

Lake View cemetery, where President Garfield's remains will be laid to rest, embraces three hundred acres on the south side of Euclid avenue, just beyond the east limit of Cleveland, five miles from the business centre of the city. On the other side of the avenue is Wade park, and in close proximity the site where the new Western Reserve university buildings are being erected. Nature seems to have designed this spot for the purpose which it has been devoted, and all that art and money could do to enhance the natural beauties has been done. The grounds are owned by an incorporated association of Cleveland gentlemen of wealth and refinement, incorporated under the law, which requires "all gains or profits from the sale of lots or otherwise to be appropriated to perpetual adornment and repairs of the cemetery." The land was purchased ten years ago and laid out by landscape designers and engineers selected for eminence in their professions. Wooded hills, grassy vales, secluded nooks, winding drives, sinuous walks, running brooks, and quiet lakes are the conspicuous landmarks. The association adopted a plan different from any other cemetery, and expressed tersely in the original prospectus in the following language: "A feeling is growing in the public mind that burials should be made where the quiet repose of the dead may be assured forever. The human heart clings to the grave of its departed hopes, and seeks consolation in rearing monuments and emblems of beauty over the remains of its departed loved ones. This can be fitly done, not in the tumultuous din of cities, but amid the quiet verdure, under the broad and cheerful light of heaven, where the harmonious and ever-changing face of nature reminds us by its resuscitating influence that to die is to live again."

With this sentiment prompting the plans, the cemetery has become in beauty and tasteful adornments the rival of the most celebrated cemeteries of the world, and the air of retired and restful loveliness, of an inexpressible nearness to nature and withdrawal from the world, is not found elsewhere. The great object of the association was to provide a resting place for the departed, free from the gloom of the tomb, and from which should be banished everything suggestive of awfulness in death. No fence, either iron or wood, no coping or curbing, of brick or stone, no hedge, wooden trellis, posts and chains, or anything to make an inclosure, is permitted. Head and foot boards are prohibited, head stones not allowed to exceed fourteen inches in height. Thus the cemetery rather resembles a vast, well-kept park, with stately shafts and modest or ornate vaults in lieu of statuary and structures.

President Garfield loved to stroll in this cemetery. It was his ideal of a final earthly resting-place.

THE INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—President Arthur took the oath of office again to-day in the vice-president's room of the capitol. It has always been the custom for the chief-justice to administer the oath to the president and so, though not legally necessary, the form was gone through with to-day, Chief-Justice Waite administering the oath of office. President Arthur has remained very quietly in the house of Senator Jones all day, excepting when he went to the capitol. There were present at the ceremony at noon ex-President Grant, ex-President Hayes, Senator Jones, the members of the cabinet, Speaker Sharp, of New York, and Gen. Sherman in full uniform. When the oath had been taken by the president he drew from an inner pocket of his coat a small roll of manuscript and proceeded to read his inaugural address, as follows:

"For the fourth time in the history of the republic its chief magistrate has been removed by death. All hearts are filled with grief and horror at the hideous crime which has darkened our land: and the memory of the murdered president, his protracted sufferings, his unyielding fortitude—the example and achievements of his life and pathos of his death—will forever illume the pages of our history. For the fourth time the officer elected by the people and ordained by the constitution to fill a vacancy so created is called to assume the executive chair. The wisdom of our fathers, foreseeing even the most dire possibilities, made sure that the government should never be imperiled because of the uncertainty of human life. Men may die, but the fabrics of our free institutions remain unshaken. No higher or more assuring proof could exist of the strength and permanency of popular government, than the fact that though the chosen of the people be struck down, his constitutional successor is peacefully installed, without shock or storm, except in the sorrow which mourns the bereavement. All the noble aspirations of our lamented predecessor, which found expression in his life, the measures devised and suggested during his brief administration to correct abuses and enforce economy, to advance prosperity, and promote the general welfare, to insure domestic security and maintain friendly and honorable relations with the nations of the earth, will be garnered in the hearts of the people, and it will be thy earnest endeavor to profit and to see that the nation profits by his example and experience. Prosperity blesses our country. Our home policy is fixed by law, is well grounded, and generally approved. No threatening issue mars our foreign intercourse, and the wisdom, integrity and thrift of our people may be trusted to continue, undisturbed, the present assured career of peace, tranquility and welfare. The gloom and anxiety which have enshrouded the country must make repose especially welcome now. No demand for speedy legislation has been heard; no adequate occasion is apparent for an unusual session of congress. The constitution defines the functions and powers of the executive as clearly as those of either of the other departments of the government, and he must answer for the just exercise of the discretion it permits, and the performance of the duties it imposes. Summoned to these high duties and responsibilities, and profoundly conscious of their magnitude and gravity, I assume the trust imposed by the constitution, relying for aid on Divine guidance and the virtue, patriotism, and intelligence of the American people."

THE CABINET.

At the cabinet conference held with President Arthur after the oath of office was administered, this morning, each member of the cabinet tendered his resignation. The resignations were in writing. The reason why the resignations were tendered to-day was explained to a Times correspondent by a high official. It was said to President Arthur that, as the cabinet intended to be absent at Cleveland and would not return until Wednesday, they felt it their duty to place their resignations in his hands to-day. President Arthur said he appreciated fully the motives that prompted their action, but of course he could not be expected to consider the questions to which they gave rise just now. He would therefore ask them at present to continue in charge of their departments. He said further if there were any matters of particular urgency in any of the departments he desired them to be brought to his notice before the departure for Cleveland, so that if any of the cabinet members needed rest after the very trying period through which they had passed they might feel at perfect liberty so to return immediately to Washington.

FIFTY MILES AN HOUR.

Mrs. Garfield's Ride to Washington, July 2d, 1881.

BY GEORGE LANSING TAYLOR, D. D.

Clear the track to Washington!
Flashed the order from New York.
Commerce, travel, all must wait:
Business, pleasure, play or work
"Clear the track to Washington!
Fire the steam to lightning power
Engineer, your orders are:
Fifty miles an hour!"

"Bring out 'Long-legged Tom,' whose wheels
Stride eight yards at every round!
Let them burn along the steels!
Make that splendid engine bound!
Like a fiery dragon's flight,
Let your train the road devour!
Engineer, your orders are:
Fifty miles an hour!

"Why?" "A mad assassin's hand
Shot our President this morn!
Garfield's wife to Garfield flies,
Like an angel, whirlwind borne!
Engineer, be bold and true!
Test your art's consummate flower!
Put this little woman through,
Fifty miles an hour!"

"Fifty million patriot hearts
Weep, and rage, and curse, and pray;
Save, O God, our President!
Speed his wife and speed her way!"
Engineer, not this for you;
Yours to stand a brazen tower
And put this one weak woman through,
Fifty miles an hour!

"Ten hours' time to Washington,
You must cut it down to six!
For our Garfield's hero soul
Trembles on the shores of Styx!
Grim Charon's bark grates on life's strand,
But Love shall snatch his lifted oar,
For Love can bear the fearful strain
Of fifty miles an hour!"

Strong men, bare-browed, cheer the train,
Like a thunderbolt hurled past!
Women's tears fall thick as rain
Shook from rose-trees by the blast,
O Wedded Love! ne'er angel flew
From Heaven to earth with richer dower!
Angels! waft this true wife through,
Fifty miles an hour!

Philadelphia hails the car,
Like a meteor on its road;
Baltimore, thrilled at its jar,
Waves it on, with prayer to God!
Venus's chariot, drawn by doves,
Fluttering from Love's myrtle bower,
Changed to steed of steel and flame,
At fifty miles an hour!

Aye, 'twere mad! The Nation's choice
Bleeding lies, at point to die!
Aye, 'twere mad! The Nation's voice
Bursts to God in myriad cry;
"Save, O God, our President!"
Dash aside this fearful shower;
Love is life and Love comes flying,
Fifty miles an hour!

The true wife comes! Love fights with Death!
The Nation's prayer is heard!
Even Shylock Wall Street's "bulls" and "bears,"
With a human throb are stirred,
And a million, gold, were not too much
To make that brave wife's dower,
Who rode six hours, to save her lord,
At fifty miles an hour!

Brooklyn Exponent: On Wednesday morning, T. W. Beech of near Wampler's Lake, started to Jackson in a sulky, driving a fast horse which he had entered for the races. He stopped at the Brooklyn foundry-blacksmith shop to have his horse's shoe repaired, and when about to start off, his horse became frightened at the curtains of a buggy standing near and started to run, upsetting the sulky and dragging Mr. Beech a considerable distance before help could reach him. When stopped, Mr. Beech was under the horse, and horse, harness, sulky and man were so entangled that they could not be separated until the harness was cut off. Mr. Beech was badly bruised, both internally and externally, and the full extent of his injuries are as yet unknown.

ALBERT HYDE has a splendid buggy horse which he keeps for family use. Last Monday morning, on going to the stable he found the horse had pounded a hole through the floor of the stall and was lying on his back between two joists on the ground at least three feet below the floor. The neighbors were called and they had considerable difficulty in extricating the horse. A noise was heard from the stable about midnight, so it is probable that the unfortunate animal was in that position for five or six hours. The horse was terribly bruised and the only wonder is that it came out alive.

The supplies sent to Port Huron will be all right and reach the sufferers. We have not thus far received any provisions here, and are using the funds we receive to feed these people, buy seed wheat, lumber, &c., to enable them to get back on their farms. A person can hardly realize the suffering of these people without being an eye witness."

OUR TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD.

Appropriate Memorial Services at the Opera House Monday Afternoon.

Tecumseh honored herself in properly honoring the memory of the illustrious dead. At the impromptu meeting of condolence held on Tuesday evening of last week a committee was chosen to arrange a formal memorial service to be held on the day of burial. A large committee on decoration was appointed, and the Opera House was selected as the place of meeting, as it was the largest audience room in the village. The public schools were dismissed on Monday and the places of business as well as many private houses were draped in appropriate emblems of mourning.

The decoration committee met at the Opera House at an early hour in the forenoon, and under the supervision of C. A. Slayton and his assistants the building was most tastefully trimmed. A heavy black drapery relieved with small flags stretched around the entire gallery. The drop curtain and back scene upon the stage were heavily trimmed with black. At the rear was the motto "Our Nation Mourns" in flowers, and upon the front curtain were the words "God Reigns," placed in a half circle over Garfield's picture. An elaborate design of black intertwined with the national colors was placed over the main entrance on the outside. There were three beautiful floral pieces on the platform; a cross and crown, presented by Misses Mary Dingman and Addie Wimple, and a shield, presented by the Misses Hayden. Seats were arranged upon the platform for the chairman, the officiating clergymen, and the choir.

Shortly after one o'clock people began to gather from the village and the surrounding country. At two o'clock, the hour appointed for the services, every available seat in the building was occupied. The south gallery was reserved for the pupils of the school, and the military company occupied the body chairs near the stage.

The scene was a most solemn and impressive one. The sombre display about the room, the solemn music of the choir, the eloquent words of the speakers, the intense sympathy of the entire audience with the occasion, all united to render it a memorable service. The elements seemed to sympathize with the assemblage of mourners. A slight shower passed over the village as the meeting was dismissed. The heavens looked down upon us and wept.

Shortly after two o'clock the chairman of the special committee, Wm. Hayden, Esq., announced that the exercises would begin, and the program was then presented in the following order. The singing was by a selected choir led by J. S. Strong:

Voluntary—The Choir.
Invocation—Rev. W. Grandy.
Reading of the Governor's Proclamation—Rev. H. Shepard.
Singing.
Prayer—Rev. C. E. Conley.
Scripture Lesson—Rev. W. Grandy.
" " —Rev. J. Phelps.
Singing.
Address—Rev. R. S. Pardington.
Singing.
Benediction—Rev. J. Phelps.

The address by Rev. Mr. Pardington was a most eloquent tribute to the deceased President, which we are permitted to give to our readers entire.

THE ADDRESS.

Mr. President and Fellow Mourners: We stand to day in the presence of an irresistible fact: James A. Garfield is dead. Died at the hands of a base assassin. Died after seventy-nine days of unparelled suffering. Fifty millions of people kneel to day by the side of his funeral bier. We kneel to mourn for the dead, and to sympathize with the bereaved living. He is worthy a nation's grief. The civilized world kneels beside his bier. He is worthy of a world's grief. He was the youngest man who ever ruled in the White House except James K. Polk. He served a larger number of terms consecutively in the House of Representatives than any man of his age. He was the first man ever nominated for the Presidency by a convention in which he put forth herculean efforts to secure the nomination of another. He was the first man ever nominated for the Presidency who was a preacher of the gospel and regularly officiated in a pulpit.

He was the first man ever nominated and elected to the Presidency who was ever a college president.

He was one of the broadest and most thoroughly trained, and most versatile scholars ever elected to the office of Chief Magistrate. He stood as the grandest inspiration to the young men of the nation to the possibilities of success in this free land.

His early life of poverty and struggle linked him to the toilers of this work-a-day world. His profession as teacher linked him to the educators of this land. His religious faith and strong christian principles led him to touch the hearts of the praying people of the world.

In 1867 an Egyptian mummy was unrolled in Paris in the presence of several savants. The thing of special note was that a few dried leaves were found in its armpits. Their form was perfect, their color was gone. Some one had plucked them on the banks of the Nile before they had faded and placed them there. Who did it? Was it a deliberate act? Did he design to teach a symbolic lesson? Did he design to speak to some coming generations?

This we may say, the human life represented by this mummy was an uneventful life. It was fruitless.

Man is immortal. He wears the crown of regnant majesty. His nature is undying. He puts up cities, but they fade away like the fabrics of a dream. Not one being in all the countless multitudes which have trod the earth has ever passed out of existence. "Forever" is written on the brow of every human being. Mans' purpose in this present life should be to fill himself with knowledge and wisdom. He who goes from life with no acquisition but gold, or the mere memory of personal gratification is symbolized by this Egyptian mummy which bore no other token of earthly grandeur or activity than a few dead leaves under its arms.

No man to-day will need to put a few leaves in the armpits of James A. Garfield. His life has been an eventful one. Full of fruit.

He was a great man. A great man is always an object of interest, and every additional beam of light cast upon his memory awakens attention.

There has always existed a necessity for great men. Cousin has said, "A great man is not an arbitrary creature who may be or may not be." All things, both divine and human labor to produce the great man. He comes on to the stage when the world demands him and disappears when he is done. He is produced and dies at the proper time. He is produced by a power and is largely the instrument of a power above himself. The great man cannot be produced before his time and he cannot be made to die before his time.

A great soldier by his prowess put himself upon a throne. One said to him, "Educate your son and watch over him that he may be able in time to replace you."

He replied, "Replace me, I could not replace myself. I am the child of circumstance." He felt he was the instrument of a power for a definite purpose. You may say "he was a fatalist." All great men have been, and are more or less fatalists. We make a mistake in the use of the word. The principle involved we are correct concerning.

The only visible sign of a great man is that he succeeds. A man who does not succeed is of no use to the world. He passes away as if he never had been. There is an activity—"an inexhaustible fecundity of thought and plan—a brilliant and continued success" attending the man. Tested by these principles James A. Garfield was a great man.

No Diogenes needed to despair as he looked for a man while Garfield lived. He was a man after the divine ideal, the ideal muscular man in force. The ideal secular man in wealth. The ideal intellectual man in knowledge. God said to Jeremiah, "Seek in broad places if ye can find a man, one that executeth judgement and seeketh truth." The divine ideal man is one who executeth judgment and seeketh truth.

The knowledge, the judgment, the truth was Garfield's.

The ordinary observer says, when a man was mounted as high as he did, he may lose his head, and come to believe himself above the rest of the race. Garfield never lost his head. He was one of the people. He originated no court, flatterers he despised, slaves he would not have.

He mastered the ideas which are dominant in these times. He directed the ideas of his times. He was a representive of his times, of their interests and needs. The people came to see in him what they saw but dimly in themselves. He reflected their ideas and feelings. Hence they followed him as their leader. They enthusiastically adored him.

The American people will never tire of looking at Washington or Jefferson or Lincoln in every possible light. The interest in these men increases as time rolls on, so shall it be with Garfield. He had wonderful influence—it has been projected into the eternities.

That little lad, nameless and unhistoric who furnished his five loaves and two fishes on the shores of Tiberias, lives to-day. His generosity fed the five thousand.

From the first, Garfield exerted great influence over others. When he entered the Presidency of Hiram College the leading man of that institution was Philo Matheans. Henry James referring to Garfield, says—"there began to grow up in me an admiration and love for him that has never abated, and the like of which I have never known. A bow of recognition, or a single word from him was an inspiration to me." He possessed as an educator wonderful power to stimulate thought in others—to arouse courage in the feeble, to strengthen the moral muscle of the flaccids to pour in inspiration and to create a noble ideal of life in others.

He early attained eminence among others. A man may gain this upon a rotten pedestal, but it will crumble and fall. He who falls thus will be buried in the blackness of his own shame, and the records of eternity shall reveal his fate. Garfield knew that that is not always high so pronounced by the world. That only is elevated which has truth for its foundation. He began early in life the building of a christian character.

An old villager said to Livingston when but a lad, "Now my lad make religion the every day business of your life, and not a thing of fits and starts. For if you do not, temptation and other things will get the mastery over you." His future career made the aged man's advice almost prophetic.

The turning point in Garfield's life came while a sailor boy on the canal. On his first trip he fell overboard fourteen times. The last time he fell, he seized a piece of a rope which had slipped through a cleft in the deck, and pulled himself on board. Curling the rope he tried to throw it into that cleft, but it had lost the power of kinking. He sat down and reflected. "I have thrown this rope six hundred times, I might throw it ten times as many without its catching. Ten times six hundred are six thousand, so there are six thousand chances against my life. Against such odds Providence alone could save it. Providence then thinks my life worth saving and if that is so I will not throw it away on a canal boat. I will go home, get an education and become a man" You remember after he was shot and Dr. Bliss said, "Mr. President there is but one chance." "Then Dr. we will take that chance," was his characteristic reply.

After that trip he went home. As he drew near the log house he found his mother on her knees with an open Bible praying for him. He threw his arms about her neck and laid his head upon her bosom—gave his heart to his God and went forth to build up a strong christian manhood. When he started for school his good mother said, "James, serve God and work at your books."

When the celebrated Lord Chesterfield was asked by a Parisian lady, "Why, my Lord, does England still retain Christianity?" with a mixture of repartee and philosophy he replied, "Madam, as yet we have been able to find nothing better."

So Garfield, notwithstanding his regal intellect, comprehensive grasp of principles, love of science, delight in poetry and other imaginative works, notwithstanding his culture was broad and deep and magnificent, yet he never found anything better than Christianity. No American statesman had more personal friends among scientists, scholars and men of literature. He was the personal friend of Agassiz. Yet let me say to you young men today, he never outgrew Christianity. Rev. Dr. Power, his pastor, says of him, "It is as a christian we love to think of him now. It was this that made his life an invaluable boon.—He was no sectarian. His religion was as broad as the religion of Christ. He was a simple christian bound by no sectarian ties, and wholly in fellowship with pure spirits. He was a christologist rather than a theologist." In the formation of his character he recognized the need of the religion of Christ—accepted it and interwove it into the very warp and woof of his being.

On that eventful Sabbath in Chicago during the Presidential convention of 1880, when others were at their hotels and in Club rooms, planning for the battle of the giants that was to follow, Garfield walked from his hotel to the house of God and worshipped the God of his fathers.

"Those that honor me I will honor," saith the Lord. The Lord rewarded him with the nomination for the Presidency and with subsequent election to it.

He was not a politician. He was a statesman. He seldom consulted expediences. What is right, was with him the great question. There was a degree of integrity and sincerity about him that was truly refreshing. It cannot be said of him as it was said of one of our most distinguished politicians

"He wiggles in and wiggles out,
And leaves the public still in doubt.
Whether the snake, that made the track,
Was going South or coming back."

He never vociferated across the nation, "Religion has nothing to do with politics," and so there was no villiany in his motives or plans. He never opened a war with conscience. The man who says to christianity "Hands off," will say to the omniscient eye "Be shut," and to the omnipotent voice "Be still." He was no Jacob, the supplanter,—but Israel, the princely leader and prevailer with God and men. He won all hearts to himself. He had no enemies. The hand that struck him was not the hand of a personal enemy, but the hand of an enemy of the position he filled. He was an ardent friend of the south, though during the civil war he struck the Southern Confederacy some hard blows and earnestly sought in the Senate and on the field its overthrow. He expressed his desire that the day might soon dawn when under the crossed swords and locked shields of Americans, both north and south, our people shall sleep in peace and rise in liberty.—When the peace of God shall cover the nation from the lakes to the gulf. Hence the whole southern people are expressing their grief in telegrams and letters of condolence and floral offerings.

Garfield had great reverence for the family relationships, as son, husband and father. What an insight we have had into the affections of his home since the inauguration to the Presidency. The heroic wife, the fond old mother, the sweet Mollie, the sturdy boys—how moving it has been and how elevating even at this sad hour. That kiss given to her who gave him birth, and to her who shared his early toil, and now shared his trinmph, was a significant kiss. Some newspaper cynics criticised it but the revelations of that home life during those seventy-nine days have silenced all. He knew from his statesmanlike and christian outlook that one of the great bulwarks of our nation's prosperity is the Home. His home where an alter was reared upon which piety and patriotism placed self as the best offering has been like a fountain of life to the entire nation.

As he lay at Long Branch one Sabbath morning, he could see from his window on the one side the throbbing ocean, and on the other the little church and the throngs of people entering it. Soon there came floating on the air, from the worshipping congregation, the song "Jesus, lover of my soul." He was thrilled with emotion and the tear trickled down his cheek Mrs. Garfield, who was with him, knelt in prayer. Oh, the nation will never cease to thank God for the home religious life of the late President. It is fitting that the nation should endow her who is thus bereft of such a husband with sufficient means to lift her and her children above all the possibilities of need.

The world holds him in high esteem, and sorrowing memory. From every nation come words of condolence. The matchless Queen of England has ordered her court in mourning. A thing unparalleled in British history.

An attempt is being made to revive the memory of the prisoner of St. Helena. The unfolding of his life by Madame Remusat or Prince Metternich will not accomplish it. Imperial as was his intellect, imperishable as was his martial prowess, grand as was his career in the estimation of a hero worshipping world, yet he will remain forgotten or remembered with contempt. But this man, whom a nation lays away to rest to-day,—this son of poverty—this college graduate—this educator—this astute scholar—this polished and eloquent orator—this notable congressman—this senator elect—this world renowned President—this affectionate son—this loving husband—this thoughtful father—this farseeing statesman—this freeman who drew his sword only for liberty—this christian minister who declared the riches of the gospel in the pulpit.

Divinely gifted man
Whose life in low estate began
And on a simple village green,
Who breaks his births invidious bars
And grasps the skirts of happy chance,
And breasts the blow of circumstance,
And grapples with his evil stars,
Who makes by force his merit known,
And lives to clutch the golden keys,
To mould a mighty state's decrees,
And shade the whispers of a throne
And moving up from high to higher,
Becomes on Fortune's crowning slope
The pillar of a Nations hope
The centre of a world's desire.

James A. Garfield Still Lives.

Byron has sung:

"They never fail who die in a great cause
The Block may soak their gore,
Their head may sodden in the sun,
Be strung to city gates and castle walls,
But still their spirit walks abroad,
Though years elapse and others share as dark a doom,
They but augment the deep and sweeping thoughts
Which overpowers all others and conduct
The world at last to freedom."

I dismiss you in Garfields own words on the death of Lincoln, uttered in the House of Representatives: "Follow the lead of this great man and obey the behests of God."

"He has sounded forth His trumpet which shall never call retreat,
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgement seat,
Be swift my soul to answer, be jubilant my feet,
For God is marching on."

Cloud and darkness are round about Him. His pavillion is dark waters and thick clouds of the skies. Justice and judgement are the establishment of His throne. Mercy and truth shall go before His face. Fellow citizens, God reigns and the government at Washington still lives."

HERALD OFFICE.

The Steam Engine.

The Marquis of Worcester is commonly regarded as the inventor of the steam engine; but perhaps the most that can be justly said is that he was the first person who imagined the possibility of constructing such a machine. The individual who actually first did construct an engine for raising water by the alternate force and condensation of steam was Captain Savary, who published an account of his invention in a small tract, called the "Miner's Friend."

In 1705, Newcomen obtained a patent for an improved steam engine; and in 1717 Henry Beighton made some further improvements, one of which is allowed to have been that of causing the steam-cock to be opened and shut by machinery; a man having been previously employed for that purpose. A few other improvements were made by different persons, but they did not affect the general action of the engine; and although defects in its power had been noticed, their cause was unknown until 1765, when happily for the cause of the arts and manufactures of Britain, the subject engaged the ingenuity of Mr. Watt. The model of a Newcomen engine fell into his hands to be repaired, and in this he presently observed the immense loss of steam occasioned by its admission into the cylinder, just cooled for condensation; indeed he went so far as to ascertain by experiment that half of the steam of the boiler was thus lost. But the circumstance that excited his greatest surprise was that the injection water gained infinitely more heat than of a quantity of boiling water, equal to that required to form the steam, had been added to it. In this dilemna, he is understood to have consulted the celebrated Dr. Black, whose discoveries on the subject of heat were then the theme of general wonder, and from him he obtained such an explanation of the difficulty as enabled him so to alter the construction of the engine that with rather less than one-third of the quantity of steam it would produce the same power as one of equal dimensions on Newcomen's plan.

But great as was this improvement, it [illegible] part of the successful achievements of Mr. Watt in this department of mechanics. The application and utility of the engine he extended in various important ways; and at last arrived at that climax of improvement which consisted in making steam serve to elevate as well as depress the piston. An engine upon this plan, executed at Mr. Watt's manufactory at Soho, near Birmingham, was first employed at the Albion mills, in 1778.

Sleeping Apartments.

A southern aspect is best for sleeping rooms, and the sun should be freely admitted for at least three hours each day. I have a strong prejudice in favor of the head of the bed being toward the north, and have known some physicians who decidedly favored the practice, albeit they would not commit themselves postively to what might be after all an old woman's whim. Bare floors, with here and there a rug for convenience sake, are far preferable to carpets in sleeping rooms. But if carpets are used, let them be light; so light that their frequent taking up and shaking will not be a heavy task. Never use a carpet containing much green coloring matter; nor buy paper in which it is a prominent color: repeated experiments have proved them unwholesome. Whitewashed walls are the most cleanly and safe, especially in a room which is apt to gather dampness.

Windows should be made to open both at the top and bottom, and never, except during a storm, should be entirely closed. Even the most delicate person can bear a little fresh air, if only through an aperture half an inch in width, and that little may have vital efficacy. I lately saw a statement made upon what seemed good authority, that muddy water is a more healthy drink than pure water; but so far as I know, foul air has not been recommended as more wholesome for inhalation than pure air.

Use such kind and amount of bedding as produces the most perfect feeling of comfort. Do not lie on a hard bed if it causes you to rise next morning with aching bones or sore flesh; yet a moderately hard mattress, especially if it have springs beneath it, is undoubtedly less debilitating for weak and nervous persons than a more yielding one.

Use thick comfortables and blankets in winter; thin bed-quilts in summer, which can be put through a tub of cold water and a wringer two or three times during the season. Eschew the awkward, square pillows which many housekeepers consider essential to offer their company. There is no greater misnomer about a bed than a pair of these pillows stuffed full and hard as a bag of bran. A white counterpane on the bed gives it, and indeed the whole room, a cheerful look. False sheet tops turned over the outside, and pillow covers, with initials wrought in pink or white, makes a very pretty appearance. They can be taken off at night and so kept nice for a long time.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

If we die to day, the sun will shine as brightly, and the birds will sing as sweetly, to-morrow. Business will not be suspended a moment, and the great mass will not bestow a thought upon our memories. "Is he dead?" will be the solemn inquiry of a few, as they pass to their work. No one will miss us except our immediate connections, and in a short time they will forget and laugh as merrily as when we sat beside them. Thus shall we all, now active in life, pass away. Our children crowd close behind us, and they will soon be gone. In a few years, not a living being can say, "I remember him." We lived in another age, and did business with those who slumber in the tomb. Thus is life. How rapidly it passes?

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca, with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independence, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. Another great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

THE LAST RITES.

(Concluded from Fourth Page.)

EXTRA SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The following has just been issued from the Department of State:

By the President of the United States of America—A Proclamation.

WHEREAS, Objects of interest to the United States require that the Senate should be convened at an early date to receive and act upon such communications as may be made to it on the part of the Executive; now, therefore, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, have considered it to be my duty to issue this, my proclamation, declaring that an extraordinary occasion requires the Senate of the United States to convene for the transaction of business, at the Capital in the city of Washington, on Monday, the 19th day of October next, at noon on that day, of which all who shall at that time be entitled to act as members of that body are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States, at Washington, the twenty-third day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and sixth.

(Signed) CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

By the President:
JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

THE MONUMENT.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 23.—The following is self-explanatory: The undersigned have been charged with the duty of receiving contributions and erecting a monument in Lake View Cemetery over the grave of our lamented President, James A. Garfield. In order that all may share in the privilege and honor of the work, we recommend that subscriptions be limited to $1 each, and the same collected as early as possible, and especially on Monday of the funeral. It being also the day set apart by the President for a national fast, each locality throughout the States and Territories is requested to organize for this object in such way as it may deem most effective. Remittances should be made to the Second National Bank, of Cleveland, which has been appointed treasurer of the Garfield monument fund.

(Signed) J. H. WADE,
H. B. PAYNE,
JOSEPH PERKINS."

MEDICAL OPINION.

The London Lancet, discussing the case of [illegible] says: "The bullet did not wound any vital part in its path, and had the sinuous wound it made closed up, all would have been well, but the wound did not heal, because its walls were bruised and so injured that primary union was impossible. The retention of pent-up and putrid matter in the wound almost insured the absorption of septic poison and death. It may be regarded as an open question how far successful an attempt to render the wound aseptic might have been. It would be unjust to blame the surgeons, and it is a matter of congratulation that they were not led away by a vulgar desire to extract the bullet which had done no harm since it once reached its resting place near the pancreas, and its extraction per se would not have influenced at all the subsequent course of the case."

QUEEN VICTORIA'S TRIBUTE.

It is composed of white roses, smilax, and stephanotis. It is accompanied by a mourning card, bearing the following inscription: "Queen Victoria, to the memory of the late President Garfield—an expression of her sorrow and sympathy with Mrs. Garfield and the American nation. Sept. 22, 1881."

AFTER DEATH.

Of the appearance of the president after death, Benedict, the undertaker, said: "His face had a life-like appearance. There was no look of pain upon it; he looked just as if he had fallen quietly asleep." If he suffered extreme pain his sufferings must have been short. His form is greatly wasted, but it is not a skeleton by any means. The president was dressed in the same suit of clothes he wore in delivering his inaugural address, with the exception of a pair of silk stockings knit for him by his mother and lately received. The coffin is six feet three inches long, and covered with black cloth, with velvet moldings. The handles and thumbscrews are solid silver. The inside is upholstered with ruffled white satin. The coffin-plate is of silver, and the inscription, written by Atty. Gen. MacVeagh, is as follows:

James Abram Garfield. Born Nov. 19, 1831; died president of the United States, Sept. 19, 1881.

THE FUNERAL AT CLEVELAND.

LYING IN STATE.

As the evening passed Saturday there was but little diminution of the throng that encircled Monumental Square. The east and west arches were surrounded by people who gazed into the catafalque, aided by the glare of the numerous electrical lights. Inside the pavilion were six Knights Templar and a squad of the Cleveland Greys on guard.

AT MIDNIGHT,

But few sentinels and workmen remained inside the guard line, though many interested people were yet upon the streets outside.

SCENES NEAR THE PAVILION SUNDAY.

It had been a bright and beautiful day, though rather warm. The streets began to be thronged very early. People poured into the city by every avenue of approach, and all the railways ran every available car to accommodate the unexampled rush toward Cleveland. Monumental Park, where Garfield's body lies in state, of course was the center of attraction. A steel wire was stretched around the ten acres of park and soldiers patroled the walks, keeping the multitude outside.

A LAST LOOK AT THE CASKET.

At 9 o'clock Sunday morning a double line of militia was stationed nearly a quarter of a mile to the west of the pavilion, and a similar line from the other side to the east line of the park. By this route, thus marked out by soldiery, the people were permitted to enter the park from the west, pass through the pavilion three and four abreast with uncovered heads, look at the casket and decorations, and then proceed beyond the park. It is estimated that not less than

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND PEOPLE

Passed through the pavilion in this manner. At dusk electric and calcium lights illuminated the scene, and people were allowed to go through all night. The line of people awaiting their turn to enter the park stretched west for about half a mile, at times reaching nearly across the viaduct over the river. Perfect order prevailed, everybody being imbued with the solemnity of the occasion. Hundreds wept as they gazed at the casket containing the remains of the

DEARLY BELOVED CHIEF MAGISTRATE.

The coffin was not opened, it being the widow's wish that the face should not be exposed, on account of the unnatural look, but instead visitors looked upon the features of the dead depicted in an admirable portrait placed just at the head.

Guards of Knights Templar and the Cleveland Grays, in full uniform, were posted all about the pavilion.

For one hour, from 4 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when the immense multitude of lookers on which crowded the streets bordering the park was the greatest, the Marine Band of Washington, stationed on a platform immediately south of the pavilion, played selections of solemn sacred music, a highly appropriate and impressive feature of the sabbath memorial service.

At 5 o'clock a shower came up, but had no perceptible effect in diminishing the size of the crowd present.

THE LAST DAY.

The morning of this sad day—the day on which the remains of the dead president are to be consigned to the tomb—broke calm and peaceful. The people were astir early; indeed it can scarcely be said that the city slept.—All night there were comers and goers at the great pavillion where rested the remains of the president. The people seemed to be watching with their dead.

VIEWING THE CASKET.

By 8 o'clock people were pressing in all directions anxious to embrace the last opportunity to do honor to the dead. They were thrown into a column eight abreast, and its flow for the next hour was steady and rapid. It was the last opportunity. At 9, according to the orders from those in charge the gates were to be closed.—The moments sped rapidly, and the guards hurried the line; yet it grew and the anxious people fell in, and pressed forward as best they might, but when the hour of closing came thousands yet were waiting. To close the gates against them and shut them out forever from their loved dead was painful to the authorities; but to manage successfully the work of this day, it was necessary, and at nine o'clock precisely the gates closed.

SERVICES AT THE CATAFALQUE.

Promptly at 10 o'clock the military escort of the remains entered the enclosure and were assigned the front seats on the platform. Gen. Sherman and Admiral Nichols marched ahead and were followed by Gen. Sheridan and Admiral Porter, and so on, an army and navy officer marching together. Following them came the United States senators, each swathed in a silk sash, rosette studded. At the same time came the judges of the Supreme court. These were given seats with and back of the army and navy officers. At 10:20 the members of the house of representatives entered.—Each of the special committee wore a black silk sash, with a white rosette, the others white silk, with a rosette of black. While these were filing into places a line of carriages drew up at the eastern arch of the square and were admitted one by one. From the first two alighted, Grandma and Mrs. Garfield, Miss Mollie, James, Harry, Abram and Irving Garfield. Following them were Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph, Colonel, Mrs. and Miss Rockwell, Gen. Swaim, Dr. and Mrs. Boynton, Captain and Mrs. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon, Private Secretary Brown and Mrs. Warren Young, and all members of the cabinet and their wives. Seats had been provided for all these under the pavilion around the catafalque. Mrs. Garfield walked on the arm of her son Harry and Grandma off the arm of James. Both were closely veiled, and their features could not be seen; but they walked firmly and seemed resolute. All the family and dear friends were in their seats before the ministers arrived, and it was then that the governors of the states and prominent delegations of citizens arrived. At 10:40 a. m. the assemblage was called to order by Hon. John P. Robinson, who announced the first exercise to be singing.—The Cleveland vocal society then sang Beethoven's funeral march.—During the singing the minute guns were heard in the distance, and also the distant music of the bands of the forming columns of the procession.—Following the music Bishop Bedell, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Ohio, read the lessons from Job 14, and 1st Corinthians, 15, and the 20th of Revelations. Then followed the opening prayer by Rev. Dr. Ross C. Houghton, of Cleveland. The choir next sang the grand chorus from Mendellsohn's "St. Paul." The funeral address was then delivered by Rev. Dr. Errett.

THE PROCESSION.

The funeral car bearing the body of the late president of the United States started from the public square for the cemetery at 12:15 o'clock, Cleveland time. Preceding it was a long line of carriages, and preceding the carriages were miles and miles of odd-fellows, masons and knights templar. The carriage containing the relatives and intimate friends of the deceased followed directly after the funeral car, and behind these were miles and miles of United States, state and municipal military, in regiments and companies. Behind these came citizens and distinguished visitors in carriages. The procession in all stretches its magnificent length over a distance variously estimated at from eight to ten miles. It is probable that many of those in carriages will not be able to leave the city before the funeral car enters the cemetery gate. It was a magnificent spectacle—the grandest ever seen by the hundreds of thousands assembled here. Not since the mournful day sixteen years ago, when the remains of Abraham Lincoln were borne through the forest city, has anything that could be in any way compared with the solemnity and tasteful grandeur of this spectacle been seen here. And then there were scarcely half the number of visitors in the city, and the population was much smaller. Bands of music are scattered through the procession, at intervals far enough apart to prevent discordant sounds, and each of them, with draped instruments and muffled drums, is playing some funeral dirge or mournful hymn appropriate to the occasion. The funeral car is a magnificent chariot of death, and the coffin is buried under a profusion of flowers. As it passes through the dense throngs, which form a black mourning border along the entire line of the procession, men bow their bared heads in sorrow and offer every mark of respect in their power to the memory of the honored dead. Guns boom and roar and fire and church bells toll as the cortege moves on, and the most mournful aspect of the sorrowful occasion is the quiet which is everywhere maintained.

AT THE GRAVE.

It was about 2 o'clock when the funeral car passed under the mourning portals erected at the cemetery and the procession wound its way through the city of the dead. The decorations here were profuse and magnificent.—After the last rites were performed the casket was carried into the vault, and before three o'clock the crowd began to disperse, moving into the city in clouds. Every place of business is closed, and the city, notwithstanding the immense throngs, presents a very sad appearance. Not a loud word is heard on the street. A smile is seldom seen on the faces of the people, and laughter is entirely hushed. The firing of the minute guns, the tolling of the bells, the profusion of mourning both on the buildings and on the people, all tend to throw a cloud of gloom over this beautiful city. The weather has been very warm, unpleasantly so. All the arrangements were as perfect as they could be. There was no confusion and there is very little dissatisfaction indeed. The people of Cleveland have worked like Trojans to make the visitors as comfortable as possible. But the position in which they are placed will be better appreciated when it is remembered that there are as many visitors here as visited Chicago on the day of Grant's reception or during the triennial conclave, while the city is scarcely a quarter the size of the great metropolis of Illinois.

DIED.

COMFORT—At Tecumseh, Sept. 18, of cholera infantum, Libbie M., infant daughter of Samuel E. and Abbie L. Comfort, aged 1 month and 25 days. Gone but not forgotten.

DAVIS—On the evening of Wednesday, Sept. 21st, Capt. E. Davis, of Franklin, Mich.

Captain Ebenezer Davis was born in Old Concord, Mass., June 28th, 1800, and was the son of Nathaniel and Millicent Davis, who were pioneers of Old Concord. Ebenezer Davis lived with his parents until he was 20 years old. In the spring of 1829 he engaged in the grocery business in New York. In 1831 he sold out and came to Michigan, arriving in Detroit in May. He immediately, in company with Job Graves, started on foot on the Chicago turnpike, and after traveling as far west as Jonesville turned about and located in Franklin where he lived until he died. In 1832 he was in the Black Hawk war, as a private, a member of Capt. Hickson's company. In 1834 he was made a Captain of the militia, and in 1835 commanded a company of 40 in the Toledo war. April 7, 1824, he married Mary H. Skinner, of Medford, Mass. By her he had 5 children only one of whom, Charles, born in Franklin and now residing on the home farm, still lives. October 13th, 1841 he married Eunice Hand, of New Lebanon, N. Y. By her he had two children, Mariette E., wife of Henry Aldrich, born Aug. 20, 1842, died June 11, 1868, and Helen M., born July 21, 1849, died Nov. 17, 1866. Capt. Davis was a member of the Universalist church in this village, to which faith he was much attached, and he was no less remarkable for active christian experience. He died in the full exercise of the faith he professed. He chose the good part which can not be taken from him, and which remained a source of satisfaction, of joy, and even of visions in that hour when wealth is vain.

Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. May we all die the death of the righteous, and may our last end be like his.

CUPPLES—In Tecumseh, at the residence of her father on Tuesday the 13th of September, 1881, Maggie J. Cupples, in the twenty-fourth year of her age.

From a child, the deceased had enjoyed robust health up to within four months of her death. The attack, thought at first not to be of a serious nature, soon began to perplex and baffle the physicians. The most tender and thoughtful care could only aid her in the stern conflict with death. The sincere attachment of her many friends was deepened by the daily manifestations of cheerfulness and thoughtful concern for those about her, fortitude, patience and hope, during those weary months of wrecking pain and gradual approach to the grave. The profession of Christ publicly made nine years earlier was ever abundantly honored. None doubted her discipleship. Piety burnished and crowned the natural amiability of her character and the sweetness of her disposition. These very gifts and graces so praiseworthy, rendered the final separation all the harder for family and friends. It would seem that just such lives ought ever to be greatly prolonged in a world like this, but God knows better than man when a life is ripe for eternity.

And now although the Good Shepherd has called this loved one in early life to His upper fold, he has given assurance that he will come again shortly and receive all his own unto himself. "Even so come Lord Jesus" in thine own time, for behold we wait "until the day break and the shadows flee away," for "There is no night there." W. G.

A Ministerial Statement.

Rev. C. A. Harvey, D. D., is the popular financial secretary of Howard University, and is specially fitted to judge of merit and demerit. In a recent letter from Washington to a friend he said: "I have for two years past been acquainted with the remedy known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and with its remarkable curative efficiency in obstinate and so-called incurable cases of Bright's disease in this city. In some of these cases, which seemed to be in the last stages, and which had been given up by practitioners of both schools, the speedy change wrought by this remedy seemed but little less than miraculous. I am convinced that for Bright's diseases in all its stages, including the first symptoms, which seem so slight but are so dangerous, no remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with this."

MACON CENTER.

Heavy rains Saturday night and Sunday.

Macon is contributing nobly to the relief fund for the fire sufferers, partly through local organization and through Tecumseh and Ridgeway—altogether about $500.

The leading topic of conversation is the excursion from Gault to Adrain last Thursday, altogether very discreditable and a clear case of "the tail wagging the dog." The station agent in procuring excursion tickets underestimated the number that would be likely to attend the county fair, so that at least one-third boarded the train Thursday morning without a ticket, supposing the conductor would collect excursion rates, but Mr. Conductor was not thus instructed, and in the confusion Adrian was reached before matters were adjusted, some going free, others at excursion rates, and others paying full fare, all of which had a tendency to excite and dissatisfy, and it was evident that matters would come to a crisis on the return trip. And sure enough when the crowd—about 300—boarded the train in the afternoon, a number of whom were well filled with "fountain water" with bottles in hand drinking and carousing through the cars, it was evident a storm was brewing. When a few miles out, the train was stopped to put some one off who refused to pay. A little further on another stop to collect the fair, and in the hurry and confusion it was claimed that the conductor failed to make change to a number handing him bills, and when the train stopped at Gault the conductor was taken off and made to disgorge to those claiming, and a general melee ensued; nobody seriously injured, but a promiscous mussing up.

Stephen Hunter and son Judson, reported so very low in our last, have since died, the former at eleven o'clock Friday evening, Sept. 28, and the latter at 11 o'clock Saturday morning the 29th, ages 62 and 23 respectively. Both funerals were conducted at the same hour—3 P. M.—on Sunday at the Macon Center church, under the direction of Revs. Field and De Spelder, and the largest attendance ever known in that vicinity. The autopsy in the case of Judson, Saturday evening by Drs. Howell and Baker revealed an incurable condition, a portion of the large intestine being congealed to the wall of the abdomen causing contraction of the same, with enlargement of the liver, ulcerated condition of the lungs and general debilitated condition. The family relatives wish us to acknowledge their gratitude and obligations to their neighbors and friends for their assistance, care and sympathy in this terrible affliction.

How Long Would it take to Count Two Millions.

Over two million volumes of the revised edition of the New Testament, were sold on the first day of its issue. These figures can only be equaled by the enormous sale of Swayne's Ointment for Itching Piles, which is universally used as a standard remedy for itching at night, when one thinks that pin worms are crawling about the rectum. To calculate the extent of its sale in actual figures, would involve the labor of a life time. Will you be pestered longer from the aggravating Piles.

Hudson Post: Saturday night about midnight a barn south of McKenzie's brick yard was burned. The fire department turned out, but finding it useless proceeded but part way to the fire. The barn was the property of the Adrian savings bank, and was occupied by Wm. Faulkner, who lost a large quantity of hay and some farming implements, said to have been insured. Messrs. Wm. Pomeroy and Dan. Foster lost a new separator stored there temporarily.

THE OLDEN TIME.

In a late number of "The Great West," of Denver, Col., is the following tribute to the Lysters, written by Geo. C. Bates. It will doubtless be interesting to many of our readers.:

Ex-Gov. Hendricks, of Indiana, says a word for ministers' sons, among whom he thinks bad ones are really rare. They make the best of our authors, teachers and editors. "When men of this kind have become worthless," he thinks "it may have arisen from a want of business training, by which they did not learn thrifty habits, and yet lacked the religious stimulation of their parents."

We were forcibly reminded of the truth of Gov. Hendricks' remarks above, as we passed a National bank in this city a few mornings since—when the sun was shining in all its glory, as we saw sitting at the cashier's table a tall, slender young gentleman, very closely shaven, neatly dressed, with white necktie and vest; for it was one of our hot mornings, and with a long face, and very intellectual features. Wrapt up in his business of the money changers, that class from whose temple Christ drove away all such, and instantly memory went back over forty-six years to the byegones of Michigan and the Oaklands of Lenawee. It was a wild and stormy day, the 21st of March, 1836, the equinox of March—that with a young merchant from Detroit, the writer hereof dismounted at twilight at the Green tavern, then kept by Jesse Button, and during that evening, before a large hickory fire made the acquaintance of some of its distinguished people, among whom was Ross Wilkins, for thirty years District Judge of the United States for Michigan, and the Rev. Mr. Lyster, the Rector of the first Episcopal church erected in the interior of Michigan.

Born in Ireland about seventy-five years ago, and inheriting a handsome fortune, he went into the church, because he believed with all his heart and soul and mind in Christ Jesus and his teachings, and in all his long life and labor and ministrations no man ever followed more closely the teachings of the Saviour on the mount, than did he, the Rev. Mr. Lyster. Locating in the beautiful village of Tecumseh, amidst its splendid oaks, he erected a very neat little church in pure gothic style at his own sole expense, and close by a regular, beautiful English-gothic cottage, which with the little church in the oak grove were objects of pride to all the neighbors, and of curiosity to the thousands of emigrants who streamed along daily from Detroit to Chicago in their covered wagons, for in those days there were no railroads west of Utica.

In that beautiful little church, in those early days, this true man of God gathered together the early pioneers and soon had a membership and congregation embracing all manner of Christians for miles and miles around. On the next evening, the 22d of March, 1834, the Wednesday evening service took place, and in that church he preached, amidst the fearful equinoxial storm, a sermon from the text, "Pray that your flight be not in winter," one of the most classical, eloquent, learned and soul-stirring sermons ever delivered from the pulpit of Michigan; and as we sit here now, after forty-seven years' absence in this grand mountain region, we tremble with excitement, which memory alone creates. Years afterward he moved further in the interior of Lenawee county, built a new church and home among the interior lakes there and, with a devotion to the cause and the Redeemer rarely known, he spent a long life and all his money in building up the church of God and bringing within the folds the early pioneers of the beautiful peninsula, Michigan. And now after life's fitful dream is o'er—after having fulfilled every duty as a Christian, a man of God and a perfect gentleman, he sleeps well, amidst the oaklands and prairies of his adopted home. Not only this but he left a family of sons, who, inheriting from their father his good qualities, and being educated as American gentlemen should be, have proved that Gov. Hendricks is right in his theory, that the sons of clergymen, as a general rule, are not bad boys who naturally go to Hades; for among that family there are three, at least, who do honor to their parents, their country, their Creator, to society and themselves, one of whom, a brave Union boy, entered service for our Union and the Constitution at Detroit in the First Michigan Infantry, April 16, 1861, served with honor and credit all through the war, and is to-day a captain of United States infantry on duty in the Indian territory, still clinging to the blue flag, still a soldier in the Republican army. Another is a distinguished physician and surgeon, Dr. Lyster, at Detroit, and the other is that well-dressed young gentleman, with classic features, strict devotion to his business in the First National bank of Denver, Theodore G. Lyster, Esq., assistant cashier of that bank. That his days may always follow on in his noble father's footsteps is the prayer of all the sons of Michigan.

Detroit Evening News: If it had not been for the personal effort of Mr. George Hotchkiss, a Bay City man now living at Chicago, that city would not have sent a dollar to the Michigan fire sufferers. The Michigan people who sent $300,000 to Chicago in 1871 thought that in giving to the poor they were lending to the Lord. They were mistaken—they were making a permanent investment in Chicago.

P. S. MCKINNON, Recorder.

WITH the steady march of improvement in science and mechanics, medicine has kept even pace. It now gives us remedies in a perfection of form and composition that the crudities of earlier medical science never approached. Among the most effective of medicines are Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills—beautiful, sugar-coated, glistening globules—universally known and used as a reliable family physic. These pills possess great efficacy as a preventive of, or cure for the diseases incident to this section of the country; especially diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, which often result in dangerous fever. They also give vigor to the circulation, remove constipation, create an appetite, and aid digestion, thereby promoting health. Their ingredients are entirely vegetable, and they are a safe remedy in the hands of the most inexperienced.—Macon, Ga., Telegraph & Messenger.

Big Results from Little Causes.

"Do you know?" remarked a man to his friend on Chestnut street, a day or two since, "I believe both Conkling and Platt had a bad case of skin disease when they resigned!" "What makes you think?" inquired the listener in astonishment. "Well, you see they acted in such an eruptive manner—so rash-ly as it were. Save?" "Oh! yes, I save," replied the other, "they were boil—ing over and merely resigned to humor themselves, I suppose." If such is the case, the National difficulty might have been averted by applying Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases.

Catarrh.

Relief in five minutes in every case; gratifying, wholesome relief beyond a money value. Cure begins from first application, and is rapid, radical and permanent. Keep in the stables and always at hand Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment, as it is the best remedy for hurts, bruises, strains &c.

WHERE IS YOUR BOY TO-NIGHT?

Life is teeming with evil snares,
The gates of sin are wide,
The rosy fingers of pleasure wave
And beckon the young inside.
Man of the world, with open purse
Seeking your own delight,
Pause, ere reason is wholly gone—
Where is your boy to-night?

Sirens are singing on every hand,
Luring the ear of youth,
Gilded falsehood with silver notes
Drowneth the voice of Truth.
Dainty lady in costly robes,
Your parlors gleam with light,
Fate and beauty your senses steep—
Where is your boy to-night?

Tempting whispers of royal spoil
Flatter the youthful soul
Eagerly entering into life,
Restive of all control,
Needs are many, and duties stern
Crowd in the weary night,
Father, buried in business cares,
Where is your boy to-night?

Pitfalls lurk in the flowery ways,
Vice hath a golden gate,
Who shall guide the unwary feet
Into the highway straight?
Patient worker with willing hand
Keeping the home-hearth bright,
Tired mother with tender eyes,
Where is your boy to-night?

Turn his feet from the evil paths
Ere they have entered in,
Keep him unspotted while yet ye may
Earth is so stained with sin.
Ere he has learned to follow wrong,
Teach him to love the right,
Watch, ere watching is wholly vain—
Where is your boy to-night?

A Story of Real Life.

Mr. Marooney is foreman of a foundry, and gets a salary of thirty dollars a week. With his salary the family ought to get on well and save money, but they did not. Mr. Marooney has a cousin, a shoemaker, who only gets fifteen dollars a week, yet sails right along like lightning express, while Marooney comes lumbering along like a freight with a hot box.

"How do you manage it, Jack," he would frequently ask, "to get along the way you do? Here, you actually keep your family, and save money on fifteen dollars a week, while it takes every cent I make to live, and I get double the pay!"

"Oh, I don't manage it at all," says Jack, "just take my money home to the old woman every Saturday night, and and she takes her five dollars to run the house with, and puts the rest away."

"Do you give her all the money?" asked Mr. Marooney, musingly.

"Oh, no, not quite; I keep a little for tobacco during the week, and a trifle to keep me from being lonesome. If I keep it all in my pocket, I would spend it sure, but Mary keeps it right and safe."

Mr. Marooney talked it over with his wife that night, and they concluded to try Jack's plan. The following Saturday night he brought home his thirty dollars, for her level best to set the table on five. The first week she squeezed through somehow and along with six and a half. Mr. Marooney was quite pleased and began laying awake at night thinking about what kind of a house he would build. He thought a plain rustic cottage would be about right. The next week the expenses footed up five dollars and eighty cents, and Marooney changed his design for a future residence from frame to brick. The next week she brought it down thirty cents more, and he added a wing with a wash house. Then she made a superhuman struggle, quit buying milk, and came within two shillings of the goal for which she had been striving. Mr. Marooney decided on an iron fence in front of the premises. The next week she lost ground, slipped and came out at the six-dollar post. Mr. Marooney thought a neat paling fence was good enough for anybody, but when the ensuing week she came in with flying colors and struck the five-dollar mark in both eyes, Mr. Marooney had the top rail reinstated and granite running up to the door. The next week she took the money she had saved, went and bought her a love of a hat, too cute for anything, a black silk dress, a cherub of a cloak that made the woman next door cry with envy till her nose got sore, and Mr. Marooney came to the conclusion that it didn't pay to live in one's property, keeping up repairs, insurance, etc., and the worry and stew and dread of fire and earthquakes more than counterbalanced any trifling advantages there might be.

Philological Curiosities.

There are a number of words in the English language each of which contains all the five regular vowels, but it would puzzle almost anyone to think of more than one or two at short notice. The following may be given as examples: Education, mansuration, reputation, regulation, emulation, perturbation, repudiation. Besides these there are several words each containing all the vowels, including the "y." Of these we may mention revolutionary, elocutionary and unquestionably. The word invisibility may be noted as a peculiar word, for it contains the letter "i" six times. Mississippi and Tennessee are each spelled with only four different letters of the alphabet, although one contains eleven letters and the other nine. Schnapps, a word of one syllable and eight letters, contains but one vowel. There are no words in the English language of more than eight syllables, and of those containing that number we may mention incomprehensibility.

A lady friend of ours, says an exchange, always carries in her pocket a little box of cayenne pepper, to use in an emergency against tramps and loafers who infest the street in the evening, and frequently insult ladies when they are alone and unprotected. A few evenings since, she was on her way to visit a lady friend, when she was suddenly accosted by a strange man, who threw one arm around her person, and with the other made a dash for a gold watch which she carried in her belt. Without fainting or screaming, she used her right hand, which the thief had failed to pinion, pulled out her pepper box, and let him have three doses of cayenne pepper where it would do the most good—in his eyes. He loosened his hold on the brave little woman without anybody's assistance, lost all desire for the lady's watch, and walked off doubled up like a jack-knife, with both hands to his face, and howling with pain.

A Sunday School teacher asked a little girl who was the first man. She answered that she didn't know. The question was then put to an Irish girl, who answered, "Adam, sir," with apparent satisfaction. "La!" said the first child, "you needn't feel so grand about it—he wasn't an Irishman."

Sunrise and Sunset.

The following gorgeous description of a sunrise is from an oration by Edward Everett, at the inauguration of the Cambridge Observatory:

"Much, however, as we are indebted to our observatories for elevating our conceptions of the heavenly bodies, they present even to the unaided sight scenes of glory which words are too feeble to describe. I had occasion, a few weeks since, to take the early train from Providence to Boston, and for this purpose rose at two o'clock in the morning. Everything around was wrapt in darkness and hushed in silence, broken only by what seemed at that hour, the unearthly clank and rush of the train. It was a mild, serene, mid-summer night—the sky was without a cloud—the winds were whist. The moon, then in the last quarter, had just risen, and the stars shone with a spectral lustre, but little affected by her presence. Jupiter, two hours high, was the herald of the day—the Pleiades just above the horizon shed their sweet influence in the East; Lyra sparkled near the zenith; Andromeda vailed her newly-discovered glories from the naked eye South; the steady pointers far beneath the Pole, looked meekly up from the depths of the North to their Sovereign.

Such was the glorious spectacle as I entered the train. As we proceeded, the timid approach of twilight became more perceptible; the intense blue of the sky began to soften; the smaller stars, like little children, went first to rest; the sister-beams of the Pleiades soon melted together; but bright constellations of the West and East remained unchanged. Steadily the wonderous transfiguration went on. Hands of angels hidden from mortal eyes shifted the scenery of the heavens; the glories of night dissolved into the glories of dawn. The blue sky now turned more softly gray; the great watch-stars shut up their holy eyes; the east began to kindle. Faint streaks of purple soon blushed along the sky; the whole celestial concave was filled with the inflowing tides of the morning light, which came pouring down from above in one great ocean of radiance. At length, as we reached the Blue Hills, a flash of purple fire blazed out from above the horizon, and turned the dewy tear-drops of flower and leaf into rubies and diamonds. In a few seconds the everlasting gates of the morning were thrown wide open, and the lord of day, arrayed in glories too severe for the gaze of man, began his course.

I do not wonder at the superstition of the ancient Magians, who in the morning of the world went up to the hill-tops of Central Asia, and ignorant of the true God, adored the most glorious work of his hand. But I am filled with amazement when I am told that in this enlightened age, and in the heart of the Christian world, there are persons who can witness this daily manifestation of the power and wisdom of the Creator, and yet say in their hearts, 'There is no God.'"

As a companion piece to the above, we reproduce a description of a sunset, written for an Ohio paper by Hon. S. S. Cox which won for him the name of Sunset Cox:

"What a stormful sunset was that of last night! How glorious the storm and how splendid the setting of the sun. We do not remember ever to have seen the like on our round globe. The scene opened in the West, with a whole horizon full of a golden inter-penetrating lustre which colored the foliage and brightened every object into its own rich dyes. The colors grew deeper and richer until the golden lustre was transformed into a storm-cloud, full of finest lightning, which leaped in dazzling zigzags all round and over the city. The wind arose with fury, the slender shrubs and the giant trees made obeisance to his majesty. Some even snapped before its force. The strawberry beds and grass plats "turned up their whites" to see Zephrus march by. As the rain came, and the pools formed, and the gutters hurried away, thunder roared grandly, and the fire bells caught the excitement and rung with hearty chorus. The South and East received the copious showers, and the West at once brightened up in a long polished belt of azure, worthy of a Sicilian sky.

Presently a cloud appeared in the azure belt, in the form of a castelled city. It became more vivid, revealing strange forms of peerless fanes and alabaster temples, and glories rare and grand in this mundane sphere. It reminds us of Wadsworth's splendid verse in his "Excursion:"

> "The appearance instantaneously disclosed,
> Was of a mighty city, boldly say
> A wilderness of buildings, sinking far
> And self withdrawn into a wonderous depth,
> Far sinking into splendor without end!"

But the city vanished only to give place to another isle, where the most beautiful forms of foliage appeared, imaging a Paradise in the distant and purified air.

The sun, wearied with the elemental commotion, sank behind the green plains of the West. The "great eye in heaven," however, went not down without a dark brow hanging over its departing light. The rich flush of the unearthly light had passed and the rain had ceased; when the solemn church bells pealed, the laughter of children, bright and joy us after the storm, is heard with the carol of birds; while the forked and purple weapon of the skies still darted illumination around the Starling College, trying to rival its angles and leap into its dark windows.

Candles are lighted. The piano strikes up. We feel it good to have a home; good to be on earth where such revelations of Beauty and Power may be made. And as we cannot refrain from reminding our readers of everything wonderful in our city, we have begun and ended our feeble etching of a sunset which comes so rarely, that its glory should be committed to immortal type."

I never yet, says Jane Porter, heard men or women much abused that I was not inclined to think the better of them, and to transfer any suspicions or dislike to the person who appeared to take delight in pointing out the defects of fellow creatures.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

Of the County Board of Teachers' Examiners.

Hereafter all the meetings of the board for the examinations of candidates will commence at 9 A. M., and close at 4 P. M. Candidates are earnestly requested to be present at the opening of the session; and they are expected to observe the same order as the pupils of a school-room. Except in very urgent cases the papers will not be looked over upon the day of examination, and to avoid delay in the opening of the district schools of the county, directors are recommended to engage, as far as possible, only those who have already received certificates.

To obtain a third grade certificate, an average standing of 70 per cent. will be required. Less than fifty per cent. in any branch will insure a candidate's rejection. To obtain a second grade certificate, an average standing of 85 per cent. will be required, and in no branch must the candidate fall below 80 per cent.

To obtain a first grade certificate an average standing of 95 per cent. will be required, the candidate in no case to fall below 90 per cent. In addition to these requirements, in the first and second grade certificates the board must have good assurance of the candidate's success in the school room.

At the suggestion of the state superintendent, one per cent. for each days attendance at Teachers' institute during the current year, will be allowed in grading the certificates; and teachers will do well to avail themselves of the helps which these institutes afford, in fitting them for the duties of the school room. Candidates will bear in mind that after 1881, U.S. history and civil government will be added to the list of branches to be taught. It is also the intention of the board at that time to raise the percentage required for a third grade certificate.

There will be three more public examinations held this fall, Oct. 28 and Nov. 5 and 19, at the high school building in Adrian.

Candidates previous to Oct. 28 will be examined at their own expense, by the secretary, such certificates to be valid only until the first regular meeting of the board.

Township superintendents, knowing of districts in want of teachers, are requested to correspond with any of the members of the board. The address of each is as follows: E. G. Walker, Adrian; D. A. Hammond, Blissfield; C. D. West, Fairfield.

D. A. HAMMOND, Chairman.
C. D. WEST, Secretary.

Dundee Ledger: About two weeks ago, Nathaniel Newell, of this place, while building a wind mill on the farm of John Staker, about two miles from Maybee, met with a painful accident that will lay him up for some time to come. While raising the weather beam of the mill, Mr. Newell having hold of the end about thirty feet high to place in position, and Charles Johnson at the other end handing it to him, by some means Mr. Johnson loosened his hold and the piece of timber fell, carrying Mr. Newell down with it. He struck on a watering trough, bruising his arms and sides very badly and breaking the thigh bone and dislocating the left leg at the thigh. He is doing very well, is still in a bad state, but Dr. Jackson is bringing him around all right.

Politeness is to man what beauty is to woman. It creates an instantaneous impression in his behalf, while the opposite quality exercises as quick a prejudice against him. Polished manners have made hundreds successful, while the best of men, by their hardness and coolness, have done themselves an incalculable injury, the shell being so rough that the world could not believe there was a precious kernel within it. Had Raleigh never flung down his cloak in the mud for the proud Elisabeth to walk on, his career through life would scarcely have been worth recording. Droves of men have been successful in life by pleasing manners alone. It is a trait of character well worth cultivating. Never forget the value of true civility.

—A New York doctor has a daughter who is now 22 years old—a perfectly formed woman, with the exception of her head, which is that of a pig's. Her mother died in giving her birth. She speaks half a dozen languages perfectly. She is thoroughly educated. Being debarred from all human association by her misfortune, she has sought and found partial alleviation in the cultivation of art in all its forms. She has one of the purest, highest and truest souls. She is very religious—naturally so. She goes out in a close carriage and with her head closely muffled, and she speaks without any difficulty; but owing to the peculiar formation of her throat mouth and nasal organs, the sound of her voice resembles very closely the squeaking of a pig.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys and Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Hearts ches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy

NOTHING LOST.

Nothing is lost, the drop of dew
That trembles on the leaf or flower
Is but exhaled to fall anew,
In summer's thunder shower;
Perchance to sparkle in the flow
Of fountains far away.

So with our deeds; for good or ill;
They have their power scarce understood;
Then let us use our better will
To make them rife with good;
Like circles on a lake they go,
Ring within ring and never stay;
Oh, that our deeds were fashioned so
That they might bless alway.

Did Christ use Fermented Wine?

Among the resolutions passed at the woman's temperance union, says the Baltimore American, was one calling upon the churches to use none but unfermented wines at the sacrament of the Lord's supper, assigning as a reason that fermented wine was not used by the Savior on the occasion of instituting the last supper. The fermentation of grape juice consists in the conversion of the sugar into alcohol, carbonic acid gas being given off in the process. The chemical constituents of starch, sugar and alcohol are identical, but they are arranged in different proportions. When the Savior was eating and drinking at the great feast in the house of Levi, as described in the fifth chapter of Luke, and the scribes and Pharisees assailed Him for drinking with publicans and sinners, He answered with the parable of the wine in the bottles. The description of the new wine bursting the old bottles would certainly appear to describe the results of vinous fermentation, and the expression of a preference for the old wine would also seem to point to complete fermentation in the wine of which the Savior partook. The duty of temperance rests upon grounds altogether independent of the fact as to whether or not the wines use by the Savior were fermented or were grape juice preserved from fermentation by boiling, or some other process, and so, probably, the convention would not have based their demand upon the assumption made, except that they had carefully ascertained the truth of the statement.

Another Libel on Woman.

When a woman has a new pair of shoes sent home she performs altogether differently from a man. She never shoves her toes into them and yanks until she is red in the face and all out of breath, and then goes stamping and kicking around, but carefully pulls them on part way, twitches them off again to take a last look and see that she has got the right one, pulls them on again, looks at them dreamily, says they are just right, then takes another look, stoops suddenly to smooth out a wrinkle, twists around and surveys them sideways, and exclaims. "Mercy, how loose they are!" looks at them again square in front, works her foot around so they won't hurt her quite so much, takes them off, looks at the heel, the toe, the bottom and the inside, puts them on again, walks up and down the room once or twice, remarks to her better half that she won't have them at any price, tilts down the mirror so she can see how they look, turns in every possible direction and nearly dislocates her neck trying to see how they look from that way, backs off, steps up again, takes thirty or forty farewell looks, says they make her feet look awful big, and never will do in the world, puts them off and on three or four times more, asks her husband what he thinks about it, and then pays no attention to what he says, goes over it all again, and finally says she will take them. It's a very simple matter indeed.

Giving him a Start.

A lonesome-looking boy was hanging around a wood-yard a few days ago, when the owner owner of the yard, having both charity and philanthropy for boys with tears in their eyes, asked the lad why he didn't peddle apples, or do something to earn a few shillings. The boy replied that he had no capital, and the wood man took out a nickel and said:

"Now, my boy, I'm going to start you in life. Take this nickel and go and purchase something or other. I'll buy it of you for ten cents, no matter what it is. Come, now, let's see what kind of a business head you have on you."

The boy took the nickel and went off; but in ten minutes he was back with a gallon jug, which he had purchased with the nickel.

"Well, you are a keener," said the man. I never saw one of those sold for less than fifteen cents to any one. I want just such a jug, and here is its fair price. Now go and lay out your fifteen cents in apples, and I'll buy half your stock."

The boy did not return. Perhaps he fell into a sewer somewhere; but you can't make the wood-yard man believe so. When he lifted the jug from under the table where the boy had carefully placed it he found a hole in the bottom of it large enough to get in a black-and-tan terrier.

Persons traveling by railway are subject to continued annoyance from flying cinders. On getting into the eyes they are not only painful for the moment, but are often the cause of long suffering, that ends in total loss of sight. A very simple and effective cure is within the reach of every one, and would prevent much suffering and expense were it more generally known. It is simply one or two grains of flax seed. These may be placed in the eye without injury or pain to that delicate organ, and shortly they begin to swell and dissolve a glutinous substance that covers the ball of the eye, enveloping any foreign substance that may be in it. The irritation or cutting of the membrane is thus prevented, and the annoyance may soon be washed out. A dozen of these grains stowed away in the vest pocket may prove, in an emergency, worth their number in gold dollars.

Vandalia was formerly the capital of Illinois. The origin of the name, according to Ford, was this: The commissioners appointed to select a site, when it was resolved to remove the capital from Kaskaskia, were anxious to adopt an imposing and high-sounding name. Tradition says that a wag suggested Vandalia, stating that the Vandals were a warlike but extinct tribe of Indians who once occupied the region, and that it was desirable to perpetuate their name and memory. The commissioners, who were supposed to be not particularly well read in ancient history, adopted the suggestion.

The Progress of Medical Science.

Medical science is making rapid progress—so rapid, indeed, as to render it difficult even for practitioners to keep pace with its developements. In a critical case, involving considerable doubt as to the exact nature of the disease, an excellent old physcian of ours, advised the calling in of a young man who had but recently left the schools of study. "His fresh knowledge," said the old man, "is worth more than all my experience, long and valuable as it has been." Changes in practice have been radical and rapid. A few years ago it was considered dangerous to permit the free use of water and ice in fevers. Now ice is laid freely upon the parched tongue. Blood-letting is among the things that were. Particular medicines, regarded as essential in every practice, have been dropped, almost utterly, from the category of remedies, and of many still prescribed medicines physicians are exceedingly doubtful.

Tonics are taking the place of drastics, and a careful system of diet and exercise is dispensing with drugs to a remarkable degree. The ratio of mortality, causes being equal, is lessening yearly, and the average of human life increasing steadily. Did not disease assume new types, success of treatment would prove, yearly, more certain. Not only has the "practice" materially changed but the received views regarding physiology, and the chemistry of assimilation, absorption and constitution, are remarkably at variance with views entertained a few years since. To be in harmony with nature and natural laws seem now the end and aim of medical and physical researches, and we may congratulate those who are to succeed us on the prospect of readier remedies and longer life than previous generations have enjoyed.

Sunday Afternoon in Germany.

The close of the afternoon service is the signal for the commencement of the Sunday revels. On ordinary Sundays the men play skittles at the public houses, while the women sit together in groups at their doors, and gossip or sing, or do nothing; but whenever the people have any money in their pockets, and can afford to pay for a band, they get up dances and amusements. An excuse for such festivities is never wanting—a school feast, a wedding or a patriotic anniversary. The Government in its anxiety to keep up a military spirit in the country encourages everything which will recall the victories of the Franco-German war; and as every village furnished its contingent at that time, opportunities of revelry are not wanting. One village will celebrate the declaration of war, another the battle of Worth, another the capitulation of Sedan or Metz, and so on. All the neighbors go in pilgrimage to the dorf where the celebration takes place; it invariably begins on Sunday, and lasts till the small hours on Tuesday morning, when the patriots return to their homes in the condition expressively styled in Germany "cat's grief," a condition in which for two days at least, it is impossible to do any work whatever.

Trade and Sanity.

During periods of commercial depression, says the Medical Circular, medical men are often consulted by patients whose symptoms are marked and peculiar. They tell half their history, but leave untold the hidden weight of anxiety and suspense that is crushing them. Some of them imagine that they want a tonic; but, as their disease is mental, the real cure can only be obtained by a relief from the pecuniary liabilities which are producing the mischief. Pluck out of the wounded hand the thorn, and you at once obtain a speedy cure. The study of the mind during these periods of panic opens out an interesting field to the psychologist; but still more, it unfolds a sad and painful chapter, which can only be studied with the deepest feelings of pity for the sufferers. It requires more than ordinary fortitude to bear a sudden reverse of fortune, and when this change occurs not through any fault of our own, but through the knavery and machinations of those we trusted, the blow is much more keenly felt. The elan of youth and manhood may recoup the losses, but old age or the decline of years wants the elasticity to resist the depressing influences of change from wealth to poverty, from position in society to comparative obscurity.

Farmers and Mechanics.

If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bit of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, and prevent and cure diseases arising from Spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Exchange. Sold by

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

There has been a great deal of confusion, not only as to the height, but the spelling of one of the best known of the volcanoes of Iceland, which is Hekla. Hecla is wrong, Hekla, in Icelandic, meaning hooded, in allusion to the snow or cloud which rests on its summit. The height of Hekla is 5,170 English feet, and it is not the highest volcano, though the most frequent in eruptions. Oræfa Jokull is the loftiest of the volcanic chain, having a height of 6,426 feet.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

ALL signs of dry weather fail in a wet time.

The mourning drapery in New York, or the proceeds of it, will be given to the Michigan fire sufferers.

Vennor has just issued his Almanac and Prognosticator for 1882. We were satisfied there was a screw loose in the weather bureau somewhere, and now the secret is disclosed.

It is altogether likely that George William Curtis, Judge Robertson and a few others of the violent anti-Conkling leaders in New York will take back slips for a while.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is of the opinion that Uncle Sammy Tilden is not now engaged in writing anonymous poetry for the juvenile magazines. It looks a little that way down in Ohio.

Although the past season has been a remarkable one for misfortunes, calamities and appalling accidents by fire and flood, it is gratifying to know that the passenger travel across the Atlantic has escaped the general hard luck. Among the twenty-five thousand cabin passengers carried to and fro during the past six months not one life has been lost.

The official autopsy taken after the President's death has been published. Common people can scarcely penetrate the mantle of big words and technical terms which envelope it so as to obtain an intelligent understanding of the contents, but enough can be gathered to make clear that the wound inflicted by Guiteau was necessarily mortal. No medical skill could have cured the President, and the only wonder is that he survived the shooting more than a few days.

A telegram from Mayor Thompson, who is in New York, to the Governor on Monday last said: From current rumors and published statements tending to exaggerate reports of dissentions among the Relief Committee of Michigan, I believe it actually necessary that you should at once appoint a State Relief Committee, or subscriptions from the East will cease. This business of distributing relief has been sadly botched from the outset, and it is high time that the Governor (if we have a governor,) should place his shoulder to the wheel and lift the cart upon solid ground.

President Arthur's Inaugural was a very creditable document. It was one of the briefest messages ever delivered by an American President, but what he did say was in excellent taste. Although modest in tone it was manly and decided. He expressed in fitting language his grief over the sad fate of his illustrious predecessor, and in unmistakable words stated that the Executive is responsible to himself alone for his official acts and policy. It is a historical fact that no Vice-President who has been called to the first place by the President's death has followed in the political footsteps of his superior. Tyler and Johnson left their party, and Fillmore broke up his party, and history may repeat itself in this case. President Arthur has a grand opportunity before him. By pursuing a conservative conciliatory policy both towards the opposing faction of his own party and towards the Democracy, he can disarm all factious opposition, consolidate the Republican factions and render his administration a strong and successful one.—If, on the other hand, he shall seek to stir up political strife, and embroil the business of the country in a violent party struggle in Congress, if he shall conduct his high office to reward his friends and punish his enemies in his own party household, his administration will become a fitting sequel to those of the three Vice-Presidents who have preceded him. The long sickness and suffering of President Garfield have had a wonderful effect in allaying the political animosities and softening the political prejudices of the people. The country is fairly embarked upon a career of unexampled business prosperity, and men are in no mood to tolerate any party squabble which will block the wheels of enterprise and plunge the country into political turmoil. Will President Arthur prove himself equal to his opportunity? Let us wait and see.

A VISIT TO NORWALK, OHIO.

A Beautiful and Growing City—Its Railroad Facilities and Manufacturing Enterprises.

A business affair called us to Norwalk, Ohio, last week, and we spent a portion of Friday and all day Saturday in that wide-awake city. Norwalk is the county seat of Huron county, Ohio. It is a place of about seven thousand inhabitants, and is the best business town between Toledo and Cleveland on the Lake Shore road. Within a year it will enjoy the best railroad connections of any town between Toledo and Cleveland. It now has the Lake Shore, and the Baltimore & Ohio lines. The Wheeling & Lake Erie, and the New York, Chicago & St. Louis will both pass through Norwalk. The W. & L. E. has its bed graded, and cars are running on a portion of the line. The last named road is now under construction and is being pushed as rapidly as money and labor can do it. With the completion of these two last roads Norwalk will have four rival and competing lines of railroad, and hence will possess the advantages of competing freight and passenger rates in the highest degree.

Norwalk has three good newspapers all of which are a credit to the city and to the profession. The Chronicle has a well equipped office, with steam power and a fine suite of rooms. The Reflector is located on the first and second floors, has a bindery connected with it, and also a retail department for the sale of stationery and school supplies. The Reflector is the republican organ of the county, has a large circulation and a fine business. We formed a very pleasant acquaintance with Mr. Wickham, the senior proprietor, and hope to meet him again. The Experiment is the oldest paper in Norwalk. It is the official paper of the city and the democratic organ of the county, and is evidently in a prosperous condition. Mr. Redfield, the present senior partner, pulled the old Washington hand press in this office forty years ago, when he filled the position of an employee. The office now has a large Potter cylinder run by steam, but the old Washington is still kept on duty and is found to be very useful.

During our stay we became acquainted with Wickham & Wildman, two of the leading attorneys of Norwalk, and also with Mr. I. M. Underhill, one of the young attorneys there. In Messrs. Wildman & Underhill we found two staunch D. K. E's. from Western Reserve college, and we enjoyed a very pleasant call at their offices. The legal fraternity seem to be prospering there. A new court house is now in process of construction which will cost $40,000.

The A. B. Chase Organ Factory is located here and is a very large establishment, which is building up an immense business in organs. We intended to go through this factory, but did not have time to do so.

The principal manufacturing industry of Norwolk is the Dauntless Sewing Machine Co. They have a large, three story building, conveniently located, and keep in their employ about one hundred hands. They have enlarged their factory this summer, put in a large amount of new and improved machinery and have just placed in the market a bran new machine called the 'Queen.' It is a beauty and no mistake, and is destined to have an immense sale. They are now turning out 120 of these machines per week, and they will soon have sufficient facilities for finishing 300 per week. We had the pleasure of going through this factory from top to bottom, and we were much pleased with the thrift and business enterprise everywhere apparent, both among the officers and the employees. Our interviews with Mr. Perkins, the President, Mr. Williams, the business manager, and Mr. Hagaman, the Supt. were very agreeable and satisfactory. Mr. Hagaman was married 17 years ago at the house of Sam. Rappleye in Macon, and his wife is a relative of Mrs. Rappleye; consequently we felt at home at once.

We deem it no more than just to add a word or two in praise of their new machine, the "Queen." The September number of the Sewing Machine News, which is authority on all matters connected with the trade says: "Since its advent upon the market a short time ago, the Dauntless Co. of Norwalk, Ohio have every reason to be satisfied with the reception that their latest production, the "Queen" machine has met with. Agents everywhere have manifested great curiosity concerning the new machine and many have decided to make it their specialty in future. New agents have been secured in several localities, and unoccupied territory is rapidly being taken up. The machine possesses features of undoubted merit and deserves all the success it is meeting with." One of the new machines, which was exhibited last week at the Huron Co. fair, sewed with a No. 300 thread, and the belt which ran the machine was a No. 30 cotton thread. If any machine made has ever beaten this, we should like to know when and where it was done. Our informant was an agent for another sewing machine and hence we have no doubt of the truth of his statement. The company are crowded with orders for the "Queen" and cannot possibly keep up with them. During our stay at Norwalk we stopped at the Hotel Weber, where we found excellent accommodations at a very moderate cost.

WHAT SHE SHOULD DO.

A Few Suggestions of Importance on a Subject of Interest to the Ladies.

And Certain Facts which Should be Known by all Women.

(Home Journal, New York.)

A short time since an article appeared in the columns of this paper, being a synopsis of a lecture delivered by a prominent woman before a well known New England society. This article dealt so directly with the needs of women, and contained so many hints which were valuable, that it naturally attracted no little attention, and has we learn, been a subject of comment in social circles in nearly every part of the land. Realizing that no subject can be of more vital importance, as well as interest to all readers, than the condition of the women of America, we have collected and prepared with considerable care, additional facts bearing upon this same subject.

The ladies of this country have been more observed and talked about than those of any other land, and Europeans always notice their characteristics—usually with admiration. Sara Bernhardt declared she did not see how any one could resist falling in love with "those pretty American ladies." She might have added that even her far-famed French nation would find it difficult to equal, much less excel American women in quickness of perception and brilliancy of intellect. The minds and manners of American women are all that can be desired; but it is a lamentable fact that their physical frames are far inferior in comparison to their social and mental characteristics. The women of England are noted for their florid health; those of Germany for their strong constitutions, and the ladies of France for their exuberance of spirits; but the American women possess no one of these qualities in any prominence, and all of them only in a slight degree. The reason for this must be plain to every careful observer. Sedentary ways, devotion to fashion—but above all and more than all, carelessness and indifference to daily habits and duties, have rendered the women of this land far less strong and healthy than it is their duty or privilege to be. This irregular and indifferent manner of living, brings about the most serious results and is both directly and indirectly of untold injury to the race. The cause, therefore, being manifestly under the control of the women themselves, the power to remove it must naturally be under their control also. American women can possess just as charmed lives as though they lived in Europe or any foreign land, if they only desire and determine to do so.

The primary cause of suffering from disease is impure blood. The performance of the natural functions of womanhood and motherhood is not a disease, nor should it be treated as such, and to maintain one's health the organs which make and purify the blood must be preserved in or restored to, their normal condition. These organs are the kidneys and liver.

It is the office of the kidneys to take from the blood the poisonous matter which has been collected from all parts of the body and pass it off from the system. If they are impaired in their action, they cannot do this work, the poison accumulates, all the organs in the body, which are sustained by the blood, are weakened and give way, and finally the kidneys and contiguous organs become the source of great pain, and without prompt relief, death is certain.

It is the office of the liver to extract other impurities from the blood and utilize a portion of them for digestion. If the liver is disordered, all forms of dyspepsia occur, the bowels cannot expel the waste matter, and the most distressing inconveniences follow. This is especially true in the case of women. And if the bowels are thus inactive and overloaded, the neighboring organs, which are particularly dependent for their right action upon the state of the liver, bowels and kidneys become displaced, and the consequences which ensue are too well known to require re-statement in a suggestive article of this kind. The secret, however, of preventing these manifold disorders is to keep the kidneys and liver in perfect working condition. This is reason; This is science, and it appeals with force to the suffering women of America.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the remedy described in the lecture to which reference has already been made, is receiving, as it certainly merits, the most careful attention and the trial of the women of the land. It is a pure and simple vegetable remedy which is now doing more to bring health and strength to the American Women than any one thing which has ever been discovered. It acts directly upon the liver, kidneys and adjacent organs, soothes any inflammation allays all pain, and places those organs in a condition to bring health to the body, and happiness to the life. The manufacturers of this great remedy, as we learn from the lecture, have the written thanks of thousands of women—many of them of great prominence—but these letters are very properly regarded as too sacred for publication. No true woman is pleased to have her physical troubles flaunted in the eyes of the world.

The unquestionable value of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is all the more manifest from the fact that heretofore no adequate remedy for the ills of women has ever been discovered; nor have the medical profession ever been able to assist women in her troubles as she deserves. This is perhaps largely due to the presence of so much bigotry and intolerance in that profession. The history of medicine is a history which illustrates to the fullest the blighting effects of bigotry and intolerance. Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, was driven out of England. Jenner, the father of vaccination, was oppressed and scoffed at. Thompson, the founder of Thompsonian theory, was the victim of a hateful conspiracy. Morton, in Massachusetts, who introduced the use of ether in surgical operations, was charged with witchcraft, and yet the discoveries of these men are to-day recognized as of infinite benefit to the race. It is the solemn duty of every physician in the land to take advantage of every opportunity.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND—A PARALEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was poinated out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wondetful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH. OCT. 6, 1881.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

THE Circuit Court is in session this week at Adrian.

MRS. PARTINGTON is coming.

HUGH RICHARD, of Jackson, was in town last Monday.

THE weather was rather moist for church going last Sunday.

REV. W. P. WASTELL, of Clinton, paid us a friendly visit last Tuesday.

THE Morenci fair will be held this week and the prospects are favorable for a successful show.

MRS. MARGARET POWELL, who lives near Morenci, was 102 years old on the 28th of September.

THESE rains will bring new life to the pasture fields and ought to knock down butter a notch or two.

R. S. PARDINGTON will deliver a lecture to young men in the M. E. church on Sabbath evening next.

PROF. MCKEEVER, of the Adrian College, has accepted a call to the congregational church of Allegan.

SECURE your seats early to hear Mrs. Partington, and see that your buttons are well sewed on before next Monday evening.

WE have lately received a large invoice of beautiful gilt-edge and other fine styles of calling cards. The ladies are invited to call and look at our stock.

MRS. PHEBE JOHNSTON, of Cambridge, a lady of 81 years of age, in getting out of a lumber wagon fell and broke her right leg. A very painful accident.

DAVID PHELPS is at home for a few days' visit. The climate of the upper peninsula evidently agrees with his health. He has grown so fleshy that we did not know him.

WE see by the last copy of the Longmont Ledger that Rev. H. L. Hayward, formerly of this village, delivered the address at the Garfield memorial services held in Longmont, Colorado.

THE M. E. Church will receive bids for the position of Janitor. Bids will be received up to Friday evening, Oct. 7th, 1881. Apply to

G. E. BROWNELL, Com.

Tecumseh, Oct. 4, 1881.

MRS. H. E. STOUT will open her stock of millinery goods on Saturday, Oct. 15th. She has an ample supply of new and elegant styles for fall and winter, and all should go and see them.

THE Gardener's Monthly for October has arrived. Its familiar face is always welcomed, for no where do we find choicer reading or more useful information upon all topics pertaining to horticulture and gardening.

DURING the seven days ending last Sunday night about seven inches of rain fell. The clerk of the weather would have shown better judgment if he had distributed some of this water through the drought of August and September.

THOS. LEE had a span of colts at the county fair last week, and took first and second premiums on them as 3-yr. old colts and as matched horses. Thomas always did drive good horses, and now he has the finest pair in the county.

A. W. MILLS has his entire new block now rented. The rooms over Kies Bros.' store have been rented, and he has just taken possession of his own office rooms at the north end of the building. He has a very neat office for his own use.

NEWCOMB, ENDICOTT & CO., of Detroit, hold their annual Fall Opening on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. A special feature of the opening was the display of Elegant Costumes, Fur Garments and Wraps for Ladies. See their detailed notice elsewhere.

THE Bee Hive Store, Tecumseh, is this week opening a very large and attractive stock of all kinds of Dry Goods for the Fall trade, and selling them at prices so cheap it will pay you all to call before you make your purchases. Try it and save money.—Special bargains every Saturday.

THE Manchester Enterprise has commenced the 15th year of its publication, and our friend Mat Blosser promises many improvements soon to commemorate the event. He is about putting in a power press. The Enterprise is one of our very best exchanges and we are glad to see these signs of prosperity in its management.

Our printer's devil, who carries a barometer in his hip pocket, informs us that the weather which has been chalked down for the ensuing calendar week is about thus:

Sunday—A rainy day.
Monday—A storm.
Tuesday—Signs of wet moisture.
Wednesday—A young deluge.
Thursday—More rain.
Friday—A splendid day to fill cisterns.
Saturday—The Ridgeway farmers will come to town in canoes.

MRS. PARTINGTON at the Opera House Monday evening.

LAST Saturday morning our county fair contained seventeen prisoners.

WM. DOKE is erecting a new residence on the corner of Brown and Mill streets.

MR. AND MRS. E. C. SMITH, of Toledo, spent last Sunday with their friends in this village.

BOARDING house keepers are obliged to advance price of board in view of the advance in provisions.

THAT venerable personage called the "oldest inhabitant" claims that last Sunday would pass for a rainy day.

THE post office at Bridgewater has been removed from the depot to the store of Wm. Emmert who is now postmaster.

FARMERS bring reports of a wonderful growth in pastures and wheat fields within the last few days on account of rain.

ACCORDING to the Sun, Milan's school is overflowing with scholars, giving each teacher nearly 150 "young Americas" to handle.

A REMARK was made a few days' since, by one of our farmers that the county fair, as usual, would bring a rain. We think it did.

SEVEN rough looking prisoners passed through Adrian Saturday morning, from Dakota, en route to the Detroit house of correction.

THERE is a large crop of all kinds of nuts this year. When the hard frosts come the youths of the land will be in their glory gathering them in.

REGULAR meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., to-morrow evening. Work in third degree. Let there be a good turn out of members.

JOHNNY WERNER is soon to move his family back to Tecumseh, having purchased a residence in Brownville. We knew you couldn't stay away long Johnny.

THE Illustrated Scientific News for October has arrived. It is a very interesting and instructive publication. Munn & Co., 87 Park Row, New York, are its publishers.

THE Detroit Free Press in speaking of Fostelle and Mrs. Partington says: 'Such volleys of laughter as last night's audience discharged would assure the success of any stage production.'

AS near as we can ascertain, rather more than an average acreage of wheat is being sown, a number having plowed and put in a few acres more than at first intended.

AN exchange remarks: "We have just read a handkerchief flirtation code, and advise all men desiring to avoid breach of promise suits to wipe their mouths with their coat tails."

WITH the present indications of the high price of fuel and provisions staring poor people in the face, and the low rates of wages doing the same thing, the approaching winter is not going to be the pleasantest thing in the world for that class.

THE correspondent of the Clinton News pays the HERALD the following compliment:

The Tecumseh HERALD issued an extra edition last Tuesday afternoon (the day following the President's death) which contained all available accounts of the painful scene at Elberon, and timely supplied the demands of hundreds who were unable to procure a morning paper. The HERALD is brimfull of enterprise and Tecumseh has every reason to be proud of it.

NEXT Monday evening Charles Fostelle, in his famed role of "Mrs. Partington," written expressly for him, will appear at the Opera House, supported by a company of talented comedians, under the personal management of C. F. Whitney, of Detroit.—The play is said to be exceedingly funny, Mrs. Partington's queer speeches not being the only mirthful part of the performance. The piece has had a good run in Detroit and other places, and is one of the "taking" plays of the day.

THE editor of the Ypsilanti Commercial in speaking of how the news of the President's death was received at that city, says: "While the flag on the Commercial building was immediately raised at half mast, in obedience to our views religiously entertained on the subject of draping in black, we forbore to follow the general practice—believing it a heathenish custom. If we thought that our beloved dead President was a wicked and lost soul and in purgatory, we might consistently do so. But believing him a christian man and in the company of Christ's redeemed, sainted, martyred dead, if we had draped at all we should, as in the case of our family departed ones, used the scriptural emblem, white. The saints, Christ saved, are represented as the 'white robed throng.'"

CHET HAYNES is very sick with fever.

"BILLY" SUTFIN is clerking for Cotton.

DR. C. M. WOODWARD will go to Yorktown.

THE theatrical season is opening up in Tecumseh very nicely.

HARRY SHERRARD was home a day last week en route for Ann Arbor.

THE Wabash railroad company have fitted up some elegant offices in Detroit.

JIM COLE is home from Denver and looks as though he had been well kept out there.

ARCHIE SHERRARD has gone to New York to purchase a large stock of goods for the Holidays.

PERRY HOSMER has been elected secretary of the Masonic Lodge in place of S. H. Merritt, resigned.

THE sidewalk on the east side of Railroad street, between Chicago and Logan streets is in bad condition.

TOM ADAMSON arrived home from New York Monday, and says an immense stock of goods will soon follow.

DAVID BERDAN died upon his old farm in Macon last Monday, at the advanced age of seventy-four years. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. Shepard of this village.

THE officers and privates of the Adrian company, who are to go to Yorktown, have been selected. Forty men will go and the purse of $400 for expenses will be raised by voluntary subscriptions.

WM. HAYDEN is contemplating moving his stave factory to some locality where lumber is more plenty and cheaper. It has become difficult to buy the necessary supply of lumber to keep the factory running.

MRS. SMELTZER has been making improvements on her residence on Pottawatamie st., which she purchased of Vet Erskine, and has moved there. Mrs. John Petit will occupy her residence on Kilbuck st.

MR. W. H. SINK has engaged Mr. J. B. Glassier and wife of the Mansion House, Waukeesha, Wis., to assist him in running the Sink hotel in Tecumseh. Mr. G. comes well recommended and will no doubt do much to promote the success of the house.

MRS. H. E. STOUT invites the attention of the public to her new and elegant stock of millinery goods appropriate to the fall season. Many new novelties have been procured and her prices are beyond the reach of competition. The ladies will find it to their advantage to give her a call.

MR. A. HARDENBURG, of Delaware Co., N. Y., who bought the Hendryx property on Union st., two or three years ago, has concluded to make Tecumseh his future home, and has just moved his family here. Tecumseh gains an acquisition in Mr. Hardenburg, as he is a man of both means and liberality. We have no doubt that he will find our village a pleasant home.

THE Ladies' Society of St. Peter's church met last evening at the residence of Wm. Hayden and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Geo. Merritt; Vice President, Mrs. Geo. Kies; Secretary, Mrs. C. A. Kiel; Treasurer, Mrs. Minnie Adamson. There will be a social gathering at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Kies, Wednesday evening, Oct. 12. A gay time is expected and every body is invited.

THE following pupils in 4th grade have not been tardy or absent during the past month: Frank McNeil, Johnny Nyland, Bertie Severance, Robbie McClure, Blanche Goff, Wallie House, Henry Berger, Anna Baur, Clara Farley, Stella Pritchard, Hattie Cannon, Carrie Cannon, Richard Cupples, Arthur Harding, Alvin Kemp, Bertie Cory, Robbie Hosmer, May Clark, Gertie Cummins, Ada Severance, John Cannon, Harvey Welling.

Deerfield Record: During the storm of Monday morning, the house and barn of Jacob Sizer, a well-to-do farmer residing one and a half miles northwest of this village, was struck by lightning. Both buildings luckily escaped being set on fire, but a chimney on the house was knocked off.—The bolt of lightning struck and instantly killed one of his horses in the barn. The horse was a very valuable animal, and its death breaks up his team, which was one of the best in the township.

THE special election held at Adrian last Monday on the water works question resulted in an affirmative vote by about 600 majority. The majority was more than the total vote against it. There is some talk on the part of the opposition of placing an injunction upon the Council to restrain them from bonding the city. It is very easy to talk and vote in favor of water works now, but when a heavy bonded debt shall be saddled upon the city, and the taxes become so burdensome as to effect the sale and value of real estate, the men who are now shouting for water works may sing a different tune.

Cigar Manufacturing in Adrian.

Little by little the cigar making industry is gaining prominence in this city. There are already two or three cigar factories doing a very prosperous and constantly increasing business. Most prominent among these is that of Conlisk & Tabelman (late W. S. Gardner.) This establishment is now working fifteen hands, and is crowded to its greatest capacity. They are making five principle brands, all of which have gained an enviable reputation. They are "Our Best"—"W. S. G."—"X. L. D."—"Sound" and "Vanity Fair.

Mr. Conlisk has recently devised a new process for sweating tobacco, and now has the same in practical operation. The sweat room is an indispensible adjunct to cigar making, its purpose being to give a richer and more permanent color to the leaf by means of artificial heat. Heretofore this process has required some weeks, but under Mr. Conlisk's new method only five days are required.

Taken to the Asylum.

P. L. Conkrite has lately become so troublesome and violent that it was found necessary to take him to the asylum. Supervisor James corresponded with the authorities at Pontiac and obtained permission to send him there, and last Tuesday morning Officer Merritt took the old man in charge. In order to avoid trouble, his son George persuaded him to take the morning train and go over to Adrian. When at the Junction, the conductor (who had been let into the secret) informed Conkrite that he must change cars there for Adrian, and accordingly they got him on the Detroit train without trouble. The change to the Milwaukee road was made very easily and the old man never realized where he was till they arrived at Pontiac.—He then concluded he would like to go up to the asylum and see his old friends, and so Ed. kindly consented to go with him. Ed. left him as happy as a clam, shaking hands with his brother cranks.

The Garfield Fund.

We call the attention of our readers to the following announcement in regard to the Garfield monument fund. The subscription books for Tecumseh are in the hands of Mr. N. M. Sutton. Our citizens who desire to contribute to this fund and have not already done so are requested to call upon him at once.

The Monument fund committee announces that it now has lithographed certificates ready to be issued to all persons who may contribute one or more dollars to the Garfield monument fund. These certificates are for $1, $5 and $10 or more according to the amount of contribution. Committees, bankers, postmasters and all other duly appointed agencies in soliciting funds in any portion of the country will have certificates forwarded on application or on sending in a list of contributors. The certificate has a lithograph of the late President and his autograph, and certifies that ——has contributed——dollars to the fund for the erection of a monument in LakeView Cemetery in memory of James A. Garfield, and is signed by the committee.

Total amount contributed to date, $5, 430.

Adrian Times: Judge Howell last evening received the welcome news that his son Beecher had passed a successful examination at the naval academy at Annapolis, and will now enter that institution as a cadet midshipman. The series of examinations for aspirants to our naval service are severe and exacting, occupying several days, and the standard established requires a high degree of mental as well as physical excellence. We congratulate our young townsman, as well as his parents, on his success, and believe him to be made of the right metal to be a credit to the honorable service in which he is now entered.

Announcement.

Having bought the Insurance business of S. H. Merritt I can offer to the business men and insurers of Tecumseh and vicinity a line of first-class companies. Of all who placed insurance with Mr. Merritt I would respectfully ask a continuance of your patronage, and by diligence and attention hope to merit the same. All transfers, endorsements or additions promptly attended to. Respectfully,

A. A. KENNEDY.

WE are pleased to announce that Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage is to lecture at Adrian next Tuesday evening, Oct. 11. Dr. Talmage is one of the most eloquent platform orators now before the public, and as the R. R. fare has been reduced and the train to be held in Adrain till close of lecture, we doubt not that many of our citizens will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear a first class lecture.—Subject, "The bright side of things."

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Matthew O'Neil and family of the deceased extend their thanks to their neighbors and friends of Tecumseh for the favors and services received during their sad affliction.

Hudson has a Shakspearean Club, consisting of a trio of charming misses and gallant lads. Romeo and Juliet is the production most favored by this organization.

READ what the press says of the Boston Ideal Uncle Tom's Cabin company which are to appear at the Opera House on Friday evening, October 14th:

Last Saturday evening the Boston Ideal Uncle Tom's Cabin company gave an entertainment at Cornwell's Opera House, which was crowded.—The play, Uncle Tom's Cabin, was rendered well in every respect, giving the best of satisfaction to those present. Little Eva, being only five yrs. of age, plays her part wonderfully for one of her age. Each word can be easily understood in any part of the house.—Rochester Union.

Uncle Tom's Cabin, which has held the boards at St. James hall since Wednesday evening, closed there last evening. There are eleven Uncle Tom Cabin companies off the road, but the Boston Ideal Co. is far superior to them all.—Buffalo Sunday Times.

DIED.

O'NEILL—At the residence of his son, J. C. O'Neill, of Raisinville, Monroe county, Mich., October 1, Matthew O'Neill, aged 76 years.

His remains were taken to Monroe city for interment; the funeral services were conducted at St. Johns church, in that city, Oct. 4th. He leaves a wife and large family to mourn his loss. He is gone but not forgotten.

BERDAN—In Macon, Monday, Oct. 3d, Mr. David Berdan; in the 75th year of his age.

Mr. Berdan was one of the pioneers of this county, coming here in company with Mr. Ebenezer Harmon, in 1833, when there was only an Indian trail through the woods, and with an ox team brought his effects, sleeping under the wagon the first night and in the morning commenced to clear for himself a spot for a home, where he has resided ever since. He was married 54 years ago to Miss Harriet Cannon, and by her had five children, three sons and two daughters, who are respected citizens of this state. His first wife preceded him some years ago to the spirit land. In 1875 he married Mrs. Catherine Burgess who still survives.

Mr. Berdan was a man of probity and industry, genial, of large observation, and independent thought, a good neighbor and kind husband. He will be remembered for his relations to society and the home circle, by a large circle of friends who regret that he has left his home of clay. A large concourse of people gathered at the old homestead in Macon, Wednesday, the 5th, at one o'clock, where a discourse was delivered to the sympathizing friends and mourners, by Rev. H. Shepard, of Tecumseh. "Rest, brother in peace."

IN THE ROUGH.

The marble was pure and white,
Though only a block at best;
But the artist with inward sight,
Looked further than all the rest,
And saw in the hard, rough stone,
The loveliest statue the sun shone on.

So he set to work with care,
And chiseled a form of grace—
A figure divinely fair,
With a tender, beautiful face;
But the blows were hard and fast
That brought from the marble that work at last.

So, I think that human lives
Must bear God's chisel keen,
If the spirit yearns and strives
For the better life unseen,
For even his choicest work,
But [illegible] all the rest.

Relics of Antiquity.

Among the most interesting relics of antiquity that have been brought to light in Rome, in the course of the building and restoration that has been carried on of late years in the old city, are a number of writing tablets, or pugillares. These writing tablets were much in use in the times of the Cæsars, and consisted of two leaves of ivory hinged together bookwise. The inner surface of the leaves was slightly hollowed to admit of a thin layer of wax, and the outer surface was often adorned with elegant carving. The writing was executed with a stylus having one end pointed for the purpose, and the blunt for making erasures. These tablets, called pugillares because they were small enough to be borne in the hand, or diptycha, because they were double-leaved, were tied, sealed, and sent from friend to friend as tokens of regard. They were especially used by Consuls, who presented them to their friends on their elevation to office. Juvenal mentions their use by lovers in transmitting tender messages. The missives in them frequently had the portrait of the writer at the commencement. One of the tablets recently found in Rome still bore the inscription of its owner, Licinius, a favorite of Julius Cæsar, and created by him Governor of Gaul. The inscription gives evidence that Licinius was a man of great wealth.

A quantity of silver forks have also been recently unearthed in Rome. They are two-pronged, and with handles of elegant design. It has been hitherto supposed that the table-fork was a modern invention, and that the Romans, as the Greeks and other nations, ate with their fingers. Such, indeed, was the prevailing custom among all people down to the fourteenth or fifteenth century. Meat was generally stewed, or, if roasted, it was cut into small pieces by the carver, so as to be easily managed with the fingers. At sumptuous tables the guests were furnished with basins of water and towels for the convenience of washing their hands at the close of the repast. It is said that the use of forks at the table first arose in Italy. In the reign of Edward I. forks were very rare in England. A half-dozen or so were reckoned in the King's treasures at his death in 1307. For three centuries later the convenient implements were employed only by the higher classes. Hence the interest of the present "find" in Rome. It corroborates the old saw that there is nothing new under the sun.

How Thimbles are Made.

The manufacture of thimbles is very simple, but singularly interesting. Coin silver is mostly used, and is obtained by purchasing coin dollars. Hence it happens that the profits of the business are affected instantaneously by all the variations in the nation's greenback promise to pay. The first operation strikes a novice as almost wicked, for it is nothing else than putting a lot of bright silver dollars, fresh from the mint, into dirty crucibles, and melting them up into solid ingots. These are rolled out into the required thickness, and cut by a stamp into circular pieces of any required size. A solid metal bar of the size of the inside of the intended thimble, moved by powerful machinery up and down in a bottomless mold of the outside of the same thimbles, bends the circular disks into the thimble shape as fast as they can be placed under the descending bar. Once in shape, the work of brightening, polishing and decorating is done upon a lathe. First, the blank form is fitted with a rapidly revolving rod. A slight touch of a sharp chisel takes a thin shaving from the end, another does the same on the side, and the third rounds off the rim. A round steel rod, dipped in oil, and pressed upon the surface, gives it a lustrous polish. Then a little revolving steel wheel, whose edge is a raised ornament, held against the revolving blank, prints that ornament, just outside the rim. A second wheel prints a different ornament around the center, while a third wheel, with sharp points, makes the indentations on the lower half and end of the thimble. The inside is brightened and polished in a similar way, the thimble being held in a revolving mold. All that remains to be done is to boil the completed thimbles in soapsuds, to remove the oil, brush them up, and pack them for the trade.

VENTILATION.—Many persons complain of always getting up tired in the morning. This is very often due to the defective ventilation of the bedroom, or from using an undue amount of warm bed clothes and bedding. Feather beds are too soft and yielding, and partially envelope the sleeper, thus producing profuse perspiration. The habit of lying too much under blankets is also very pernicious, too, by reason of the carbonic acid exhaled by the sleeper being respired. Again, it is a common error to suppose that by simply opening a window a little at the top, a room can be ventilated. People forget that for proper ventilation there must be an inlet and an outlet for the air. In bedrooms there is often neither, and if there is a fireplace, it is generally closed up. Again, it is a mistake to suppose that foul air goes to the top of the room. Certainly the heated air goes to the top, but the chief impurity, the carbonic acid, falls to the bottom. There is nothing so efficacious in removing the lower strata of air as the ordinary open fireplace, especially if there is a fire burning.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

Is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West!

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca; with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island" is magnificently equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the improvement in passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

The principal R. R. connections of this great Through Line are as follows:

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

At ENGLEWOOD, with the L. S. & M. S., and P., Ft. W. & C. R. Rds.

At LA SALLE, with Ill. Cent. R. R.

At PEORIA, with P. P. & J.; P. D. & E.; I. B. & W.; Ill. Mid.; and T. P. & W. Rds.

At ROCK ISLAND, with "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line," and Rock Isl'd & Peo. Rds.

Before young Mr. Quigley, of Sandstone, Jackson county, hitched his horse up to a cart without using holdback straps he was a handsome youth. When the horse got through kicking, Mr. Quigley's face looked like a beefsteak.

A lad named McPhall, of Vernon township, Isabella county, came out of D. Allen's orchard a few days ago with a charge of shot in his body. It is supposed Allen did the shooting, but at last accounts he had not been arrested.

David Roach, of Sandstone, Jackson county, went home one night so very drunk that it was thought advisable to let him sleep in the barn. The next morning he was found dead, having fallen to the basement and broken his neck.

Men down from the northern extension of the Jackson, Lansing, & Saginaw railroad report that the belief that the cars would be running to Cheboygan before the snow flies is not warranted by the facts as presented by the condition of the work at present.

September 7, Henry Hackstadt, a farmer of Pipestone township, Berrien county, died and was subsequently buried. Subsequently the sheriff, coroner and prosecuting attorney caused his body to be disinterred, and find that he came to his death through violence.

Chippewa County News: Wm. Shunk reports a yield of fifteen hundred bushels of grain on his homestead. Other equally favorable reports are coming in and it is to be hoped that in time outsiders will be convinced that the upper peninsula will raise something besides snow shoes.

Cadillac News: It is believed that brine may be found a few thousand feet beneath the surface in this locality, and there is no good reason why Cadillac should not season its lumber business with salt as well as other localities in Michigan. The preserving element is certainly needed upon some of the rising generation here.

Charles Inman, of Lincoln township, Midland county, has six acres of Danvers onions, which will yield him about 2500 bushels. As onions will bring about $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel this fall, it may be seen that Mr. Inman has struck it rich. The soil upon which the crop is grown is very light, and of a quality formerly considered good for nothing.

Ann Arbor Register: Charles M. Fisk, a well known and respected farmer of Augusta, stopped at the Hawkins House, Ypsilanti, on Friday evening, Sept. 26, and was given a room in the third story. Early the next morning his body was found in the court below the window. It is supposed that owing to the heat he could not sleep, and going to the window for a breath of fresh air, lost his balance and fell. He struck upon his head, the injury undoubtedly causing instant death. His father was killed some years ago by falling from a tree.

Allegan Journal: Allegan has two hotels managed on the temperance plan, one being of the first and the other the second class, and each is good of its sort. It looks a little odd therefore to see temperance people from about the country, and some within the town, patronize the places where liquor is sold, when they could be served as well at the same price at hotels where the traffic in rum and damned souls is not carried on. We know of a "worthy chief" of Good Templars who always, when he comes to town, goes to a hotel which is one of the worst dram-shops in the village. There seems no satisfactory reason for this inconsistent action, and there is room for reform among the reformers.

Mason Democrat: The inconsistency and unfairness of railroad freight rates is quite plainly shown by the following illustration: S. Bartholomew, the "buggy man," informs us that it costs him $35 per car from Detroit to Jackson and it costs $5 more to get up to Lansing or Bay City; but it costs $21.50 more to get it to Mason. Or in other words, the railroad company seems willing to pay $16.50 for the privilege of drawing a car load of freight from Mason to Lansing or Bay City, and all over the same road. At any point where there is competition the freight rates are reasonable, but where there is no other road the rates are exorbitant. Mr. Bartholomew shipped a car-load of buggies right through this city to Lansing, making his freight bill $16.50 less than it would have been had the car been left here; he then hired them drawn back to Mason by teams and saved $10 by the transaction.

RELIEF NOTES.

The following items have been gathered since our last report. Ridgeway's report will be found in the correspondence from that town:

BLISSFIELD.

This town is doing nobly. The total sum for the fire sufferers now standing to their credit amounts to $1,968. A. O. Miller gave them a $900 lift from Cleveland, being the receipts of his theatrical company in that city.

ROLLIN.

Rollin town has done grandly in the work of aiding the fire sufferers. Her contributions amount to eight hundred dollars—about one-half of it wheat, and the balance cash and bedding. Indeed, the appeal of the distressed found open hearts and pockets in this noble town. All honor to the people of Rollin—may they never know what it is to be either homeless or hungry.

CAMBRIDGE.

The township of Cambridge is responding nobly to the call of the destitute sufferers of the northern district. We have already collected and forwarded over $600 worth of supplies, consisting of wheat, household goods, clothing, etc. Shall send more later. We expect to make our donations ten or twelve hundred dollars. Will send you a list of the donors as soon as I get them completed. Much credit is to be ascribed to Marshall Reed and wife, Edward Gibbs and wife, C. A. Blackmar and wife, Dr. J. Vaughn and wife, Osro Burcham, D. Neely, A. T. Graves, and many others I might mention for their praiseworthy efforts in this work of humanity.

WANTS TO SELL BAD.

The Monroe Democrat has got tired of being grinned at by a couple of sewing machines received for advertising and says:

"Parties in need of a sewing machine bad, want to tumble up the stairs of the Democrat office. We have two of 'em representing considerable money and swearing—the swearing, we don't care anything about, but the money we do. We don't care to go into the sewing machine business, or to interfere with the gentlemanly sewing machine engineers in the regular trade, but we want to get those pesky lock-stitch, back-acting, base-burning, stem-winding, copper-bottomed, clipper-built machines off our hands if it is the last act of our terrestrial career, or if we have to bust up the business of the country to do it. We owe our lawyer $4.20 and haven't got the money to pay him, (if there is any person in the world who ought to be paid it is a lawyer), and those machines stare us in the face, representing more solid lying than the legal fraternity. We will sell for cash, potatoes, beer, limburger, butter, cod-fish or mustard.—If not sold by frost we will hire them out to husk corn or dig potatoes on shares. We are bound to have our money out of them if we have to fire them through the next bank collector that comes into the office. We would willingly pay our debts with them, and take a receipt in full."

Deerfield Record: The firm of Blinn & Weidmann, proprietors of the stave and hoop mill in this village, have decided upon a new location in Canada, and will remove thither, in a few weeks. This mill employes a large number of men, and consumes large quantities of timber, and its removal will take considerable business away from the town. There is a proposition under consideration by some of the business men to buy the mill and run it as heretofore. We hope it will be decided favorably for the interests of our village. The business is a profitable one, and there is timber enough in this section to supply the mill for several years.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Adelaide J. Underwood, praying that administration on the estate of said deceased may be granted to Isaac N. Pilbeam, or some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 31st day of October A.D. 1881, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. (A True Copy.)

THE MORENCI FAIR.

The Morenci Fair resulted in a very gratifying success this year. We condense a few facts in regard to the exhibition from the Observer:

Up to Wednesday evening there had been made the following entries: Horses, 95; cattle, 33; sheep, 32; swine, 15; field crops, 3; poultry, 55; vegetables, 103; fruit, 53; farm utensils, 33; dairy products, 97; cabinet ware, 5; iron manufacturers, 5; household fabrics, 102; ornamental needle, shell and cone work, 157; flowers and plants 118; paintings and drawings, 47; riding and driving by ladies, 9.

The display of cattle, sheep and swine was not large but was good in quality.

The show of horses was simply immense, all the stables and stalls being full. The catalogue of all the spirited equines on exhibition would be entirely too large for mention in our issue of to-day, and so we forbear going into extended details. Nearly all the recognized horsemen in this vicinity, that is those who take pride in breeding and training good horses, were on hand, and the interest they took in this department was worthy of much praise.

The best thing of the fair, however, everything considered, was the show in Floral Hall which was acknowledged to be "just splendid." On the right of the main entrance was the display of clothing and gents' furnishing goods by G. H. Gates & Co.; and there was enough to fill an ordinary store, and they were very tastefully arranged. Turning the angle of the great hall to the right was the fine show of C. D. Fuller, and likewise there was enough there to stock a fine country store, and he seems to have vied with Gates in tastefully arranging and putting up the nice wares he had on exhibition. On the south side of the hall opposite Mr. Fuller was a nice show of goods by Mr. Scofield, the great cabinet ware prince of this village, and were worthy of his reputation as caterer to the public taste in this direction. Then came the show of fruits, vegetables, &c., and the general verdict was that it was good—never better. The center of the hall was used by Tunison & Son, and their display of dry goods of all kinds was worthy of that excellent house. Just south of Tunisons' show was the stand where the ladies exhibited golden rolls of butter, bread, cake, cheese, &c., which was especially inviting and toothsome in appearance. East of them were the bewildering maze of needlework and articles of ladies ware, which of course was beyond our comprehension.

Peterson's Magazine is on our table for November, ahead of all others, and better than ever. It leads off with a charming steel engraving, after Meyer Von Bremen, "Half Afraid." This is followed by one of those double-size, steel fashion-plates, superbly colored, only seen in this unrivaled lady's book. Then comes another engraving, "Lucy Hall," illustrating an exquisitely told love story; and then some fifty wood-cuts of dresses, patterns in embroidery, &c., &c. There is also a superb colored slipper-pattern, for braiding, in crimson and gold. The principal article is "A Day At Canterbury," which is profusely illustrated, and is of a character very much higher than is usually seen in magazines. The tales and noveletts are even better than usual, and "Peterson," as is known, always gives the best. Address, Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE next number of the Journal of the American Agricultural Association is now in press, and has a large and valuable list of contents. Beginning with the present number, the Journal will be published quarterly, the next number appearing in January, and the aim will be to make the magazine of the utmost value to its readers. It is desired to build up a large membership and to extend the work and usefulness of the organization in every way possible. This number will contain about 300 pages, price 75 cents per copy. Free to members of the Association. All who are interested in agriculture are eligible to membership. Annual dues, $2.00.—Three dollars sent now, will pay the dues both for this year and next, and entitle the person paying to all the issues of the Journal for this year and for 1882, and to all publications of the Association during that period. Address the secretary and editor, J. H. Reall, 127 Water Street, New York.

The Deerfield Record is enjoying a plentiful crop of fall and winter advertising. Business is good in that burg.

MUTILATED coins are becoming an insufferable nuisance, and every person who takes one feels mean that he has to become a party to the petty theft by giving the depreciated coin currency. The laws of the United are very severe on those thieves who clip coins, but all the laws in the world could not stop it, because mutilation can be carried on successfully, it being impossible almost to discover the criminal. The government has again taken the matter in hand, with a view of stopping this meanest of all kinds of theft. The value of mutilated coins has been fixed as follows: A dollar at 65 cents, a half-dollar at 35 cents, a quarter at 15 cents, and a dime at 5 cents. But even this will not stop the mutilation. The way it can be effectually checked is for every person to refuse such coins. If every person did this, the business would stop at once. Shop-keepers do not like to refuse such coins from their customers, because they pass current; but let customers refuse to receive them in change and the merchant would not take them for goods. The whole matter rests with the people, and a general refusal to take mutilated coins would not only drive them from the currency but put a stop to the practice.

The announcement was made in Cleveland Friday that the position of general superintendent of the Lake Shore railway has been tendered to James T. Furber, holding the same position on the Boston & Maine railway. The appointment was tendered him some time ago and declined.—The offer has been renewed and will undoubtedly be accepted. Mr. Furber has been general superintendent of the Boston and Maine road for over 15 years. He is now about 55 years old. The Boston and Maine runs almost parralel with the Eastern railroad of Massachusetts and Portland. There are large towns and cities every few miles, and to accommodate the immense local traffic trains are run every few minutes. Mr. Furber's schooling on that difficult road, with its cheap opposition, has made him a most skillful handler of passenger traffic and Vanderbilt sought him out as the man best fitted to manage the business of the Lake Shore road.—This information is contained in a special dispatch to the Detroit Post.

Auction Sale.

G. D. Perry, Administrator of the estate of Cyrus Saviers, deceased, will sell at auction at the farm of the estate, Tuesday, Oct. 18th, 1881, at 12 o'clock, noon, the following property: One good horse, two milch cows, 50 good sheep, 8 hogs, quantity of hay, lumber wagon, plows, drags, and other farming utensils. John P. Rockwood vs. Edward A. Jordon, continued by defendant paying a rule fee of $5,00.

The people vs. Kasper Ruedy; nolle pros. entered.

Frederick Sims vs. Jacob W. Breese. Suit for slander. Wednesday—C. C. Wakefield and Dennis Wakefield vs. Mary A. Klink. This is a suit for $100 shortage on a payment made by her husband on a note. Klink claims to have paid some $480, and that Wakefield counted the money and handed out the note, which Klink burned after tearing off the name. It seems that in a few hours after, Wakefield saw Klink and told him there was a hundred dollars less than he supposed, and this suit is brought to recover the shortage.

Thursday—Wakefield vs. Klink. Verdict of no cause of action.

The jury was dismissed until Monday October 10.

Monday afternoon the Boyer and Brown incest case was disposed of, the girl, Alice Brown, being sent to the reform school until she arrives at the age of twenty-one. Boyer having absonded his bail, amounting to $500, was paid over to the court.

A CHICAGO trade journal says: "A new mysterious disease, called 'pink-eye,' has appeared among the horses in this city. While it is amenable to medical treatment, several horses have already died of it. It is feared by many that it will become epidemic, and that business will be affected, as merchants will find it difficult to ship and transfer goods.

A Visit to Dundee.

Last Friday we paid a flying visit to our near neighbor on the east, Dundee. It has been several months since we visited that village and we were surprised to see the many signs of improvement there. A fine block of four brick stores has been erected this summer, two of which are now occupied, and the remaining two will be occupied in a few days. Many private residences have also been built during the past season. The transfer of the Fayette branch of the Canada Southern to the Lake Shore has injured the railroad accommodations somewhat, as they now have but one train a day each way on that line, but it is just as convenient for freight, while the Toledo & Ann Arbor road gives them a second line. We made Bro. Egabroad of the Reporter a call and had the pleasure of taking dinner with him. He has a good office and a fine brick residence in the northwestern portion of the village. We also called on the new candidate for public favor, Francis Brooks, of the Ledger. Mr. Brooks is trying the experiment of a second newspaper at Dundee, and he can hardly tell yet how the venture will succeed. During our stay there we met Tom Cowley and Usher Mattnews, who used to live in Tecumseh, and Jas. K. Graves who now resides on a farm west of Dundee. The merchants of Dundee seem to be well satisfied with the present business outlook.

Adrian Press: At the close of the regular Masonic communication at Fairfield Lodge Saturday evening, the brethren on opening the doors found the hallway leading to the lodge room in possession of some 25 or 30 ladies who appeared to have come meaning business. In less than no time, by several seconds, the ladies had assaulted and captured the den of the Morgan killers and driven the frightened "goat" into a corner. The object of this special female communication was of a peaceful nature however, as was seen, when the fair "Masons" began to unpack their baskets which proved to be full of pie, cake, chicken, pickels and all the dainties of the season. The ladies proved that they could keep a secret as well as their masonic male friends, as the delegation took the lodge entirely by surprise. We think of joining the Fairfield Lodge.

Adrian Record: The Morenci Fair was a complete success in every particular. Every department was well represented, and the display of horses is said to be the best ever seen in Lenawee county. Howard Sickles of this city, showed Sickles' Hambletonian, and won the second money in the 2:50 class, and first money in the Roadster Stallion class. He also won the "free for all" with "Benny" "so easy." Leroy Mills, of Tecumseh, won the first money in the four year old class, and A. O. Abbott, of Hudson, won second money. Ambrose Hunter of this city made a clean sweep as a pedestrian. He had no competitors, but walked against time, making the exceedingly fine record of one mile in six minutes and forty seconds.

IT is a significant fact that the Civil Service Reform agitation is beginning to show itself in fiction. Mrs. Burnett's "Through One Administration", to appear in The Century Magazine, it is said will have bearings upon this subject. The effect of the present system upon the character of "civil servants" is brought out with great force; and Washington society altogether is said to be depicted with a good deal of subtlety, and with the intimate knowledge that only comes with years of residence. The Century Magazine will also publish before long a short story, giving both the humorous and tragical side of the subject.

Brooklyn Exponent: On Saturday last an exhibition of the colts sired by P. W. Aldrich's black stallion, Jack Shepard, Jr., was held at this place, to compet for prizes. Jack is eight years old, weighs 1,100 pounds and has made very fair time without any training. There were thirteen colts present, from three weeks to four months old. The following gentlemen were elected judges. Clinton Blackmar, Wm. Windle and Edwin Lair. The first prize of six dollars was awarded to Henry Boneman, second prize of four dollars to Mrs. Oliver Ferrill, and third prize of two dollars to John Dewey. All the colts shown were very fine ones and the apportionment of prizes was a difficult task.

Ex-Supervisor Salsbury, of Morenci, who went to Petoskey last spring for his health, has gone into the restaurant business in that city.

A GENTLE WORD IS NEVER LOST.

A gentle word is never lost;
Oh, never, then, refuse one.
It cheers the heart when tempest-tossed,
And lifts the cares that bruise one;
It scatters sunshine over our way,
And turns our thorns to roses;
It changes weary night to day,
And hope and love discloses.

A gentle word is never lost—
Thy fallen brother needs it;
How easy and how small the cost—
With speed and comfort speed it.
Then drive the shadow from thy cheek,
A smile can well replace it;
Our voice is music when we speak,
With gentle words to grace it.

EPITAPHS.

Here lies the body of Mary Hatch,
Who has ended life's strange story;
She slipped, one day, on a parlor match,
And was carried off to glory.

This stone is sacred to Horace Mann,
Who could eat from dawn till set of sun;
One day he ate till he fairly bust,
Ashes to ashes and dust to dust!

Beneath the grave slab rests in peace
Our aged book, Jane Skinger,
The stern death angel snatched her off,
While shelling peas for dinner.

Here lies Ann Mann
Who lived an old maid
And died an old Mann.

How to Shave.

Vanity Fair gives a few hints to gentlemen:

The shaving-brush should be ample and rather soft, the soap of the most soft and lubricant sort that can be got. Lay it on hot and work it freely; the thicker, hotter, and softer the lather, so much the pleasanter and easier will be the shave. Never use biting or acrid soap; probably the more glycerine, honey and grease that enters into the composition of the soap the more agreeable it will be to the skin; but in this, as in so many other great affairs, experience will be the surest guide. The man who has shaved for a year or two and has not found out what soap is pleasantest to his cheek is deficient in the bump of research, and will never do great things in the world.

The choice of a razor is commonly thought so difficult that many give up all attempts at forming an opinion of their own, take what the cutler pleases, and rely upon his good faith and the credit of the house for a happy result. Possibly there exist tradesmen who will take back a razor which after a few days trial does not prove up to the mark. If so, we shall be only too happy to make their acquaintance; personally, we never met with one. And this is hardly to be wondered at, for nothing equals the delicacy of a good razor edge except perhaps the tenderness with which it requires to be treated. If a razor in tempering has not received sufficient heat, its edge will be brittle; if on the other hand, it has been too much heated it will be soft, but how is the purchaser to tell? He may however, take with him a microscope, and carefully examine the edge all along. If it shows no bluntness nor inequalities under this test, a prima facia case is made out in favor of the razor. We ourselves do not use the microscope, but never on any account buy a razor which will not with any part of its edge sever a hair plucked from our own head and held freely between the left finger and thumb, while we chop at it with the razor in the right hand. The tool which will successfully pass this test seldom turns out badly. We may also here record another fact, namely, that mounting has nothing whatever to do with excellence, and that expensive razors are not as a rule a whit better than the cheap ones. A shilling razor, bought of a small cutler, in a country town, is just as likely to do its work well and long as one mounted in tortoise shell, costing ten times the money, and purchased at a West End establishment. That is, of course, if you have taken the trouble to verify the state of its temper by the means which we have above pointed out.

Never dip your razor into boiling or very hot water to make it cut better; it is a most wasteful and deceptive proceeding. At first it certainly seems to answer and to make the edge keener, but in the long run it softens the steel, and you will find the weapon fail you at some critical moment when smoothness and dispatch may be invaluable.

If you put your razor away wet, or with the edge ill-cleaned, you have no sort of right to blame any one but yourself when it fails to do duty the next day. Treat it tenderly, as if you like it, like Izaak Walton's worm, and you will, if you have a fair start, be sure of a good and faithful servant. From time to time you must use the hone. You should wipe your hone before using it with some soft rag or piece of old silk to remove all dirt; next spread a few drops of oil on the hone, and then, gripping the razor firmly by its handle with the thumb and forefinger, firmly holding it below the shoulder of the blade, push the razor away from you, taking care to press evenly, flatly and firmly, and to give the blade a sliding motion along the surface of the hone; when the whole of the blade has traversed the hone, reverse it, and do the same thing over again on the other side, always remembering to work from shoulder to point; by this means the minute teeth of the saw, which, as a microscope will show you, form the razor, will all be set in a proper direction, so as to give you the most benefit from their touch against the bristles of your beard when you set to work at your morning shave.

Recollect that a razor strop must be used in the same manner; but that however carefully you strop your razor, it can never prevent your being sometimes driven to the hone. When choosing a razor strop, be careful to pick out a flat one. This is very important, as otherwise you will never get the teeth of your microscopic saw to be evenly set on the edge of the razor with an equable, keen and fine-cutting faculty all along from one end of the blade to the other. The leather on the smooth side of the razor strop should be calf, and of the best quality, and this side of course used after the razor has been sufficiently sharpened on the side spread with the composition. It has the effect of smoothing the edge, and will so far be found useful.

Escape of Fontane.

During the siege of Lyons, France, in the first revolution, the poet Fontane had been shut up with his family in the midst of the city in ruins. Full of alarm for the safety of his young wife and infant, he resolved, at all risk, to escape if he could.

Having obtained a passport, a difficulty arose as to how he could carry away some plate and other valuable articles, then considered quite anti-republican. Among these was a chalice, a present from a sovereign, on which an able artist had engraved the arms of the King of Sardinia. Fontane greatly dreaded lest the chalice should be discovered as being a vessel used in the service of the church, and bearing the arms of a king, it would be as a threefold proof of aristocracy. However, he decided on taking it, and hastened to the house of a friend, who had been a nursery gardener.

The poet then laid aside all his feudal ornaments, and set about exchanging his clothes to give him another appearance.

Having dressed himself in wide pantaloons, and shoes that stuck full of hard nails, his hair cropped, and every grain of powder removed, he emerged from the gardener's house in the character of a laundress porter, with a heavy basket of clothes on his shoulder—the plate and chalice carefully packed under the linen. His young family followed a few paces behind him with the passport, but they had to pass close to the terrible instrument of death; for there it stood, always ready for use. Fontane shuddered. His wife turned pale. To them their situation was awful! But reason and necessity urged them on. Fontana resolved to act a decided part. He walked up in front of the guillotine, grasping the basket firmly with his hand, and, loosening the leather straps as if to ease himself he looked steadily at the scaffold.

A man of ruffianly appearance, who attended as if he were a guard of the guillotine, came up to him.

"Are you afraid?" said he to Fontane, "that you look in this way at the national razor?"

"Afraid!" said Fontane; what do you take me for a Federalist that I should be frightened at the sight of a guillotine? Look at me; do you see anything like an aristocrat in my face?"

"What are you?" cried a second interrogator, addressing Fontane.

"I am a bleacher and scourer."

"And this good woman?"

"What a question?" said Fontane. "Look at the little one—don't you see the likeness? Long live the republic!"

"Ah, that's right!" said the miscreant; "you're a good one! Down with the muscadins and aristocrats! Long live the Republic! and the guillotine for ever!"

Fontane could not join in this sanguinary cry. He saw his wife tremble, and shook her hand.

"Come, wife," said, he "let's have a song."

"Ay, and a dance, too," said the barbarian who had first spoken; so down with your basket my jovial fellow!"

"But I—I—"

"Nonsense! nobody will run away with your basket; down with it, I say! Why, what is the matter? Is it glued to your neck?

Fontane objected, and resisted for a while, but was soon obliged to submit; and, wiping the cold perspiration from his forehead, in a state more dead than alive, was relieved from the burden of his basket. He saw it placed on a heap of stones, and feared everything would be turned topsy-turvy. Oh! the fatal chalice! All hope of safety was gone; he was on the point of delivering himself up, and claiming compassion for his wife and child, in the hope that they would be allowed to pass, when, happily, he roused himself, clapped his hands, and assumed a joyful attitude.

"Hallo! my friend," cried one of the fellows, "you're wonderfully merry all at once!"

"A thought has struck me," said Fontane; "a bold idea. You see my poor wife? I know the Carmagnole always raises her. Come, my good fellows, let us dance it."

His wife gazed at him with a look of despair, as he snatched the child from her arms.

"What now? Don't make a wry face, wife!" said he. "Excuse her; she's young and timid. Come, let us put the little one on the basket—there he lies, on the top of the linen, and sleeps soundly. Wife, your hand. Now, the ring—the Republican ring. Come, friends, join hands for the ring—the patriotic dance!"

Madame Fontane now comprehended what her husband meant. She tripped lightly around the ring, and joined in the chorus of the Carmagnole. When the dance was over, she took up her child: Fontane was assisted in replacing his basket on his shoulder. He made his wife lead the way, and walked off after her, whispering the Chant du Depart. And so they escaped.

Genius in Labels.

An old newspaper man from Ohio has started a drug store in Detroit, and a local paper, commenting on his innovations, remarks that he will either be a millionaire within the next three years or "bust" in less than six months. His store is very cheerful. Skulls, crucibles, forceps, chromos, false teeth, bones, almanacs, parrots, and sticks of liquorice are scattered around in delightful profusion, and there isn't a drawer or bottle without an original label. On one drawer he has: "Glue—She sticks right by you, no matter what the weather." On another: "Copperas—Eat slow and chew fine." On another, "Paris green—Sure in its operations, lasting in its effects." The label on one bottle reads, "Buy some of me and stop that blamed cough." Of another, I'm Sal. Petre—who are you?" On another, "Prussic acid—Don't fool around with a revolver." Hanging against the wall is a beautiful sign, which reads, "If you don't want to ask for a fine tooth comb, point your finger at me." At the back end of the store is a still larger sign, and it bears the tender sentiment: "There is no flock without its missing lamb. Sometimes you find him in the bedstead. I keep the stuff to make him weary of life. Don't ask for bed bug poison, but call it the Lost Lamb Restorative. I shall know what you mean." The front of the store bears some happy thoughts. Among them is one reading: "Walk right in here, if you had buckwheat cakes for breakfast last winter." Another says: "I can cure that red nose in just fourteen days." A third reads: "You man with the catarrh please step this way."

Death to rats and vermin, Parsons' Exterminator.

Tact.

It was once Causeur's good fortune to spend a few days in the modest home of a friend of slender means, a home that was all that its owner could afford to make it, yet lacked many things that would have made it more comfortable and convenient. During Causeur's stay two guests were entertained at tea, both of them men of means and wide acquaintance, accustomed to all the luxury that wealth can give. But they were widely different in their behavior. The first dwelt upon the fact that the house was in an out-of-the way spot and that there were few or no neighbors. At the table he told of the delicious tea he had drank at the house of one friend, of the rich tea service he had seen upon the table of another, of the rare old china that was used in his own household, and of the dainty meals he had eaten from it. In the cramped little sitting-room after tea, he sat by the stove and talked of the delights of an open wood fire, of his enjoyment of rare and costly books and pictures, and of twenty other things that the host, of whose hospitality he had partaken, did not and could not possess. When he had gone it was clear, although nothing was said, that his visit had caused pain that it had made the wife feel her straightened circumstances more keenly than ever, and cast a shadow over her husband's thoughts. The next evening came the other visitor. He brought good cheer in his very face. The room, he said, felt so warm and comfortable after his walk, which, he added, was just the thing to give a man a good appetite for his supper. At the table he spoke of everything that was nice, congratulated his host on having such a snug little home, apologized for eating so much but couldn't help it because it was "so good" and tasted "so homelike," liked the old black teapot because it was just like the one his mother had when he was a boy, and told his hostess, who was all smiles and happy as a queen, that she ought to thank her stars that she had no gas or furnace to ruin the flowers that made her room look so cheerful. After tea he insisted that the children should not be sent to bed just yet; said he wanted to tell them a story, as he did; and, when he had done, and had kissed them good-night, they trudged off up stairs with beaming faces, under the guidance of a mother who felt that a ray of real sunshine had entered her home, making it better and happier.

Heat and Light in a Sick-Room.

A recent writer gives the following sensible suggestions on this subject: Each person in a room should be supplied with three thousand cubic feet of air per hour; and this should be done, where possible, without creating a perceptible draught, for the nervous irritation induced by draughts is liable to produce internal inflammations. The temperature of a sick-room should be kept at a uniform height, the best average being from sixty-five to seventy degrees (Fahrenheit), except for infants or very old people, who require a temperature of from seventy-five to eighty degrees (Fahrenheit); and for these it is especially important to guard against changes, and to keep it as uniform as possible. All cases of fever require a temperature lower than the average, as from fifty to sixty degrees Fahrenheit, to assist in reducing the high temperature of the body; but when the fever subsides, and there is much debility remaining, the temperature should be raised somewhat above the average. As a patient can bear a greater degree of cold when in bed than out of it, convalescents from severe disease, fevers especially, should have the temperature of their rooms higher than that maintained during the height of the attack. Diseases of the air passages, as croup and diptheria require a high temperature (eighty degrees to eighty-five degrees Fahrenheit) and a moist atmosphere. The best mode for heating the sick-room is by the open grate fire. The sick-room should be darkened by blinds, except where there is a disease of the eyes, with photophobia, or when the patient is very restless and cannot sleep; then strong light must be excluded. Otherwise the sunlight should be allowed to enter and act chemically by decomposing the noxious gases, and thus purify the air. Of course, it is not advisable to place the patient under a strong, uncomfortable glare of sunlight, nor in summer to allow the sun's rays to shine into the room and raise the temperature too high. Artificial light has no useful effect, but does harm by burning up oxygen.

To Keep Eggs the Year Round.

About a year ago an exchange contained a recipe for keeping eggs a long time. It was simply to pack them in a cool place, small end down, in kegs or boxes filled with finely powdered dried earth, or common road dust, or sifted coal ashes. These settled between the eggs, kept them from access to the air, and prevented evaporation of the white or spoiling the yolk.

The experiment was tried last summer. On taking the eggs out of the packing eight months after they were as fresh and clean-looking as if fresh laid. On testing them for the table, they could not be told from fresh ones. When they were put down eggs sold at 6 cents a dozen. When they were taken out they were worth 18 cents, or an advance of 200 per cent. This ought to pay.

The shell of an egg is a very porous carbonate of lime. Left exposed to the air, it passes through the shell and soon spoils the contents. When placed in a pickle of lime and salt the egg may be preserved, but at the expense of quality. Eggs that are limed are usually quoted "not wanted." They may also be oiled or varnished, or covered with glycerine or mucilage. These all answer the purpose more or less, but change the external appearance of the eggs so much as to injure the sale. As a first experiment, eggs packed in dry dust, kept cool and perfectly dry, are a complete success, and could not be distinguished from perfectly fresh ones, just laid.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND—A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

A gentleman entered a grocery store in Indiana recently, and asked for a gallon of molasses. Having drawn it, the storekeeper asked him what he would take it home in. "In my hat," promptly replied the customer, calmly holding out a new silk hat, into which the grocer, not to be outdone in coolness, poured the fluid. Then the customer jammed the hat over the grocer's head, and having thus occupied his attention, took what money there was in the till and skipped out.

The startled slumberers were terribly frightened, "the man's hair turning white before morning." The woman was as much scared as her husband, but upon examining her hair, which hung over the back of a chair, it was found not to have changed a particle.

DIPTHERIA.—It is stated upon good authority that but little more than twenty years ago diptheria as a distinctive malady was scarcely recognized among general practitioners. It then appears to have been almost entirely confined to a single district in France, and was called "the Boulogne sore throat." It soon appeared nearly in its present form in Norfolk, in England, then in Wales, and afterwards in London, where it was for a time very distructive. In the few intervening years it has spread everywhere, attacking chiefly children, but not sparing middle age, and to this day there is a conflict of authority between European physicians upon the question whether it is a disease per se or another and an aggravated variety of crcup.

A Man in an Iron Cage.

Mr. Barry, in his work, "Russia in 1870," tells a story of the time when slavery was an institution in that country. A certain ironmaster caused a man who had offended him to be locked up in an iron cage, and kept him confined in it for a length of time. At last, while he was absent on a journey, the case of his wretched prisoner came to the knowledge of the governor of the province. The governor caused the man, cage and all, to be brought to the government town, and invited the tyrannical ironmaster to dine with him. After the dinner was over, the governor sent for a quail in a wooden cage, and offered to sell it for 10,000 roubles. The offer being treated as a joke, the governor said he had a more valuable bird to sell, and told his servants to bring it in. Folding doors flew open, and the iron cage, with its miserable captive, was set down before the astonished guest.

"Now," said the governor, "what do you think of that for a quail? But this is a very expensive bird; I want 20,000 roubles for him."

"All right," said the alarmed proprietor; "I will buy this one. Send him down to my works without the cage, and your messenger shall bring you the amount."

The matter was thus pleasantly settled, and the company adjourned in undisturbed harmony to their coffee.

It is a common practice of cooks, and often of those who are called good housekeepers, to sprinkle salt over meat when just ready to put over the fire. Now, to salt any meat before it is well heated through—or, better still, half cooked—will injure very materially the best ever sold in market, and certainly quite spoil a poor article, no matter whether it is steak, roast or stew. It will harden the fibres, toughen the meat all through, extract the best of the juice, make it very injurious to the stomach, and give no pleasure to the palate.

How Long Would It take to Count Two Millions.

Over two million volumes of the revised edition of the New Testament were sold on the first day of its issue. These figures can only be equaled by the enormous sale of Swayne's Ointment for Itching Piles, which is universally used as a standard remedy for itching at night, when one thinks that pin worms are crawling about the rectum. To calculate the extent of its sale in actual figures, would involve the labor of a life time. Will you be pestered longer from the aggravating Piles.

A middle-aged man, whose coat had seen other if not better days, rushed breathlessly into Miley's saloon, the other day, and said: "Woman over at the postoffice—just got letter—husband dead—fainted away—gim me—glassful best brandy—quick!" The whole-hearted bar-tender passed it out, and the man, taking a few steps from the bar, drank it off at a gulp. "Ah!" he says, "I feel better now—stronger—braver. I never could bear to see human misery." "You'll feel it if you don't travel suddenly," says the bar-tender. He went out piously rubbing his vest at the lower button, saying: "I feel stronger, braver, now."

Woman's True Friend.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold at

In India there are two hundred and forty millions of people. Of these it is estimated that the number of Protestant converts is not far short of half a million, while the Roman Catholic converts must be counted at nearly a million in western and southern India. The Roman Catholic missionaries do not altogether destroy the interior appearance of the temples when they convert them into churches, and the ascetic priests, with their shorn heads, their style of preaching harmonize with points of character in the Hindoo leaders.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

The two most precious things on this side of the grave are our reputation and our life. But it is to be lamented that the most contemptible whisper may deprive us of the one, and weaken the other. A wise man, therefore, will be more anxious to deserve a fair name than to possess it, and this will teach him so to live as not to be afraid to die.

A Physician of Great Prominence

in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

French scientific authority states that the ordinary rate of a man's walking is 4 feet per second; of a good horse in harness, 12; of a reindeer in a sleigh on the ice, 26; of a race-horse, 43½; of a hare, 88; of a good sailing ship, 14; and of the wind, 82.

Sarsaparilla

is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

DR. A. FRASIK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the virtues of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

ALL SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, PILES, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and BOWELS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, RAVENGLAS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all diseases attendant with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood, this means a controlling power is gained over most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

Our Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle. Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

The prosecution of the Star Route ring proceeds. The counsel for the defense have filed a motion to quash the information, on the ground that this mode of procedure is not authorized by law in the District of Columbia. It is also claimed that the affidavits which formed the basis of the information are insufficient. It looks now as though the prosecution would be quietly shaped to secure their acquital.

A break has occured in the wheat market, oats have taken a tumble and the bottom has been knocked out of corn. Consumers will hail these symptoms of the produce market with satisfaction.. But in this connection we regret to say that the signs of the times indicate a corner in peanuts. It is estimated that there is a shortage of one million bushels in the peanut crop, and a few of the speculative bulls have got control of the stock on hand. If this thing continues where is the speculative mania going to stop.

The preparations for the grand centennial celebration at Yorktown next week are progressing favorably, and the exercises are likely to pass off harmoniously and successfully. The Michigan battalion will leave Jackson the last of this week, the advance guard having already gone down there to procure suitable quarters for the troops. Michigan will be the only Western state represented among the military, and we have every reason to believe that our troops will make a creditable display on this occasion.

The called session of the U. S. Senate assembled on Monday in accordance with the proclamation of President Arthur. Senator Bayard, of Delaware was elected President pro tem by a majority of two votes. The Republicans made some opposition, but the Democrats' action was so clearly legal that it was not deemed prudent on their part to make any lengthy fight. No objection could possibly be urged against Senator Bayard except a political one. It is generally conceded that he has but one equal in the Senate—Edmunds of Vermont—and no superior, since Conkling resigned.

One of the leading political questions of the near future, if not the most prominent, is that of Civil Service Reform. During President Garfield's long sickness, this question as well as others was held in abeyance, for the whole country was watching at his bedside, but now people are directing their attention to practical politics once more. Wise and prudent men are asking themselves whether a system which leads to corruption, demoralization and even to assassination should not be swept out of existence at the very earliest opportunity, and the people propose to do this thing just as soon as they can get a chance.

The Democracy of New York are finally coming to their senses. At their state convention held on Tuesday, the convention threw out the Tammany and Irving Hall delegations from New York city and admitted the delegation from the New York county Democracy. John Kelly is finally stamped out for good, and his power for mischief is now broken. He may attempt to make a trade against his own state ticket, as he has so often done before, but the accession to the Democratic ranks by reason of his overthrow, will more than off-set the injury he can do the ticket. The Democrats of New York begin the campaign with bright prospects of success.

The returns from the Ohio election are rather meagre, but enough is known to make the election of the Republican state ticket a certainty. Gov. Foster's election is claimed by 15,000 majority and the Democrats concede it by 10,000. The Legislature is still in doubt with the chances in favor of a small Republican majority. The scratching done was unprecedented. In Cincinnati the count was not completed until the afternoon of Wednesday, the day after the election. But as the scratching was both ways it made but little difference with the general result. The temperance vote was much smaller than its friends anticipated, and smaller even than the opposing parties expected it would be. All accounts concede that it was the most apathetic election ever held in Ohio, and the aggregate vote was a light one.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

The South Wants Peace.

Memphis Appeal: The Southern people will make no factious opposition to President Arthur's Administration. They want peace and a restored Union, and they care not whether reconciliation comes through a Tilden or a Hancock, a Garfield or an Arthur.

An Independent Opinion.

Chicago News, Ind: If Conkling had been a copperhead instead of being the purest and ablest republican that New York has ever sent to the United States senate, there might be found some reason for the infamous manner in which certain so-called republican newspapers abuse him.

Wrangell Land.

New York Sun, Ind: Canada now claims Wrangell Land, which an enthusiastic American officer of the revenue marine lately annexed. The island should be handed over to Canada at once, for at the price she made us pay for a few codfish, an arbitration on Wrangell Land, if it went against us, might swamp the Treasury.

The Courtesy Boot on the Other Foot.

Boston Herald, Ind.: It will be curious to observe how the President and his near friends interpret and apply the rule known as "the courtesy of the Senate." Last spring their interest lay on the Senate side of the question. Now the position is reversed, and it is the Executive that they will wish to protect. Will Collector Robertson, for example, if he should decide to "stick" be safe in his position because both the Senators from New York are friendly to him? Or, when the Senators who had the hardihood to antagonize Mr. Conkling now desire to control the patronage of their States, will their claims be recognized by the powers that be? Is this alleged "courtesy" one of the poor rules that don't work both ways?

Observations About the Baby.

Boston Transcript: The baby does not belong to the animal kingdom; the animal kingdom belongs to him. He is a king. In fact he is always aching. However, a baby is often spoken of as "this wheat creature;" which is why they cradle him. You can't shock him. He is not exactly a creature comfort. The baby is sometimes called an infant, in fanciful allusion to infantry, which he is thought to resemble because he is generally found with arms about him. The principal business of the baby is cutting teeth. He inserts teeth free of charge. The baby is sometimes twins. Sleeping-cars sometime give birth to babies. The sleeping-car is a sort of step-mother. When a girl baby is born at sea she is a naughty gal baby. Bless the baby.

Waking Up from a Dream.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.: Washington is beginning to wake up from a dream, and the noisome names and fames that it was hoped the capitol would know no more forever are again filling the air. It is as though Grant himself were in the White House, so unseemly and indecent are the obscene and odious figures that are stalking from the shadows of the prison and the political grave. "Boss" Shepherd is to resume his high estate in the ring-ridden District, Gorham is the chosen name for Secretary of the Senate, while those busy B's, Babcock and Belknap, flit across the scene as possible Ministers in the new deal. The elements that conservative Republicans loathe are shown indisputably rampant, and the promise of the "good old times" of whiskey rings and what-not are written in every leer of the swarming spirits of Grantism.

Tammany's Downfall.

New York Herald, Ind: The report of the Committee of One Hundred clearly and conclusively shows:

First—That Tammany Hall betrayed the democratic party in the State in 1879.

Second—That it betrayed the party in the national campaign in 1880, and Third—That it is now, according to all party precedent, law, rule and government, outside of all party, democratic or republican. It has no place in the ranks of any organization. It is simply a club of office-holders and office seekers who for their own purposes keep up the pretense of an organization. The only authority competent to speak for the party in the State, the Democratic State Convention, repudiated it. It was repudiated subsequently in the last National Convention of the party. And again, it has been repudiated by Judge Blatchford as the representative of the federal government acting under and interpreting federal law. Tammany stands to-day before the country stripped of every prerogative it possessed as a political power. It has been disfranchised by the democracy of the State, by the democracy of the nation and by the law of the land.—Above and beyond all this, as the report of the Committee of One Hundred shows, it has been disfranchised by the people in the most solemn way.

THE scarcity of the apple crop this fall enhances the price. Buyers here are paying from $1,50 to $2,00 per barrel according to quality and kind.

THE early sown wheat in this section has already attained a greater growth than much of the late sown wheat when winter set in last year.

WE have received from H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., safe kidney and liver cure manufacturers, a handsomely printed colored lithograph of President Garfield and his cabinet.

A VIOLENT opponent of the new water works in Adrian was heard to remark, the day after the election, that an injection would be at once issued, constraining the water works from being built.

THE gobbling up of the Detroit & Hillsdale railroad by Vanderbilt has used up another competing line, and the towns that built their faith on railroad princes are doomed to disappointment again.

H. PETERS, M. D.

A prominent Chicago journal says: "The contribution for the fire sufferers in Michigan have fallen short of necessities. Chicago should give another lift. We must not forget the world's goodness to us in 1871." From the small sum they contributed it looks as though they had forgotten, sure.

MRS. H. E. STOUT invites the attention of the public to her new and elegant stock of millinery goods appropriate to the fall season. Many new novelties have been procured and her prices are beyond the reach of competition. The ladies will find it to their advantage to give her a call.

Dundee Reporter: A curious freak of nature could be seen this week in the yard of I. C. Drew. An apple tree of the Rambo variety was in full bloom for the second time this season. The tree, although a small one, was loaded down with blossoms and for October presented a peculiar appearance.

ONE of the young men's clubs of this village occupy rooms next to those of Dr. House. The stove pipe goes through the partition between his office and the club room and thence into the chimney. The other day the young men set up a stove in their room, carefully put the pipe through the partition wall and kindled a fire. The Doctor stepped into his back office a few moments after and found the smoke so thick that a man could cut it with a jack knife. Another link and elbow supplied the missing connection, and the members of the club are now happy.

HUGH RICHARD, of Jackson, was in town yesterday.

M. J. TREMAIN has reopened his meat market. Please give him a call.

THE methodists are fixing over their sheds and adding a number to them.

MR. GEO. HICKMAN, of Dayton, O., has been visiting his Tecumseh acquaintances.

OUR devil's weather prognostications for this week were not so very wide of the mark after all.

THIS is a good time to bring wood to market. The loads of wood are few and buyers are plenty.

REGENT CLIMIE, of the University, has resigned, and Gov. Blair has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

JEHIEL DAVIDSON and C. A. Wright went out and bagged twenty-five snipe last Tuesday afternoon.

REV. C. E. CONLEY starts to-morrow morning for the Baptist State Convention at Bay City. He will be away over Sunday, but services will be held at the Baptist church as usual.

WITHIN the last week two chaps have been captured by the officers and taken to the cooler dead drunk. One was sent over the road, and the other one will probably turn his steps in the same direction.

REV. R. S. PARDINGTON will commence next Sabbath evening in the M. E. church a course of semi-monthly lectures on "Popular Amusements." Subject next Sabbath eve. "The theatre and its influences."

Evening News: Rev. W. DePuy, of Ortonville, visited his home at Tecumseh recently, and his father showed his love and appreciation of a minister's needs by presenting him a horse, carriage and harness.

THE Ladies' Society of St. Peter's church will give their next social at the residence of Mr. Montgomery, Thursday evening, Oct. 27th. Misses Lizzie Hicks, Elida James and Julia Snell are committee on entertainment.

THE Hillsdale Standard says: "President Newell, Superintendent Curtis, and other officers of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., visited our city last Friday.—Mr. Curtis said that it is probable that the upper depot will soon be discontinued and the track of the D. H. & S. W. laid to the M. S. depot, and that the Lansing division may be extended to this city."

OUR poultry fancier, David Jones, was at the Chicago fair. He exhibited some fowls there too. And last but not least, he carried off the first prize. The American Poultry Journal for October says: David Jones of Tecumseh, Mich., exhibited one pair of fowls and one pair of chicks of the finest Langshans we ever saw, the cock being especially fine. He won first prize on both pairs.

ON Tuesday evening last a barn belonging to Mr. John S. Butrick, jr. of Franklin, was burned, together with 415 bushels of wheat, the unthreshed product of seven acres of oats, fifteen tons of hay, a quantity of potatoes, cutter, etc. The loss aggregates about $1,800. There was an insurance of $500 on the barn and contents in the Farmers' Mutual company. The general opinion is that it was the work of an incendiary, as there had been no fire around the barn for two weeks.

MISS HOUGH'S NEW STORE.

"Better late than never" is applicable in this case. The new brick store which has been erected on Chicago st., east of Landgraf's block, by Miss Julia A. Hough has been finished and occupied for some little time, but a press of other matter has prevented our noticing the enterprise until now. The store is a very neat building of two stories, with a cellar underneath the whole. It is twenty-five by forty feet in size, is a frame building with brick veneer, with a fine plate glass front and galvanized iron cornice.—The brick are a light cream color similar to the Milwaukee, so that the front is very tasty. Frank Wilson did all the mason work on the building and Salmon Crane performed the carpenter work. The store is finished with a large salesroom in front on the ground floor, and the rear portion of the same floor is used by Miss Hough and her aged mother as their dwelling.

A hall is placed on one side of the salesroom where a flight of stairs lead to the second story, which is finished off into one large front room and four smaller rooms. There is also a flight of back stairs on the outside leading from the second story. This floor can be rented to a separate tenant or used by the present occupants as they see fit. Miss Hough will continue her millinery business as heretofore, having furnished the front room of the new store with shelving and other furniture to accommodate her large stock of millinery goods. Miss Hough is very nicely situated now, having a fine business location in a convenient quarter, and good living rooms in the same building. She will doubtless continue to receive a good business patronage as heretofore.

THE TECUMSEH MILLS.

The old "Red Mill" as it was formerly known years ago, when it was built by Wing, Evans, & Brown, and run by several owners afterwards, burned down one night. The old site remained vacant for several months, and finally a fine building was erected thereon by Geo. W. Hamilton, who conducted the business successfully for a few years and then lost his life in a freshet, having fallen into the river and being carried down stream and drowned. The property was then purchased by the Heck Bros., of Flowerfield, who have run the mill ever since, and during their ownership the property has been known as the "Tecumseh Mills." The Hecks have just been overhauling and repairing the mill throughout, putting in new bolts and improved machinery, a new turbine water wheel and two new burrs, so that they have now one of the best flouring mills in this section of the state. They put in two of Smith's Purifiers, which they claim enables them to greatly improve the quality of the flour. They have re-painted the mill and the barrel warehouse, as also the dwelling connected with the mill.—They now have six run of stone, four of which are used for grinding wheat and two for grinding middlings, and they are running entirely on merchant work. They have given up custom work entirely, the most of their flour being now shipped to Ireland. Thus the Heck Bros. do not propose to be left in the rear by their competitors in the milling business. The three flouring mills of Tecumseh are all driven to their utmost capacity to keep up with their orders. Tecumseh has good reason to be proud of her flouring mills and her enterprising millers.

A Useful Invention.

Mr. John Heesen of this village can now take the medal as an inventive genius. Mr. Heesen is the managing partner of the firm of Heesen Bros. & Co., who are making the celebrated Wolverine Hog Ringer. The old process of making rings required three separate operations. The coil of flat iron wire was first cut into the proper pieces, then these pieces were run through another machine and bent into proper oval shape, and thirdly the rings after being shaped were picked up by hand and packed in boxes, one gross in each box. After several months experimenting John has finally perfected a machine which performs all these three operations at once. A coil of wire is hung on a reel at one end of the machine, is cut in lengths, then passes along and is bent into rings, and then the rings, just 144 of them are dropped into a box underneath, and all that remains to be done is to put the covers on the boxes. We presume if John only had a supply of pigs in the factory he could fix an attachment on the machine which would ring their noses also. The machine which he has completed is made for pig rings and it works admirably. He is now building one of similar pattern to make hog rings with. This machine will do the work of two machines and three men on the old plan, and thus reduces the expense of manufacturing three fold. The firm can make hog rings enough now to supply the whole northwest.

Where is Yorktown?

A discussion arose in our office yesterday in regard to the geographical location of Yorktown. One employee said it was on Long Island Sound in the state of Delaware; another ventured the opinion that it was either in the United States or New Jersey, he couldn't remember which; another asserted that it was in York state, of course, any fool ought to know that; another declared that it was formerly in Virginia, but as the geographies have been revised so much lately he did not care to venture a positive opinion now; another offered to bet all his old hats that Yorktown was on the Potomac river in the state of Kentucky; another offered the suggestion that it was the place where Cornwallis got shot, and LaFayette surrendered to Washington. Our devil's turn came next.—He pulled down his skull-cap, thrust his hands in his pockets, and with the air of a man who knows he is right, declared that Yorktown is situated on tide-water, and beyond the reach of the Michigan militia without a voluntary boost of $400 for each company. Next.

JOHN CLARKSON sold a big apple to H. W. Stevens the other day and the latter has given the critter to the printer. We cannot say exactly how large it is, as we have had no time to measure it. It is now on storage in our office and when the week's work is over we shall have our devil walk round it with a tape line and take its dimentions.

MRS. PARTINGTON drew a good audience at the Opera House last Monday evening. Chas. Fostelle is at his best in this role. The crowd went home feeling well paid for the time and money expended to pass an evening with the old lady.

DEATH OF REV. J. B. GILMAN.

Rev. John B. Gilman of Manchester, who has been suffering from ill health for several months, departed this life on the 6th inst., at the home of Goodrich Conklin in Manchester. The deceased was well known in this community, and indeed throughout this section of the state. He was a resident of Tecumseh from 1856 to 1861, officiating as pastor of the Universalist Society of this village. Under his ministrations the society grew to a healthy condition and the church edifice since occupied by it, was built. Mr. Gilman removed from here to Manchester where he preached for several years, and in fact he has of late years considered that village his home. He filled the post of State Superintendent of churches of Michigan for one year and has had two short settlements—one in Pennsylvania and one in Illinois—but during most of the past twenty years he has filled the pulpit of the Manchester church. He was one of the pioneers of his denomination in this state, and began his ministerial labors when Universalist churches were few and far between. James S. Gilman of Tecumseh and Jeremiah Gilman of Kansas are brothers of the deceased. Bro. Gilman was a zealous and prominent Odd Fellow, having passed the highest chairs in the Grand Lodge of this state and been a representative in the Grand Lodge of the United States. The funeral obsequies were held last Sunday forenoon at the Presbyterian church in Manchester, that church being kindly furnished as it was the largest in the village, and the other congregations were dismissed to attend the service. The discourse was preached by Rev. C. W. Knickerbocker of Wayne, who was a life-long acquaintance and friend of the departed. These two clergymen made a friendly compact many years ago, that when the first one should be called home, the survivor should preach his funeral sermon. The burial was conducted by the Odd Fellows, who attended in a body, clad in appropriate regalia. A large delegation of Odd Fellows and many friends were present from Tecumseh.

COUNTY CLIPPINGS.

Blissfield is to have a lecture course again this winter. The first entertainment of the course will be given next Saturday evening by A. P. Burbank, the great elocutionist.

Hudson is quietly bringing out a fine brass band. The boys have received two more new horns, and they expect to have a uniform next season.

Several young kids who were disorderly at a band concert in Hudson the other evening were arraigned before Justice Hiller and fined.

The Hudson Post says: Our friend Salsbury, after having finished up many a man by legal process, finds himself caught in legal chains in a neighboring state, that he will find hard to sever. This accounts for his sudden disappearance a few days since. Our hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Salsbury.

D. C. Smith, the popular conductor of Adrian has punched tickets on the Lake Shore road for twenty-five years, and he is apparently good for twenty-five years more.

The Hudson Gazette is printing some very interesting letters from Europe written by Dr. T. S. Andrews. The doctor seems to know how to handle a pen as well as a pill box.

Hudson Gazette: But a short time since Judge Pratt was relieved of quite a sum of money by a professional pickpocket, on the cars between Adrian and Hillsdale. This time it is our worthy townsmen, Elder Purrett, who is made to suffer. While stepping aboard the train at Adrian, on Saturday, he was surrounded and rudely jostled by a trio of scoundrels, one of whom attracted his particular attention by a proffer of assistance, while one of the other two evidently went through our friend's pockets and extracted his purse containing about $108. It is time the R. R. Co. was ferreting out these bold operators.

The Clinton News says that Tuesday night the smell of burning cotton was perceived in the street by persons passing Freese's store, but that Mr. Freese, on searching everywhere, could find nothing wrong. The keys to the bank next door were then procured, and on opening that institution it was discovered that a greasy rag in a closet had taken fire from spontaneous combustion, that the fire had communicated to a partition, and that in a few minutes there would have been a bad blaze.

WILLIAM SILVERS, a son of W. P. Silvers, of Clinton, went out into a field on his father's farm last Tuesday and has not been seen since. A search was began by the family, and it is feared that some terrible accident or foul play has befallen him. A meeting of the citizens of Clinton was held at the Silvers' House this morning and squads of men were appointed to go out in every direction to search for the missing boy. Should any of our readers learn any clue to the mystery, they should communicate it to the friends without delay.

To the musical people of Tecumseh and vicinity:—You are hereby respectfully invited to attend a meeting at P. R. Adams' hall, over People's bank, Monday eve., Oct. 17th, at 7 o'clock, sharp, for the purpose of forming a musical organization.

DIED.

WELCH—In Franklin at her home, on Monday, Sept. 26, 1881, of paralysis, Mary, wife of William Welch, Esq., in the 57th year of her age.

The deceased was born in Ontario, Canada, Feb. 20, 1825. She was married in 1845 and moved to this state with her husband in the spring of 1846 and settled in Franklin, where she has since resided. She was the mother of three children. A. Welch lives on the homestead. H. A. Welch lives near Grand Rapids in this state, and Emma is the wife of W. B. Keyser who lives near Tecumseh. Her esteem in the neighborhood was shown by the large concourse of friends that gathered to pay their last respects to the dead, over 40 teams following to the grave. Thus it is that the pioneers who made the wilderness to blossom like the rose are passing one by one to the other shore. W.

KNIFFIN—Isaac L. Kniffin departed this life at his residence in East Ridgeway on the evening of Sept. 5, 1881, aged 66 years.

The subject of this notice was born August 6, 1815, in Steuben Co., N. Y., and in 1843 he moved with his family into this state and settled in this neighborhood, where he resided to the time of his death. For 30 years he was a zealous member of the Christian church, being one of the charter members of the society at this place. He devoted much of his time, labor, influence and means toward making the cause of Christ a success, and from the early organization of the church in this place, both he and his staunch christian family have stood by the society by an unflinching, zealous and cordial support. Blessed with a dutiful and affectionate family, this brother ever sought to discharge his duty to each of them and by his prayerful and exemplary christian life, endeavored to lead them in the unerring path of love to God and to their neighbor. Very much might be written in praise of this venerable member of this community as he was an affectionate companion and father, benevolent to the distressed and a hospitable friend. The church will miss him from her gatherings, as she has already missed many of her tried and faithful friends who have been cut down by the reaper death. We shall miss him at the prayer meeting, we shall miss him in the Sabbath devotions, we shall miss him at the table of the Lord, he will be missed in the neighborhood, but more greatly missed by his afflicted wife and family. We have born our brother away to the habitation of the dead, to slumber in the silence of the tomb until he shall be raised again by the power of God in the general resurrection of the dead. His funeral obsequies were attended by a large circle of relatives and friends who assembled in reverence to pay their last tribute of love and to manifest to the family, who sat in silent grief and in garbs of woe, their esteem for one who had been removed from their midst. Poisons and Antidotes.

The following list gives some of the more common poisons and the remedies most likely to be at hand in case of need. The directions may be old, but in case you get a good strong dose of poison down you, you will not object to a cure on account of its age:

Acids—These cause great heat and sensation of burning pain from the mouth down to the stomach. Remedies, magnesia, soda, pearlash or soda dissolved in water; then use the stomach pump or an emetic.

Alkalies—Best remedy is vinegar.

Ammonia—Remedy, lemon juice or vinegar.

Alcohol—First cleanse out the stomach by an emetic, then dash cold water on the head and give ammonia (spirits of hartshorn.)

Arsenic—In the first place evacuate the stomach, then give the white of eggs, lime water, or chalk and water, charcoal, and the preparations of iron, particularly hydrate.

Lead, white lead and sugar of lead—Remedies, a purgative, such as castor oil and epsom salts especially.

Charcoal—In poisons by carbonic acid gas, remove the patient to the open air, dash cold water on the head and body, and stimulate nostrils and lungs by hartshorn, at the same time rubbing the chest briskly.

Corrosive sublimate—Give white of eggs, freely mixed with water, or give wheat flour and water, or soap and water freely.

Creosote—White of eggs and the emetics.

Belladonna; night herbane—Give emetics, and then give plenty of water and vinegar, or lemonade.

Mushrooms, when poisonous—Give emetics, and then plenty or vinegar and water, with ether, if handy.

Nitrate of silver (lunar caustics)—Give a strong solution of common salt, and then emetics.

Snake bites, etc.—Apply immediately strong hartshorn; and take it internally; also give sweet oil and stimulants freely; apply a ligature right above the part bitten, and then apply a cupping glass.

Tartar emetics—Give large doses of tea, made of galls, Peruvian bark or white oak bark.

Verdigris—Plenty of white of eggs and water.

White vitriol—Give the patient plenty of milk and water.

Opium—First give a strong emetic of mustard and water, then strong coffee and acid drinks; dash cold water on the head.

Nux vomica—First emetics, then brandy.

Oxalic acid (frequently mistaken for epsom salts)—Remedies, chalk, magnesia or soap and water and other soothing drinks.

Prussic acid—When there is time, administer of chlorine in the shade of soda or lime. Hot brandy and water, hartshorn and turpentine are also useful.

Montana Beavers.

Our road, says a correspondent, passed down along Hell-Gate river, leaving Deer Lodge City some 8 miles to the left. As one goes down the country changes, and occasional pines appear along the banks of the stream, and the landscape becomes much more interesting. At one place, where a tiny tributary flows in, a large community of beavers were building a dam. They were not at all afraid of us, and so we leisurely observed the process, wishing to settle the vexed question as to whether beavers do actually perform intelligent mason-work.

They had already sunk a great deal of brush, together with limbs of trees, and were now filling this wicker-work in with earth and rocks which they procured a little distance above on the opposite bank. A beaver would run up, flatten his tail on the mud near the bank, then another beaver would scrape the earth up and upon the tail of the first, and pack it down. After he had his load complete, the carrier beaver would swim rapidly away, his tail with the load of earth floating on the surface, the swift movement of the animal alone keeping it afloat.

The sagacious creature would invariably swim to the right place and dump the load, and then return for another, the stream presenting a scene of great activity, as several of these curious animal-masons were constantly and swiftly passing and repassing each other with their heavy loads.

Others, the carpenters among them, were at work in the thicket opposite, cutting brush. We saw many large trees that had been cut down by them. The stumps looked as though some boy had chopped them down with a dull axe. It is surprising to reflect upon the pertinacity of these creatures, which enables them to gnaw down such immense trees, and the wisdom with which they calculate the direction in which the trees are going to fall.

It is said here that the beavers cut the limbs off from these trees and then sever them into lengths of about three feet each, and after that float them to the center of their pond, sink them to the bottom and fasten them there, where they remain and are used as food during the winter when the pond is frozen over. This is thought to be one of the principal uses of the pond—to provide a pantry which will not freeze. The pond furnishes a depth of water that is always still, and never freezes to the bottom.

Although, after witnessing this almost human sagacity, we had many compunctions, we concluded to shoot one fine animal for his skin. We shot one through the head. His companions immediately disappeared, and before we could secure our wounded beaver he also had dived beneath the waters of their pond, and, although we waited some time in the vicinity, we failed to discover him again. The inhabitants say it is nearly impossible to kill a beaver with a rifle, and never, on any occasion, does the trapper shoot one.

Big Results from Little Causes.

"Do you know?" remarked a man to his friend on Chestnut street a day or two since, "I believe both Conkling and Platt had a bad case of skin disease when they resigned!" "What makes you think?" inquired the listener in astonishment. "Well, you see they acted in such an irritative manner—so *rash*ly as it were. Save!" "Oh! yes, I save," replied the other, "they were boil—ing over and merely resigned to humor themselves, I suppose." If such is the case, the National difficulty might have been averted by supplying Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases.

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West!

It's main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca: with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centerville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island" is magnificently equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

The principal R. R. connections of this great Through Line are as follows:

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

At ENGLEWOOD, with the L. S. & M. S., and P. Ft. W. & C. R. Rds.

St. Johns Independent: A large acreage of wheat has been sown this fall, and it was never in better condition. The late rains gave it a boost, and it is coming up splendidly. The only fears now are of too large a fall growth and the Hessian fly.

Secretary Geo. W. Hotchkiss of the Chicago Lumberman's Exchange, has actually worked himself sick in his efforts to stir Chicago up to a realizing sense of the fact that there has been a big fire in Michigan. He is the only man in Chicago afflicted that way.

Kalamazoo Gazette, Oct. 7: A boy named Thebold, aged 13 or 14 years, fatally shot himself at Plainwell. He had a pistol in his pants pocket, and while fumbling with the hammer discharged the weapon, the ball entering the groin. We are informed that the boy died.

On Thursday last Rev. J. McEldowney, of Bay City, performed the ceremony which made Wesley Lakin and Annie Stevens, of Gladwin co., man and wife, and on the following Tuesday he preached the bride's funeral sermon, she having died three days after her wedding.

The ruling sport in the mining regions of the upper peninsula is wrestling, Cornish style. It is about as vigorous exercise as ever men participated in, and creates intense excitement among the hardy miners. A successful Cornish wrestler is usually a man tough enough to fight a locomotive.

Ionia Standard: There is one minister in Ionia county who publicly boasts that he didn't pray for Garfield. He is a Free Methodist. His reason for not petitioning the Divine Throne in behalf of the murdered President was that Garfield belonged to the Masonic fraternity. "Our beloved pastor" has no love for any secret society feller.

Charles Inman, of Lincoln township, Midland county, has six acres of Danvers onions, which will yield him about 2,500 bushels. As onions will bring about $1,25 to $1,50 per bushel this fall, it may be seen that Mr. Inman has struck it rich. The soil upon which the crop was grown is very light, and of a quality formerly considered good for nothing.

Wm. Murray, one of the Grand Pacific circus men who had a hand in the Chesaning riot last summer, wherein Augustus Emory was killed, has been tried in the Saginaw county circuit court and found guilty of murder in the second degree. There are 12 more prisoners under arrest to answer to the same charge, it being claimed that they all had more or less to do with the killing.

A prisoner in charge of the sheriff of Mackinaw county, escaped from the steamer Champlain at Harbor Springs Sunday night. He took to the woods and in the darkness could not be found. Monday morning officer Therry observed a suspicious acting stranger on the street, and promptly arrested him on a charge of escaping from an officer. He stoutly denied the charge at first, but finally confessed.

The latest swindle is as follows: Parties visit houses and get all the old feather beds, feather pillows, etc., the housewife has, promising to pay for them by returning new feathers, pound for pound. On being questioned as to how they can afford to do this they have a plausible story of using the feathers for some purpose for which new feathers cannot be used. The story is too thin, and as the game is being played in this state just now it behooves the ladies to look out for it.

About one-half the usual acreage of wheat has thus far been sown in the northern burned district and more is being put in, so that altogether about three-fourths the usual acreage will be sown before the season closes.—There are no fences, and the cattle, sheep and hogs are feeding on the wheat already up, and it is feared the crop will be almost ruined unless some system of herding can be immediately adopted. R. Donner, Wm. Smith, M. Dumond and J. I. French, burned out, will have their saw mills running in about two weeks.

There is a man named Don Ewer at Port Huron. Don is by profession a vender of intoxicating liquors. Don also has a great big generous heart, and gives away his money as freely as many people who are engaged in more pious pursuits. At the time of the great fires in Sanilac county he took to his home the hungry, half-clad little son of a man who had lost everything but the boy and a sick wife. The liquor seller fed, clothed and made glad the heart of the boy, and turned his pocket-book inside out for the benefit of other sufferers. The next thing heard of the case was the publication of a stinging card from a temperance mother in Israel, who denounced Don for caring for the boy and wound up with the assertion that it would have been better for the boy to have died than to have been taken into a liquor seller's family.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The republican state convention at New York was held in the Academy of Music, Wednesday, there being four thousand persons in attendance. The following ticket was nominated: Joseph Carr, secretary of state; Ira Davenport, comptroller; Leslie W. Russell, attorney general; Silas Seymour, state engineer, and F. M. Finch, judge of the court of appeals. The proceedings were harmonious throughout, and indicate that the hatchet has been buried, for the present, at least.

Guiteau's counsel thinks that it will take him three months to prepare for trial. He will rely entirely on the plea of insanity, and expects, by producing evidence of the assassin's peculiar conduct in years past to prove that he is and has been irresponsible, weak, and demented. In presenting the case to the jury he will make an effort to fasten the responsibility for Guiteau's dreadful crime on the stalwarts, and hopes in this manner to arouse some sympathy for his client.

In the criminal court at Washington, Tuesday, Brady, French, Turner, and Brown, charged with star-route frauds, made their appearance. Their counsel entered motions to quash the informations filed last Friday. The district attorney asked that the accused first enter bail for their appearance. As they stepped forward to the desk Judge Cox informed them that he would soon fix the amount of bail, and discharged each on his personal recognizance.

Passengers by a Southern Pacific train which has reached El Paso report witnessing a hot fight with Indians at Willcox, Arizona, last Thursday, in which the noise of the firing drowned that made by the cars. The bodies of five telegraph repairers were seen beside the track. A courier has reached Bowie with information that the band above mentioned have been driven into the mountains, abandoning all their animals. There are three columns of troops in the field, which expect to meet at the Mexican line and cross the border to co-operate with the greasers.

The four men who captured the Arkansas train-robbers secured $9,000 of the booty, which they divided up, one of the party making some objection. The robbers would then have been released but for the large rewards offered. In consideration of their silence about the divide, a solemn pledge was made them that no effort would be spared to release them from the penitentiary. The captor who favored returning the money to the railroad company escaped two attempts at assassination and revealed the facts to the authorities.

The corn corner in the Chicago market has burst, a decline of 14 cents having taken place from Tuesday until Friday. The excitement originated in heavy purchases by Richardson, Boyington & Co., stove manufacturers of New York, who declined to stand by with margins, and their deal was turned over to Chicagoans. The bank clearings for five days were $80,200,000. There was intense excitement on 'Change Friday, and both corn and wheat declined 4 cents per bushel. The freight blockade has been lifted, and an active movement of grain by lake is anticipated.

The Fenian dynamite plot has been thoroughly unraveled by the secret-service bureau of the United States. It is said to be true that the scheme was organized to cheat the British government out of the rewards to be offered. Peter H. Foye, a saloon-keeper of Philadelphia, caused the manufacture of the infernal machines and turned them over to O'Donovan Rossa. Foye then began negotiations with the British consul at New York, and received $10,000 for information leading to the discovery made on the docks at Liverpool. He some weeks ago fled from the United States detectives at Philadelphia, and no one knows his whereabouts.

There are apprehensions of financial trouble in Germany, where the loss of gold for the past six months may force a resort to paper currency.

Under French and English advice the Khedive's ministers will give the Turkish commissioners no information about the internal affairs of Egypt.

Eugenie, on her recent visit to Paris, is said to have executed a will in favor of Prince Victor, and urged him to devote his mind to the imperial cause.

It is strongly asserted that on the overthrow of the French cabinet President Grevy will give Gambetta the fullest latitude in selecting a new ministry.

An Irish farmer, named Leary, living on the estate of Lord Kenmore, near Rathmore, was fatally shot by a band of armed men, who warned him not to pay rent.

Senor Guell presented in the Spanish senate a demand for autonomy for Cuba and the concession of a commercial treaty between that island and the United States on the basis of absolute freedom of commerce.

A committee of the confederate bondholders of London recently issued a request that all interested should register. This was taken as foreshadowing an appeal to the state legislatures in the south, and hence several purchases of bonds were made at 3 to 4 per cent.

Gladstone, on appearing at Leeds, was presented with eighty-six addresses. He claimed that £100,000,000 had been lost by bad harvests. At a banquet in the evening he expressed the sentiment that, while justice to Ireland is a sacred duty, it must be accompanied by equal justice to England and Scotland. He took occasion to contrast O'Connell's fidelity to the crown with Parnell's hostility to everything English.

The Russian emperor is negotiating for the purchase of the residences surrounding his palace. A subterranean passage has been constructed all around the imperial residence, which can be patrolled by sentinels and speedily placed under water.

The recent massacre of railway employes by Arabs at Wadzergha, Tunis, was prompted by the wholesale destruction of olive forests and vineyards which General Sabatier deemed necessary. The station-master was burned alive. The ten workmen killed were Maltese and Italians. A thorough investigation is being made by the English and Italian consuls.

The Binghamton Daily Republican in speaking of the Boston Ideal Company in their role of Uncle Tom's Cabin, which is to appear at our Opera House to-morrow evening says:

The old, but always popular drama of Uncle Tom's Cabin was produced by Abercrombie's Boston Ideal Company at the Academy of Music in an excellent manner, the roles throughout the entire cast being well distributed and sustained. Blanche Slater is an excellent Topsy, and introduced a number of serio-comic songs which were repeatedly encored. Frank Smith, as the lawyer and Yankee Knight; in the double part of Gumption Cute and the Quaker, furnished an inexhaustable food for merriment. Little Pansy the charming little midget who played Eva, has never been surpassed in that role in this city, and for one so young, evinced a remarkable dramatic talent and conception of the part. The house was crowded, as the company deserved it should be, and the entire performance gave the utmost satisfaction.

The Clinton Woolen factory is now booming. The News says: "The factory is now running two hours extra time a day in order to catch up with their orders. They are now turning out about one thousand yards of cloth per day.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

ADDISON.

Navigation in these parts is extremely hard at present and soft as well.

Whether by common consent or otherwise, the HERALD editorial satelites abandoned the unholy practice of "jotting," last week. Probably owing to the growing prospect of a second flood.

The writer is in receipt of a copy of the Brooklyn Exponent of the 13th, edited by C. W. Clough. It is a carefully prepared little sheet and addresses itself to its patrons in genteel style.

Our village schools are progressing finely under the efficient management of Prof. E. Woodward and assistant Miss Lombard. The new woodshed and out buildings are nearly completed, which in connection with the removal of the old fence surrounding the grounds greatly improves the appearance of the premises.

Rev. Duke Whiteley and family are now fully settled at the M. E. parsonage here. The elder appears to be a person of tact as well as talent, and we trust his present engagement may result in mutual satisfaction.

Corn, clover, buckwheat and other crops have been greatly injured by the almost ceaseless rains of the past fortnight. Hay and straw in the stack has also deprecated in value from 25 to 75 per cent., while corn fodder in the shock will be of little or no value whatever except for manure.

Mr. & Mrs. J. S. Briggs went to Chicago early last week. Object, business and pleasure.

Hereafter regular services will be conducted at 2:30 P.M. instead of 7, as in the past, at the M. E. church.

Prof. Woodward is making an offer to organize a class in practical bookkeeping which shall be open to pupils and citizens as well. The organization of a class in practical and ornamental penmanship is next in order. We believe that were there more general pains taken in the development of like accomplishments our young ladies and gentlemen would be materially benefited thereby.

EX. COM.

Blissfield Advance: Robt. Forsyth's gas well, about a mile from the village, is being utilized by him, and he will soon have it furnish him with light and heat for the house. The well is about 120 feet deep and the gas forces itself through 80 feet of water in an inch and a quarter pipe, showing that there must be an abundance of it. The feasibility is being talked of to increase the capacity of the well, run a pipe down to the village and furnish gas for lighting all the stores. It would be a practical thing and the expense incurred would be trifling considering the benefit to be gained. C. W. Brown is strongly talking of such a project, even for his own individual benefit, and the business firms on the west side would do the handsome thing to join hands and all have "gas-light."

Morenci Observer: The feather sharks have struck this village and gone, as they did other places in the vicinity. There were two of them and they work fast on this wise: They visit a house, generally when the "old man" is gone, tell the good woman that they want old feathers, they being so much better for army purposes than new ones, and offer 25c per pound, agreeing to give in addition to this, in some future time, an equal amount of good new live geese feathers. This tempting offer was accepted by a number of housekeepers here, and some families even parted with all the feathers they had and are now waiting for the new ones, and the indications are that they will wait for some time to come. It seems that no matter how bare and barbed the hook may be, if it is only glittering, there are those who are ready to bite. We wait for the next new dodge, and there will be lots of them before our friends get those "new feathers."

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

October 11,—At the session of the board of supervisors yesterday a resolution was passed instructing the committee on printing to let the job of doing the county printing to the lowest responsible bidder.

The report of Supervisor Warren on the new jail barn was heard and accepted.

Two members were added to the committee on drains.

Complaint of a grievance by George Bryant, in regard to a drain tax, was referred to the committee on drains.

The report of the apportionment committee was heard and accepted.

It was also moved and carried that the report of the committee on equalization made at the June session, 1881, as corrected by recommendation of the committee of apportionment and assessment rolls be referred to the committee on apportionment and assessment rolls to apportion the state and county tax. The business of the day was closed by the hearing and acceptance of a large number of small claims, after which the board adjourned [illegible] o'clock Thursday morning.

14. — Yesterday afternoon the board voted on the question of county or town and ward support for the poor, and the result stood exactly as of yore: 17 for the county and 9 for the town system.

It was also resolved by the board that the whole question of equalization be referred to the judiciary committee.

This morning the judiciary committee reported upon the matter and recommended that various assessment rolls be recommitted to the committee on equalization.

The committee on public buildings reported that they had built a sidewalk in front of the county buildings, made various repairs at the jail, and effected a three years' insurance of the county buildings at 1 per cent.; that they had received a proposition from A. J. Dean, who offered to rent his opera house for the holding of court and the meeting of the board of supervisors for a term of years at $1,200 per year. They recommended that the old jail be repaired and the offices of the judge of probate and register of deeds be placed therein and estimated the cost of such repairs at $1,200. They reported that they find one A. L. Bliss occupying a building on the county lot which he used as an insurance and abstract office, and for which he claimed to pay $5 per year rent.—The report was laid on the table.

The alleged drain grievance of Geo. Bryant was allowed to remain as advertised.

October 15.—During the present session of the board a large number of claims have been allowed, largely for witnesses' fees and official services, but they will all be printed officially after the adjournment, and hence we do not cumber our columns with them now. The account of the sheriff has been allowed, and stands as follows:

Personal services	$ 351 86
Jail accounts	825 42
Total	$1,177 28

The report of the committee on equalization was heard Friday afternoon, and was virtually the same as the equalization adopted in June, there being no change except the correction of a few clerical errors.

Yesterday afternoon was partly occupied in the election of a superintendent of the poor in place of H. S. Russell, whose term of office expires.—The vote stood as follows:

Russell 20, Lawrence 4, Bradner 1.

Mr. Russell was declared elected.

The board met this morning, and there not being a quorum present, adjourned until Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Adrian Record: We were talking yesterday with a couple of gentlemen living near this city, who a few years ago used to buy up car loads of cattle, sheep and hogs for the eastern markets. They told us that in an area of farming country in this county, where ten or fifteen years ago they could have bought ten car loads of fat cattle, it would now be impossible to purchase more than one car load. They attributed the present scarcity of stock of all kinds to the fact that for the last few years, our farmers had turned their attention more to agriculture than to stock raising, and the result is that fresh meat of all kinds command a good round price in our markets.—But we suppose our farmers think there is more profit in agricultural products than in stock, else they would not devote their time to it to the exclusion of stock raising.

Adrian Times: Among a party of 140 German emigrants arriving in Detroit Wednesday morning, was one family numbering sixteen, there being just fourteen children hovering under the paternal wings. Of the 14 there were four pairs of twins, and the oldest boy in the lot did not look over 20. The father was a fat and dumpy little man, with red cheeks and shrill voice, and the way he handled a strap on the second oldest boy, who strayed out, convinced the spectators that he fully intended to run the family for several years to come.

FOR a short time only trial subscribers are being taken for The Echo, the weekly edition of The Detroit Evening News, at nominal rates. Any one can have a copy three months for the trifling sum of ten cents. Nothing cheaper in the way of a newspaper was ever known.

CIRCUIT COURT.

October 13.—The case of Geo. Sparrow vs. the Lake Shore railroad company ended at the close of this forenoon with a verdict of $333.36 in favor of the plaintiff. This case was first tried during the May term of court, when the jury, by the instruction of the court, rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant. A new trial for the present term was granted, and hotly contested for over two days with the above result. B. F. Graves acting for the plaintiff and Weaver & Weaver for the defense. The court is at present engaged with the case of Pirie, Scott & Co. vs. I. S. Roberts.

October 15.—This morning in the case of James K. Johnson, administrator, etc., vs. Jacob R. Ely, judgment by default for $597.32.

The replevin case of John T. Pirie et al. vs. Ira S. Roberts is on trial, and at two p. m. the counsel were making their arguments to the jury. The case it is expected will go to the jury to-day.

Hudson Post: Monday night about 11 o'clock, Mrs. R. J. Eaton heard some noise in their barn, and Mr. Eaton being away, tried unsuccessfully to arouse the boys to see what was the matter. Looking out of the window, she saw some person on the walk with their horse trying to lead it away, but the horse did not seem inclined to go in that direction, so they turned in another direction and disappeared. About this time Mr. George Beech, a neighbor, hearing the noise, turned out, and noticed a man in his lot evidently a confederate. Finding out the state of affairs from Mrs. Eaton, he notified Mr. S. A. Eaton, and after informing Deputy Sheriff Pease, Messrs. Beach and Eaton started out in pursuit of the thieves. They had evidently given up the job however, as the horse was found in the morning turned loose on the outskirts of town. It is surmised that a double robbery was planned. Mr. Beach owns a valuable horse that the confederate was evidently after.

Clinton News: We regret to learn that Frank Silvers has decided to go out of the hotel business in Clinton, and that he will close up here a week from next Monday. He will move his livery business to Tecumseh and go into that business there in company with Ben. Reynolds. It is his purpose to leave the hotel furnished just as it is and to rent it to some one if possible. Otherwise to close it up except the bar and office. We are sorry that Mr. Silvers has decided on this course for he has the reputation of keeping an excellent house, and we hope some one will take the business who will be able to keep up the reputation. This is a splendid chance for the right man, and we hope for the good of the town, the right man will get it.

Deerfield Record: David Woodbury for some time past a resident of this vicinity, was convicted before Justice Long, of Adrian, on the 10th, of whipping his wife, and sentenced to stop in the county bastile for ten days.—This is the man who a few years since sought the services of the village Methodist minister to unite him in wedlock; and after the ceremony had been performed that united two loving hearts, he informed the divine that he had no money, but would let him have some corn. The minister finally agreed, probably thinking he had better take the corn than nothing but he never received an ear for his trouble.

Deerfield Record: Ira Long's hired man knows now just how funny it is himself. The other morning he went out to do the milking, and to keep the old cow's tail from swishing around his face, tied it to his leg. All passed off serenely till brindle became frightened, and started off on a brisk run through not the cleanest part of the barnyard, dragging the hired man after her with his heels up in the air and his head bobbing over the ground, like a foot ball. Fortunately the cow's tail sliped over the young man's foot, after passing over about six rods, or the result might have been more serious than it was laughable.

Adrian Times: Mr. Abram Grant, of Dover, lost a horse last week from what appeared to be a snake bite in the side. The animal was 23 years old and was very highly prized as a family horse. A number of young cattle have died, affected the same way, in the vicinity of Grovesnor during the present summer, and if these deaths are not definitely proved to be snake bites, perhaps a new disease may be developed and named by some enterprising individual of veterinary propensities.

On Board the Narragansett.

(JUNE 11, 1880.)

BY OWEN M. WILSON.

Hara: Dulst hear that wild, soul-thrilling shout
Upon the fog enshrouded night ring out—
A cry for help—a wild despairing cry,
As if from lips of mortal doomed to die?
Again it rises, fearful in its might Borne far and wide upon the wings of night.
'Help! for the love of God! a hand to save!
Leave us not here to find a watery grave!
Quick to the life-boats, ere it be too late!
Save souls first! And if it be our fate
To meet Death, then like men let's meet him here!"
A voice commanding rings out, firm and clear
But all unheeded are the bold commands;
A hundred forms dash forward, eager hands
Unloose the boats; a moment more, and then
With the cries of women and the shouts of men,
The boats are lowered to the water where
Wives, helpless women, in wild mad despair,
Are struggling, praying with fast failing breath
And sink from sight to silence and to death
Just now a night illumes the wild scene now;
Ah! 'tis fire—ablaze from stem to prow!
A thousand flame-tongues leap toward the skies—
Illumed the masts and lit the night
The flames leap onward in their endless ire,
And wrap the grave ship in a shroud of fire,
And below, like a great beacon light
The flames light up the fog enveloped night.
Breathless gaze each wild watching one
On scenes of sorrow that all words defy.
Now, as if in pity over all
Darkness gathers like a funeral pall,
And the Narragansett plunging downward goes,
While the parted waters 'bove her charred hulk close.
But who will bear a message for the dead,
Or to tell to loved ones the last words they said,
Of struggling 'mid a hell of flame and wave,
Then sank unknown into a shroudless grave?
Who will comfort the sad hearts that yearn
For those who sailed away ne'er to return?

Milwaukee, June 16, 1880.

ALAN SINCLAIR'S LEGACY.

BY G. E. S.

Mr. Alan Sinclair knitted his brows, very perplexedly, as for perhaps the fifteenth time he read the long, closely-written sheet of paper that lay before him on his desk.

Then he walked up and down his library several times, that perplexed brown clearing off his handsome forehead; and finally he sent word to his housekeeper, Mrs. Viney, to attend to some matter he had mentioned to her an hour or so before.

Which order given, Mr. Sinclair resumed his chair again, to think over and definitely decide the plans for the future, which this long, and well-nigh letter had made necessary.

And the origin of the necessity was that, dying, his old friend and chum, Edward Maynard, had left him—imploring him not to refuse the legacy—his daughter Winnie, utterly friendless, utterly homeless, unless in heaven's mercy, Alan Sinclair's heart was turned in pity towards her.

But to bring a girl—a delicate, awkward, silent child into the house for Mr. Mayne had written plainly and frankly about little Winnie. If it had been a boy—a wide-awake active boy—who could have been his companion as he grew older, in whose sports and lessons he could have taken a decent share of guardian-like interest, and who might have, sometimes, with his tutor, accompanied him on those tours abroad he was so fond of taking.

"But a girl "not at all pretty, or very interesting, but shy and old-fashioned," Mayne had said, "but good as gold," and he (Sinclair) on the eve of another three years' tour over foreign countries.

Well, he philosophized himself into making the best of it. He telegraphed that Miss Winnie should be ready to accompany the escort that he would send to bring her home to Roseleigh, at three that afternoon; and then, after a long, serious talk with good, motherly Mrs. Viney, who had been housekeeper for his father before him, this highly-favored young gentleman considered the momentous affair settled, dismissed it from his mind as much as possible, and went on with his arrangements for leaving home early on the morrow for that wandering abroad, in which, having unlimited means at ready command, he so much delighted.

When his dead friend's child arrived he went to her at once, and the instant he crossed the threshold he met her eyes—great, mournful dark eyes, deep-set and bistre-circled, with a look in them that was a strangely-mingled one of utter friendlessness and sorrow, and necessitous resignation.

She certainly was not pretty in the least, and in her thin angular figure, propped so awkwardly in a big-cushioned easy-chair—in the sallow, peaked face, and short-cut, stubborn, light hair of a nondescript color, and perfectly straight—there was scarcely a promise of future attractiveness.

She arose and courtesied gravely as Mr. Sinclair advanced, scanning her curiously, and swiftly deciding that she was a hopelessly ugly little soul—even homelier than her father had said—but all, all alone in the world but for him. And the thought unconsciously lent a bright, sympathetic smile to his greeting.

"And this is little Winnie that has come to live at Roseleigh, is it? I hope they took good care of you on the way, and did not allow you to become very tired. You shall have famous times here at Roseleigh," he enthusiastically continued, as he smiled in her solemn, forlorn face. "You know I go abroad to-morrow for a while, and during my absence I shall want you to enjoy yourself all you can. You will have to have a nice little pony-carriage, and some big dolls, and lots of fairy tales to read, and money to buy candies. Then, after you get stronger, and feel perfectly at home, you can have your lessons and learn to be a nice, accomplished young lady. What do you?"

But instead of an answering smile, tears gushed from her eyes, and her pale lips quivered piteously.

"Oh, please, Mr. Alan, indeed I don't want anything at all. I don't want to be any trouble or expense. I think I would rather—please—I would rather die and go to—than anything. And I pray every night I may—very soon!"

And then the smile died out of Mr. Sinclair's handsome eyes, and the man's heart felt a pang of pitiful consideration for this patient, cold friend-child.

"My child you must not talk like that. If it is heaven's will that you—you should not repine. You have been sent to me—perhaps to be my great comfort and happiness in my old age. What not try—why believe, good child? Why not make up your mind you will accept the surroundings, instead of trying to grow up into a miserable, soured, uncompanioned woman—a blessing wherever you go?"

And not then nor then was there a particle of animation in her face. Then her eyes began to sparkle, and a painful flush struggled with the snowiness in her thin cheeks.

"Can I? Could I do that? And, Mr. Alan, would it please you? And would it really please you?"

"It certainly would, Winnie," he said gravely.

"Then, sir, I'll do it. I'll do anything I can for you; papa made me promise. I'll do it."

And when Mr. Sinclair bade her good-bye that night, her strange, weird eyes were glowing eagerly, impatiently.

"I shall begin to-morrow, sir," she said, as he shook hands with her.

"Very well," he laughed; "and send me a letter regularly once a month. And when I come back, in two years, I shall expect to receive a very pleasant welcome from my good little Winnie."

But he did not come in two years, nor in twice two, nor in four times two.

He had delayed his return, now for one reason, now for another; once for a three years' tour in the Holy Land, once to accompany some friends to Australia, and the last two years because he had found his fate at last, and was too deliciously happy with sweet Aura Brian to ever think of coming home.

But eight, nine years after he had said good-bye, he was on his own shores again, after such experience as he would rather have died a thousand deaths than have suffered again, and all because of Aura Brian—the fairest, most gracious woman the sun ever shone upon, and the only woman who had ever taught him the difference between fancy and passion.

He had met her at Paris, with a party of friends with whom she was traveling abroad—a charming little fairy, with eyes like brown diamonds, whose very first glances had their effect upon him.

She was accomplished and refined and carried just a trifle of gracious haughtiness in her high-bred air that was the one charm Sinclair thought most bewitching in woman. She was very beautiful, fair as a lily-leaf, with bright golden hair, and——

Alan Sinclair lost his head, his heart his will, and worshipped Aura Brian as only those men can worship who have lived till middle age with no serious damage previously done their affections.

And Aura Brian reciprocated, and there ensued an engagement, when it seemed to them both that there was heaven on earth whenever they met, so perfectly contented and happy were they in each other—days when Sinclair would wonder if such bliss could last in human hearts, and wondering and half fearing, send up a breathless, passionate prayer that he might never fail in keeping his darling's love.

And at last half-a dozen or so of the English colony in gay Paris returned home, Sinclair and Aura among them—he eager to show her the home to which he would take her; and she equally glad to go with him.

He eager, she glad, until the very last night of the voyage, when they were promenading the deck, arm-in-arm, talking as lovers talk.

"There is just one thing I am anxious to speak to you about, my darling—something I have heretofore neglected to tell you—and that is, little Winnie Mayne, who lives at Roseleigh, our home, sweet. I want to bespeak your kindness and sympathy for her—a plain, reserved, solemn little thing, too old for her years, and entirely friendless but for me—but for you and me Aura. You will help me to be good to her, dear?"

He put the question somewhat anxiously, for there had come a look of surprise and—was it distastefulness?—on her lovely face.

"Winnie Mayne! You never mentioned her before, Alan. And she is to live at Roseleigh with—us?"

Such grave, curious questioning was in her eyes. Somehow it aroused a vague dismay in his loving heart.

"With us, my darling. She will be no de trop party. She is reserved and very shy. She has no other home. You would not wish me to turn her adrift?"

A pause, strangely ominous, followed.

"Alan," she said, and she lifted her rare, dark eyes to his eager face, "I do not wish you to send her adrift. But, oh, my love, I want you all to myself—all to myself!" and such a thrill of passion flashed into her voice that every nerve in his body thrilled lightly. "If this child—she is no longer a child, remember—eight years makes such a difference—she may have grown up into something that will please you better than I can—oh, Alan, I cannot go to Roseleigh if any other woman has a right there. Alan, my darling, I am jealous already of her. Take me, and let her go."

He was astounded beyond all former experiences of his life. This from Aura—this cold, deliberate injustice to a sister woman, and, in the same breath, this thrilling passion that was so inexpressibly sweet to him.

It was a supreme moment to him looking in the eyes of the woman he loved better than life itself—but no better than right and duty.

And duty forbade him sending the child of charity back to the cold world.

And he knew, despite the pale anguish on her face, that it had come to a choice between this royal woman he worshipped, without whom his life would be a dreary desert, and the grown-up school girl—plain, quiet, as she could only ever be.

And her voice, prompt, low, decisive, rang out like a doom.

"You must choose, Alan. I await your decision."

While in his reply, you would never have recognized the voice so shaken a second before; for the moment of temptation was past, and all Sinclair's grand manliness and anguish of resolution was on his face and in his voice.

"Always remember in the days to come, when you perhaps may regret it, that it was your own will that sent me from you. For I choose to keep my vow to my dead friend; I choose to do what I know is right. And this is good-bye, my love—my one love—my lost love."

He took her in his arms and kissed her—not passionately, but almost like one who kisses the face that will soon be under the coffin lid.

And twenty-four hours later, in the glory of a moonlight night, Sinclair went back alone to Roseleigh—and all those years of absence, after that passionate happiness, after the wrecking tempest—went back alone and when he had expected it would be so different.

There was only the reward he felt that he had done it all for duty's sake, for honor's sake, that upheld him in those agonized minutes when he went up to the familiar entrance and into the brilliantly illuminated hall, where Mrs. Viney, and the butler, and the servants, were in waiting to welcome him.

And then he went silently on to the library, his own special domain—the room where he had oftenest pictured seeing Aura, his very soul fainting with desperate pain at the sense of utter loneliness that would never leave him again.

And a sweet voice came out of the dimness to him that struck to his very soul, and a pair of rare white arms were clinging about his neck and the dear eyes he so loved were smiling through tears in his face—Aura's own blessed eyes.

"I could not help it," she sobbed, as he folded her to his heart; "I wanted to know if you were as good as I have dreamed you were all these years, since that night I stood just here and promised I would do whatever you said. Oh, Alan, Alan, don't you understand?"

And with sudden, almost startled wonder in his eyes, he understood then, for the first time, that it was Winnie Mayne—that the two women were one—who had won him.

"And, please, we will both stay—mayn't we? We both love you, you see, Mr. Sinclair, and we neither of us will give you up; and, oh, my love, my love, I will never be jealous again."

And Alan Sinclair bowed his head on her bright hair, and thanked heaven for what had come to him.

To Make Hens Lay.

Put two or more quarts of water in a kettle, and one large seed pepper, or two small ones; then put the kettle over the fire. When the water boils stir in coarse Indian meal until you have a thick mush. Let it cook an hour or so; feed hot. Horseradish chopped fine and stirred into mush as prepared in the above directions, and for results we are getting from five to ten eggs per day, whereas, previous to feeding, says a correspondent, we did not have eggs for a long time. We hear a good deal of complaint, says the Ohio Farmer, about getting eggs. To such we warmly recommend cooked feed, fed hot. Boiled apple skins, seasoned with red pepper, or boiled potatoes seasoned with horseradish, are good for feed; much better than uncooked food. Corn, when fed to the hens by itself, has a tendency to fatten rather than produce the more profitable egg laying. A spoonful of sulphur stirred with their feed occasionally will rid them of vermin and tone up their systems. It is especially good for young chickens or turkeys. Out of a flock often we have lost but one. They have been fed cooked food mostly, and are growing finely.

The Narrowest Narrow Gauge Road.

One of the most curious railroads in the world is a ten-inch gauge road running from North Billerica, Mass., to Bedford. It was first hooted at by the people, but was completed, making a length of about eight and a half miles. There are eleven bridges. The rails weigh twenty-five lbs. to the yard. One grade 155 feet. The cars and engines are constructed so as to be very near the ground, giving them greater safety. The cars have an aisle with one seat on each side, in the same manner as ordinary cars have two seats. The cars weigh but four and a half tons, ordinary cars weighing on an average eighteen tons. Trains run at the rate of twenty miles an hour with perfect safety. The engine is placed behind the tender, giving it greater adhesion to the track. They weigh eight tons, and draw two passenger and two freight cars. The cost of the road was about $4,500 per mile.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND—A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

Childhood of James Watt.

Watt was, from his birth, of an extremely delicate constitution, unfitted for taking part in the common sports of boys, and little prepared for those struggles with difficulties which afterwards marked his life. His mother, who was a woman no less remarkable for her intelligence than for her personal graces, taught him to read when scarcely out of his infancy; and his father, who was a ship carpenter and dealer in naval stores, at Greenock, added a little writing and arithmetic. In the latter the child rapidly improved, and he was fond of working out his sums with a pencil upon scraps of paper, or more commonly with a piece of chalk upon the floor, sometimes his only amusement when the severe headaches to which he was subject, compelled his parents to keep him at home.

On one occasion, when he was bending over a stone hearth with the usual piece of chalk, a visitor who was present remarked to the father:

"The boy ought to be sent to a public school, and not be permitted to idle away his time at home."

"Look at what my child is doing before you blame him," returned the father. The child of six years of age was endeavoring to solve a problem in geometry. Another time he was scolded by his aunt Muirhead, while taking tea at Mrs. Watts', for his assumed indolence.

"Jimmy," said the worthy lady, solemnly, "I never saw such an idle boy as you are. Pray, take a book and employ yourself usefully; for the last hour you have not spoken one word, but taken off the lid of that kettle and put it on again, holding now a cup and then a spoon over the steam, catching and counting the drops it falls into. Are you not ashamed of spending your time in this way?"

The little James playing with the tea kettle, observes Mr. Arago, who tells the story, became the mighty engineer preparing the discoveries which were to immortalize him.

Do Not be Deceived.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and that will do as recommended. They invariably cure stomach and liver complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at C. A. Wright & Co's.

Health Hits.

Weak Eyes.—Take rose leaves the more the better, and put them into a little water, then boil; after this strain it into a bottle and cork it tight. You will find this liquid very beneficial in removing redness and weakness from the eyes.

Sprains.—If the sprain is nothing more than a sprain—that is, if no bones are broken or put out—wrap the part in several folds of flannel which has been wrung out of hot water, and cover it with a dry bandage, and rest it for some days or even weeks. Entire rest at first, and moderate rest afterwards, are absolutely necessary after a sprain. If it is in the ankle, the foot should be raised as high as may be comfortable; if in the wrist, it should be carried in a sling.

Offensive Breath.—From six to ten drops of the concentrated solution of chloride of soda, in a wine glass full of pure spring water, taken immediately after the ablutions of the morning are completed, will sweeten the breath, by disinfecting the stomach, which far from being injured will be benefited by the medicine. If necessary, this may be repeated in the middle of the day. In some cases the odor arising from carious teeth is combined with that of the stomach. If the mouth is well rinsed with a teaspoonful of the solution of the chloride in a tumbler of water, the bad odor of the teeth will be removed.

Oranges and Health.—A distinguished physician has said that his practice would be gone if his patients were to form the habit of eating a couple of oranges before breakfast each day, from February to June, and he adds that the ill-effects from the eating of fruit results from its being done to excess or at improper times. As a rule, people do not eat sufficiently of fruit, the medicinal action of whose acids is cooling and corrective.

How Long Would it take to Count Two Millions.

Over two million volumes of the revised edition of the New Testament, were sold on the first day of its issue. These figures can only be equaled by the enormous sale of Swayne's Ointment for Itching Piles, which is universally used as a standard remedy for itching at night, when one thinks that pin worms are crawling about the rectum. To calculate the extent of its sale in actual figures, would involve the labor of a life time. Will you be pestered longer from the aggravating Piles.

FASTEST TRAIN IN THE WORLD.—The fastest train run by the Northwestern railway, in England, does the distance from Euston to Rugby in one hour and fifty minutes; but this speed is equalled by the Southeastern mail, which runs to Dover, seventy-six and one-half miles, in one hundred and two minutes. Both these are far exceeded by the Great Northern Scotch express, which only takes one hundred and twenty-nine minutes to run one hundred five and one-half miles to Grantham from London, and by the Great Western "Flying Dutchman," which reaches Swindon, seventy-seven miles, in just eighty-seven minutes. These trains run at fifty and fifty-three miles an hour respectively, and the last named remains as for many years past, the fastest train in the world.

For Coughs, Colds, Croup, Asthma, and all Lung affections, use Downs' Elixir, which has stood the test of Fifty years, and has not been found wanting.

Dr. Baxter's Bitters are a superior combination of barks, Roots and herbs not attained by any other manufacturers of Bitters.

Influence of Newspapers.

A school-teacher, who had been a long time engaged in his profession, and witnessed the influence of a newspaper on the minds of a family of children, writes as follows:

I have found it to be a universal fact, without exception, that those scholars, of both sexes and of all ages, who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who have not, are:

1. Better readers, excellent in pronunciation, and consequently read more and understandingly.

2. They are better spellers, and define words with ease and accuracy.

3. They obtain practical knowledge of geography in almost half the time it requires of others, as the newspapers have made them acquainted with the location of the important places of nations, their government and doings on the globe.

4. They are better grammarians, for, having become so familiar with every style in the newspapers, from the commonplace advertisement to the finished and classical oration of the statesman, thay more readily comprehend the meaning of the text, and consequently analyze its construction with accuracy.

5. They write better composition using better language, containing more thoughts, more clearly and correctly expressed.

6. Those young men who have for years been readers of newspapers, and are always taking the lead in debating societies, exhibit a more extensive knowledge upon a greater variety of subjects, and express their views with greater fluency, clearness and correctness.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

Where it Never Rains.

In Peru, South America, rain is unknown. The coast of Peru is within the region of perpetual southeast tradewinds, and though the Peruvian shores are on the verge of this great southeast boiler, yet it never rains there. The reason is plain. The southeast tradewinds in the Atlantic ocean first strike the water on the coast of Africa. Traveling to the northwest, they blow obliquely across the ocean until they reach the coast of Brazil. By this time they are laden with vapor, which they continue to bear along across the continent, depositing it as they go and supplying with it the sources of the Rio de la Plata and the southern tributaries of the Amazon. Finally they reach the snow-capped Andes; here is wrung from them the last particle of moisture that a very low temperature can attract. Reaching the summit of that range, they now tumble down as cool and dry winds on the Pacific slope beyond. Meeting with no evaporating surface, and no temperature colder than that to which they were subjected on the mountain-tops, they reach the ocean. Thus we see how the tops of the Andes become the reservoir from which are supplied the rivers of Chili and Peru.

Call early.

Don't be afraid of a little fun at home good people! Don't shut up your house lest the sun should fade your carpets, and your hearts, lest a hearty laugh shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there. If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left at the threshold without, when they come home at night. When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling houses and reckless degradation. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearthstones, they will seek it at some other and perhaps less profitable place. Therefore let the fire burn brightly at night, and make the home cheerful and delightful with all those little attractions that parents so well understand. Don't repress the buoyant spirits of your children. Half an hour of merriment around the lamp and light of a home blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day; and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright little domestic sanctum.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

THE STORY OF YORKTOWN.

On the 19th day of October, 1781, one hundred years ago yesterday, at the little village of Yorktown, on the Virginia shore of the Chesapeake Bay, Lord Cornwallis surrendered his army to the allied French and American forces. This surrender was the closing scene of the revolutionary drama. The events of this day broke the British Empire in twain, established the independence of the Colonies, laid the foundation for the great American Republic and cleared the pathway for the marvelous progress in human government, the arts and sciences and business development, that has taken place during the past hundred years in the Western World.

Every American should be familiar with the story of the Revolution, but still it cannot be repeated too often.—The war began without formal declaration on either side. King George struck his first blows at local rebels, and did not realize that the revolt was universal. The British tea had been given to the fishes in Boston harbor, the first clash had occurred at Lexington, the gallant fight at Bunker Hill had aroused the colonies from Massachusetts Bay to Savannah, when on the 3d of July, 1775, General Washington was called to the Supreme command. He grasped the situation at once, harmonized the conflicting interests of the different commonwealths, and defined the impending war to be one of absolute independence. From that moment, by his cool judgment, his military genius, his strategical ability, his diplomatic shrewdness, his tireless industry, he shaped the struggle in all its details, guided the continental armies thro' long years of discouragement, and finally by the master-stroke at Yorktown achieved the independence of America. The evacuation of Boston and the struggle for New York marked the beginning of the war upon a scientific basis. The true British policy was to sever the colonies on a line from New York directly north to Canada. Washington's policy was to hold his forces in a central location that he might defend either New England or the Middle and Southern States. New Jersey became this central ground and thus the strategic battle-field of the war. The year 1776 was marked by the evacuation of Boston, the battle of Long Island, the possession of New York by Lord Howe, and the victory at Trenton.—Princeton, Bennington, Oriskany, Saratoga, Brandywine, Germantown, and Monmouth, were blazoned on the continental banners during 1877-'78. Washington had held the British at bay alone, as thus far no foreign aid had been furnished.

The year 1879 transferred practical operations from the central to the southern zone. The burning of Norfolk and Portsmouth, the capture of Stony Point, and the fruitless seige of Savannah were the salient features of the year. Meanwhile Benjamin Franklin, the Philadelphia printer, embassador from the colonies to the French court, had consummated an alliance with Louis XVI, and France was henceforth enlisted for the war.—The campaign of 1780 was uneventful. Six thousand French troops arrived in July, and the victory at King's Mountain came in October. The American army, neither paid nor fed, dwindled daily, until it seemed as though the French alliance was to fail for want of American support.—But Washington was resolute. He re-organized his army, placed Greene in command at the South, and assigned Lafayette to his assistance, and then began the development of the great strategic movement by which he expected to end the war. The result confirmed his faith. Lafayette assumed command in Virginia, and watched Cornwallis. On the 20th of May Washington and Rochambeau inaugurated a fierce summer campaign against the British headquarters in New York. Early in August Lafayette reported "a very hopeful state of affairs in Virginia." Washington forthwith made a demonstration in force and pressed Clinton so hard that he called on Cornwallis for assistance. On the 25th the American and French armies quietly crossed the Hudson. On the 30th they were at Philadelphia, not missed by Clinton. Not till Sept 6th did Clinton learn the facts. On the 14th of September, Washington joined Lafayette, and Cornwallis found himself entrapped on the York peninsula with the allied armies in front and the French fleet in the rear.

Into the military details of the Yorktown seige, the gradual investment of the British army, Cornwallis' fruitless attempt to escape from the toils that bound him, we cannot here enter. Clinton tried to reinforce the beleaguered army, but it was too late. The crisis had come. On the 17th of October Cornwallis made an informal surrender. Commissioners were appointed on the 18th to arrange the etiquette of the capitulation. These articles were signed on the 19th, and at two o'clock that P. M. the British army, over 7,000 strong, grounded arms, stripped off their accoutrements, and were committed to the care of a guard. The last blow was struck. The war was ended. The American Republic was born. Against every obstacle, in spite of scanty supplies, universal bankruptcy and jealous subordinates Washington's master genius had carried the allied armies to triumph.—And how far-reaching have been the results of that success. It was not simply a military victory. It was the triumph of a great cause. The seeds of liberty and free government then sown have since germinated and grown in every civilized country of the globe. Yorktown, Waterloo, Gettysburg, Sedan! These are the four battles that have shaped the world's history during the past one hundred years, and viewed in the light of subsequent events, Yorktown is the greatest of them all.

A century has flown since then and Americans assemble this day upon the old historic spot to fitly celebrate the grand event, to read anew the story of the revolution, and to again pledge fidelity to that system of government which was founded by the blood of our fathers. Let us hope that the formal exercises of the celebration may be elevated in tone and patriotic in spirit, that they may cement the two sections of our country more closely together, and thus give the model Republic a fresh impetus upon the highway of national prosperity.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10, 1881.

Among the items of your paper of a recent date is one of "philological curiosities." Here is another simple one, that may interest some of your juvenile readers to hunt up. There are several English words, in which all of the vowels appear in their regular order, with no other vowels intervening; for instance one of them is the word facetiously. The writer knows of several others, and your young readers may be glad to amuse themselves by looking them up and giving them to you to publish. Let some of your younger readers, as a mere pasttime, work out in proper form this little sum in fractions, and state it and work it properly. What is the third and half a third of eleven, and they will be able to work most fractions.

EXCITEMENTS AND SENSATIONS.

Our city and surroundings just now are full of absorbing sensations. We have passed the grief-burdening event of the President's assassination, to be followed by the exciting trial of Guiteau, the assassin.

Then we have the "Star Route" matter before us, in which everything possible, that plenty of money, political influence, family and social considerations can do will be brought to bear to save the nefarious criminals from merited punishment. Further we have the Howgate villainies to handle, besides several minor official delinquencies, such as pension frauds, etc. In too many of them it is feared that too many officials "have had a share of the pork" to allow justice and punishment to have a fair sweep upon the rascals—nous verons.

FESTIVALS AND EXHIBITIONS.

Besides these, we have the more pleasant entertainment of centennial celebrations. The streets are thronged and buildings decorated in honor of the occasion, and to make a pleasant show for our visiting patriots and friends from beyond the ocean—the descendants and representatives of those who befriended our forefathers in the trying and critical strifes of the Revolutionary times, that founded our nation. One of the useful effects of these natal-day displays is to remind the minds of our youth, the rising generation, of the brave and wise doings of the fathers of this nation, and leads them to more carefully examine the history of our country and understand the patriotic services of its heroic founders.

Then the national fair of the District of Columbia is being held here, with considerable in the way of stock, mechanism and horticulture on exhibition; but the show will not equal many of your single county fairs in Michigan. There are also some fair trials of speed each day, with some noted racers among the stables.

A sort of Mardi Gras show is being held at Baltimore, our neighboring city, called the "oriole" in honor of that beautiful bird, commonly called the "red fine hang-bird." The show is of a classical, mythical, and national character, and really a very attractive street pageant.

But many of our people of both cities, will go to the great Yorktown centennial as no doubt many from your state will. D.S.C.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

A Philosopher's Observation.

Philadelphia Times: It cannot truthfully be said that there was a sharp pointed bit of hardware in the Vice Presidential seat when Mr. Bayard took it, but he got out of it almost as quickly as though he had struck a tack.

Can't Stand Gorham.

New York Tribune: There is one thing the country will not stand, and that is the election of George C. Gorham to any office whatever. As the editor of the organ of the Star route thieves, and a most indecent slanderer of President Garfield, he is entitled to nothing from the Republicans, save the silence of contempt.

An American's Inquiry.

New York Sun: This is a great country; yet it is a fact that within the past sixteen years two Presidents were assassinated; another President was tried and came near being ousted through impeachment; and one man held the President's office by a fraudulent title. Is not this an interesting state of things? and what next?

What Became of Them.

New York Sun: And so we are to know what became of those barrels of bay rum, the French mirrors, and other luxuries ordered by the Treasury Department and paid for out of Government funds in John Sherman's time. John Sherman himself has said it, and Mr. Windom has been ordered by Senate resolution to produce that suppressed report.

President Arthur's Danger.

Washington Post: The bottom lands to the south of Senator Jones' mansion are more or less malarious, but much less so than the flats back of the White House. The malaria that President Arthur has most to fear is of quite another type and comes from quite another direction. It prevailed to a very considerable extent during Grant's administration, and has frequently become epidemic in New York and Albany.

Good for Blaine.

New York Sun: It is reported in some of the journals that "Secretary Blaine will not accept the English mission, if it is offered him."

We congratulate Mr. Blaine on this determination. Why should a man filled with vitality, as he is, go to England to figure in court shows and dawdle away his life in official ceremonies?

The place for James G. Blaine is here at home; and his duty is to fight Grantism and the Third Term.

Three cheers for Brother Blaine!

Stalwartism and Repudiation.

Philadelphia Times: The first cropping out of the Stalwart policy of President Arthur is visible in the sudden conversion of the protesting Republican politicians of Virginia to Mahone's infamous Repudiation movement. Under Garfield, with Blaine and MacVeagh manfully sustaining the integrity of the Republicans of Virginia as against the Mahone infamy, no support was given to the Repudiators, but the advent of Arthur changes the aspect of the contest, and Mahone now commands the sympathy and patronage of the Stalwart President. Congressman Jorgensen has bowed to the power of the spoils, and now joins in the shameless Repudiation crusade to save his post offices and tide-waiters.

Eloquent Words from the South.

General G. W. Gordon, the ex-Confederate, recently made an address in memory of Garfield before the Circuit Court of Memphis, in which he said: "I had rather possess the emotion, the culture, the oratory and the genius of Garfield than all the blood-stained laurels that ever Cæsar tore from the livid brows of fallen kings, or all the jewels that ever Hannibal stripped from the frozen fingers of his slaughtered knights. The wisdom, moderation and reform foreshadowed in his brief administration were daily widening his influence and popularity, especially with the people of the South, and we hoped that he was hastening the day when we could all feel and say we have but one sky, one flag, one country and one President.

Gladstone's Coup D'Etat.

Detroit Evening News: The arrest of Parnell, and all the antecedent and attending circumstances, forcibly recall the stroke of despotism by which Napoleon III. in one night and by one blow struck down liberty in France in 1851, and placed behind the bars of prisons the men to whom the masses of republicans looked for leadership. Both were secretly and elaborately plotted, and when the trap was sprung an indignant and furious people found themselves confronted and paralyzed by an overwhelming and omnipresent military force. Fortunately the Irish, who are credited with so much impulsive rashness had the good sense to remain calm. Had they attempted to meet force with force, as the French did on the 3d of December, there is but little doubt that the streets of Dublin and Cork and Limerick would have run with blood of the helpless people last Thursday as did the streets of Paris.

HERALD OFFICE.

It is a terribly dry week for local news, but that is about the only dry thing we know of in this latitude.

MRS. H. E. STOUT invites the attention of the public to her new and elegant stock of millinery goods appropriate to the fall season. Many new novelties have been procured and her prices are beyond the reach of competition. The ladies will find it to their advantage to give her a call.

A POST-MORTEM examination was held on the body of Mrs. Abbie Comfort on Monday morning last. The gall stones were found occupying the gall bladder and a nearly complete closure of the passage leading from that bladder to the intestine. There was evidence of inflammation of the living membrane of both stomach and bowels, which was the immediate cause of death. The former was unquestionably the cause of the latter.

A Card.

To our many friends and neighbors both here and at Tecumseh who so kindly assisted in the search for our son, we extend our united thanks.

MR. & MRS. W. P. SILVERS.

Clinton, Oct. 19th, 1881.

After examining this number, but $3.50 need be sent to the Springfield, Mass. office to secure the other 23 numbers offered above. Otherwise obtained these 12 past numbers will cost $3.00 instead of 75 cents.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH. OCT. 20, 1881.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

THE Supervisors are still in session this week.

QUITE a number of our people are in Chicago this week.

ED. R. SMITH, of Clinton, gave us a short call last Monday afternoon.

THE Yorktown excursionists are having fine weather and a glorious time.

OMER EVERHART is the father of a bouncing boy baby and consequently is happy.

JOHN R. CLARK addressed the Reform Club last Monday evening. Glad to see him out again.

The Ogden center tile factory has turned out over 200,000 tile and 120,000 brick this season.

PROF. MOSES COIT TYLER was ordained to the Episcopal ministry at Ann Arbor, on Sunday last.

MR. M. P. BROWN wishes to sell his photograph gallery. This will be a fine business opening for some one.

COL. FITZSIMMONS will have command of the State Troops during the absence of Gen. Withington at Yorktown.

WM. SILVERS, the boy of Clinton, who strayed from home last week, was found in the township of Somerset, Hillsdale county.

LIVES of wealthy men remind us that we can die not worth a pence; if we spurn the county papers, and advertise upon the fence.

COL. L. SAVIERS was in town Tuesday and yesterday. He came out on business connected with the settlement of his father's estate.

P. J. WELLING had a severe congestive chill the other day, and is now confined to the house. He hopes to be about again soon, however.

ED. AND JIM HOUGH are shaking hands in Tecumseh this week. They are both at home on a short furlough, which they are spending to the best advantage.

THE Petersburgh, Monroe county, Bulletin, says a good crop of potatoes is being dug in that township. It is good to hear that potatoes are a good crop somewhere.

THE big LeRoy bridge has come to a standstill. Elijah Wilson had his part of the work completed several days ago, but the "other fellows" fail to come to time.

THE Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway company will not accept clipped or mutilated coins of any kind; neither will they accept Canadian silver coins.

FOR the sake of the poor sufferers north of us, and for the sake of poor people that have horses and cattle to keep we hope that the coming winter may be long coming, and mild when it does come.

POTATOES are rotting in the ground, clover seed is growing in the stack, corn is sprouting in the shock. If these rains continue much longer, many farmers will be in ill condition to pass the winter.

MR. JEREMIAH HENDRYX has left us a clipping from an old Seneca Co., N. Y. paper of the date of Nov. 15, 1831. It contains the official canvass of the election and several other interesting matters.

THE Cincinnati Weekly Times, advertised in another column, is a household favorite the country over, and has been for fifty years. At $1 a year it is one of the cheapest, as well as the best papers published.

MR. P. P. WRIGHT has been appointed Supt. of the Lake Shore, in place of Chas. Paine resigned. Mr. Wright was formerly Superintendent on the Buffalo division, but latterly he has been master of transportation on the Erie road.

Dundee Reporter: Tom Cowley experienced a lively runaway on Oct. 7th. He left his team standing in front of his barn untied, and they suddenly departed toward Tecumseh.—No damage done except to the dray which was slight.

LAST Friday evening it literally rained "pitchforks", but notwithstanding the storm the Opera House was nearly filled to witness Uncle Tom's Cabin. People never seem to tire of the play. A good company playing Uncle Tom's Cabin always draws a crowd.

LAST Saturday evening the monthly wages of the Peninsular Car Co., at Adrian, were paid to the men, amounting to $14,600. This is one of the results—not to mention many smaller enterprises—of the new Wabash railway, and yet some men contend that a competing railroad is an injury to a town.

Detroit Evening News: The Tecumseh man who invented the Wolverine hog ringer, manufactured at that village, has recently invented a machine for making these serviceable snout attachments. He is a universal genius, and it is not improbable that he may next invent a hog that don't need ringing.

THE bare footed boy is daily growing scarcer, and soon his toe marks will be seen no more in the sand.

WILL K. BIXBY, formerly of Adrian, who has been filling a responsible position on one of the Texas railroads has got a lift. He has his choice of purchasing agent for stationery or general baggage agent for 5,000 miles of railroad running south from St. Louis.

WE are informed that parties residing in the townships of Ridgeway and Macon have been shooting quail, in violation of the game law of this state. Such parties had better look a "leedle" out, as the game law imposes a fine of not less than $50 for each quail killed before Nov. 1st.

FRANK SILVERS, of Clinton, has formed a partnership with Ben Reynolds in the Livery Stable business, and will take up his residence among us next week. Frank is well posted in that line, is a good business man, and will make a valuable addition to our census list. The new firm will be a strong one and will doubtless receive a good patronage.

A CHANGE has taken place in the Adrian Record. Mr. Mann retires from the firm, his interest having been purchased by Mr. Bonner. E. J. Smith, formerly editor of the Adrian Press, will act as editor of the Record. Mr. Smith will hereafter do the office work of the Record and Mr. Stearns will run the Press on his own hook. Mr. Mann intends to look up a newspaper job in Detroit.

JOSH BILLINGS, in speaking of Long Branch, says: "Long Branch iz a work ov natur and iz a good job. The biggest thing they hev got here just now iz a big pool in front ov the hotels. This pool iz said to be 3000 miles long and 5 miles thick in some places. Into this pool, every day at ten o'clock the people go in—men wimen, children and widders—permiskus. The scenery iz fine, especially the pool, and the air is as bracing az a milk punch.

The discussion of "The Christian Religion," by Col. Ingersoll and Judge Black, which was commenced in the August number of the North American Review, is continued in the November number of that publication. Col. Ingersol now replies to the strictures of his opponent, and presents much more fully than he has ever done before the logical grounds for his opposition to christianity. The article will be received with interest by those who have read the first part of the debate, as well as by all those who believe that the cause of truth is best advanced by free discussion. An early number of the Review will contain an exhaustive reply.

AN item elsewhere states that many farms are for sale in the burnt district at very low figures. The face of the country has undergone a wonderful change. The fire completely consumed most of the timber, so as to fit the soil for crops. All the underbrush, rubbish, &c., were literally swept clean. Then came warm rains and fine weather and more rains so that now a luxuriant crop of grass has sprung up covering every foot of the soil for miles in extent. Wheat has been sown on land this fall which was so heavily timbered that five years would have been required to prepare it for a crop. Those farmers who are sufficiently out of debt to be enabled to keep their farms will be better off in five years than they would have been without the fire.

MR. HENRY G. VENNOR, Dear Sir: I have watched your weather prophecies with much interest and appreciate your efforts to give the country a properly regulated weather bureau. But your recent efforts in this direction have seriously shaken my confidence. If you intend that our Michigan farmers shall have any corn left to raise pork with, or any potatoes for the babies, or any clover seed for next spring's use, you must 'let up' on this rainy season at once. Our cisterns are all full now, the wells are properly supplied, mills have all the water power they want, and young ducks can find puddles of water on every square rod of ground in Michigan. Please take pity on us now and 'let up.'

Your Obedient Servant,

A WOLVERINE FARMER.

MR. T. D. GRIFFITH AND WIFE, of Lawrence, Kan., passed the Sabbath in Tecumseh as the guests of Mr. J. D. Sholes. Mr. Griffith resided here when a boy and knew every nook and corner of Tecumseh forty years ago. He finds that the village has changed a good deal since then. Mr. Griffith has traveled over most of the western states quite extensively during the past few years, and he says that he has never found a finer farming country than the northern portion of Lenawee county. The eastern towns, which were undeveloped thirty years ago, when he lived here, are rapidly catching up with the older towns.—Twenty-five years hence the entire county will be a garden. He says that a man who owns a good farm here all paid for is very foolish to go west with the expectation of bettering himself.

THE Universalist General Convention is in session this week in Detroit. The elegant new church, one of the finest in Detroit, was dedicated Tuesday evening. The regular session of the convention began Wednesday morning and will close to-morrow evening. Rev. H. Shepard is in Detroit this week attending the meetings.

Adrian Record: Adrian has been made headquarters for several officials on the Wabash road, who will come here with their families to reside.—George Anthony, road master; line repairer, Philip Kells; road carpenter, Thomas Anderson, and car inspector, Louis Hiler, will hereafter be citizens of Adrian. Most of these officials employ more or less men under them, all of whom, of course, will make Adrian their home. Blacksmith shops, tool houses, and other buildings are to be at once erected here, and this is to be the headquarters for two sections of the road.

Adrian Times: Wm. R. Holmes, who is night watchman in the Lake Shore yards, this morning took his axe to Comstock's mill to grind it. While grinding it his attention was attracted from his work and his right hand slipped from the grindstone and was caught by the index finger between the stone and the frame. The axe followed the hand and wedged it in. Fortunately the belt driving the stone was a trifle loose and the wedge stopped its revolution, but not before the finger, nearly to the first joint was completely ground out. The sufferer with great grit, went at once to Dr. Rynd's office, and the tip of his finger was amputated at the first joint. The wound bled profusely, but Holmes bore the operation manfully.

THE success of the Detroit Evening News has been most wonderful. Prior to its establishment no Detroit daily had ever had a regular issue of over 5000 copies. The founder of the News hoped to gain 10,000 subscribers, but deemed it would be a work of some years. Notwithstanding, the paper closed its first year with a circulation of 12,000 copies. At three years it had reached 17,000, and 20,000 copies was then put at the limit of possibilities. But 20,600 was reached and passed in the fall of 1878, since which period the growth has been steady and constant, until to-day it exceeds 33,000 copies per day—a circulation surpassed by but few daily newspapers in the United States. And all this has been won by sheer merit alone.

It is now evident that relief sufficient to place the fire sufferers in comfortable circumstances can not be obtained, and many are obliged to dispose of at least a portion of their farms. These lands are practically clear of timber and can be purchased at prices ranging from $6 to $18 per acre. The soil, naturally fertile has been vastly enriched by the fire, and is in splendid condition for spring crops. Markets are near and accessible by water or rail. There is not the slightest possibility of another fire.—Parties who desire a cleared farm at the price of wild lands, and at the same time wish to aid the sufferers are requested to come to the burned district and investigate for themselves. Those who cannot do so, may get any information desired free of charge, by addressing Relief Committee, Minden, Mich.

DEATH OF WILLIAM RICHARD.

Another pioneer has gone to his rest. Wm. Richard, Esq., has been in feeble health for several months, but he has been able to be in his office until a few days ago. He has failed rapidly during the past few days, and upon Sunday evening last he quietly passed away. The deceased has been prominently identified with the business interests of Tecumseh for more than forty years. He was for many years the owner of this newspaper, and he gave the people of Tecumseh a weekly journal at a sacrifice to himself of several hundred dollars. In October, 1852, the HERALD passed into the possession of Richard & Baxter, who conducted it jointly for three years. Mr. Richard then purchased the entire property, and until 1866 he conducted it personally or rented it to other parties.—The deceased made all the arrangements for his funeral before his death, having selected the clergyman to conduct the services, the hymns to be sung, the pall bearers and the friend to prepare an obituary notice. The funeral was held from his family residence last Tuesday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. J. A. DeSpelder, of Macon, and Rev. Wm. Grandy.

A fitting obituary is in preparation by an intimate friend of the deceased which will appear in our next week's issue. "Uncle William," as he was familiarly called, will be seen no more among us. Many a time has he befriended us, when we were sorely in need of help. A friend in need never called upon him in vain. We desire to record our feeble testimonial to his personal worth, his business enterprise, and the faithfulness with which he rendered substantial aid and comfort to all who leaned upon him for help.

Dec. Oct. 27

BRYANT'S DAY.

The anniversary of the birth of William Cullen Bryant will be observed in the different departments of the Tecumseh public schools on the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 3. The exercises in the High School will include abstracts of some of Bryant's orations and addresses, prose renderings of some of his best poems read by the students; biographical and descriptive sketches, reviews of poems with statements of the circumstances under which they were written, and recitations of poems in whole or in part.

In the grammar department there will be biographical and descriptive sketches and recitations.

The exercises in the primary department will consist mainly of recitations. Much care has been taken by the teachers to make selections adapted to the understanding of the little folks, and at the same time secure those which contain grand truths or embody great principles.

Very, few of Bryant's poems are adapted to child life and it has been difficult to secure selections for the lower departments. It is hoped however that the children have been benefited and that the many visitors expected will be interested and fully paid for their time and attention. In the higher departments the work which is being done in this direction is certainly very profitable to those engaged in it and will prove valuable to all who are sufficiently interested to attend the exercises.

Patrons of the school are earnestly requested to be present, both for their own interest and for the encouragement of the pupils. It is the nature of man to work more readily and cheerfully when his work is commended by others. While this is true at all ages it is especially noticeable during childhood and youth. But how is it possible to commend without knowledge, and how is the knowledge to be obtained without attending the exercises?

All visitors will be welcome not only at the time of these exercises but at all times.

COUNTY CLIPPINGS.

Morenci is preparing for a lecture course this winter.

Ex-Mayor Waldby, of Adrian, is selling all his real estate in that city and intends to move to Minnesota.

The Adrian Light Guards left for Yorktown last Thursday. They went to Jackson over our branch and from there on Friday by the special train via. the Jackson & Fort Wayne and Baltimore & Ohio railways.

The Adrian Record has made a humble and full retraction of its charges against N. M. Howard, of Toledo. Upon further investigation the editor has become satisfied that his published statement was false.

Clinton is going to have a lecture course this winter. The list made up is as follows: A. P. Burbank, October 20th; Hon. Geo. R. Wendling, November 16; Swedeish Lady Quartette, December 2; Dr. Isaac I. Hayes, December 28; Col. G. P. Sanford, January 25th; Wm. B. Affleck, February.

Hudson Gazette: A few days since, while hunting rabbits in the woods, Seymour Pettit badly wounded his left hand by a shot from the revolver which he was using. The ball struck square between the first and second finger, and passed over the bone to the back of his hand, where it was extracted. Dr. Rice dressed the injured member. Another warning to you boys, when using dangerous firearms.

The girls of Weston, Lenawee Co., boast of their skill in horseback riding. They even ride clothes-pin fashion and bare-backed—that is, the horse is bare-backed.—Evening News.

Upon which the Morenci Observer remarks:

We would like to see the fellow who wrote the above in a ten acre lot with those Weston girls, and if he didn't ride a rail, clothes-pin fashion, with a coat of tar ornamented with feathers in about a minute, then we are simply mistaken.

WE record this week the marriage of Mr. Satterlee and Miss Eva Hause. The groom was formerly a teacher in our schools, and now occupies a position as manager in a large carriage establishment at Kansas City. Miss Hause has long been a favorite in Tecumseh society, and she will leave her old home accompanied by the good wishes of many friends.

REV. E. R. HASCALL has desided to leave Tecumseh, at least temporarily, and has taken up his residence at Warsaw, Ind. We regret his departure, as we supposed he was a fixture here.

ARCHIE SHERRARD got home from his trip to New York last evening. He has purchased a very large stock of goods in his line which are arriving daily.

SMITH GERMAN, of Franklin, has left at our office a few splendid bellflower apples. They are bouncers.

REMEMBER the social at Mr. Montgomery's, Thursday evening, Oct. 27.

Diptheria and Scarlet Fever.

For the benefit of our readers who may have loved ones suffering with that dreaded disease, diptheria, we publish by request, a remedy for it. Dr. May, of New York, who has so successfully treated very many cases of scarlet fever and diptheria with the newly discovered remedy of sulpho-carbonate of soda, says a cure for the above diseases, says:

"The use of sulpho-carbonate of soda in diptheria has become a settled fact by the best physicians of New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia to be the only certain specific for that dreaded disease diptheria, which has taken off so many children in the United States during eight years. In its use it is certain to destroy the parasite fungus in the throat and glands in two hours. Ten grains dissolved in a tumbler half full of cold water, and take from half to a teaspoonful every hour until the parasite is destroyed; then one in two or three hours according to the circumstances of the case. There is no use in physicians fighting against this remedy, for they will have to use it if they have success in the treatment of scarlet fever and diptheria. It is a specific in both diseases, as they are both zymotic in their nature, and are produced by the parasite in the system. It will prevent both diseases if given before an attack, as well as a remedy. This remedy has been used for diptheria and scarlet fever for over three years, and if given before gangrene sets in will work wonders in every case. It was discovered in 1871 by an English physician, and has grown into favor as a specific ever since, particularly with children.

The trichina parasite of pork as soon as it enters the stomach is absorbed by the blood, then into the muscles of the body. It is not so with the diptheria parasite; it is generated in the stomach, and when it spreads up the œsophagus it produces such a high state of inflammation that gangrene sets in, dissolves the parasite, and carries it all through the blood, which is always fatal. Gangrene always dissolves the parasite, but before that takes place the use of sulpho-carbonate of soda will save every case. I have written these lines by special request of very many citizens and friends who desire it made public for the benefit of all.

How a Man Goes to Bed.

Speaking of how a man goes to bed, an exchange says: "There's where a man has the advantage. He can undress in a cold room, and have his bed warm before a woman has got her hair pins out and her shoes untied.' That's how it looks in print, and this is how it is really: 'I'm going to bed my dear. It's half-past ten.' No reply. 'Now, John, you're always late in the morning. I go to bed!' 'Yes, in a minute,' he replies as he turns the paper inside out and begins a lengthy article headed 'The Louisiana Muddle.' Fifteen minutes later she calls from the bedroom: 'John, come to bed, and don't keep the gas burning there all night!' and, murmuring something about 'the bill being big enough now,' she creeps between the cold sheets, while John reads placidly on, his feet across the piano stool and a cigar in his mouth. By and by he rises, yawns, stretches himself, throws the paper on the floor, and, seizing the poker, proceeds to that vigorous exercise, shaking the coal stove. Just at this stage a not altogether pleasant voice inquires: 'For pity's sake! ain't you ready for bed yet?' 'Yes, yes; I'm coming! Why don't you go to sleep and let a fellow alone?' Then he discovers that there is coal needed. When that is supplied and rattled into the stove he sits down to warm his feet. Next, he slowly begins to undress; and as he stands scratching himself, and absently gazing on the last garment dangling over the back of the chair, he remembers that the the clock is not wound yet. When this is attended to he wants a drink of water, and away he promenades to the kitchen. Of course, when he returns his skin resembles that of a picked chicken, and once more he seats himself before the fire for a last 'warm up.' As the clock strikes twelve he turns out the gas, and with a flop of the bed clothes and a few spasmodic shivers he subsides. No, not yet: he forgets to see if the front door is locked, and another flop of the bed clothes brings forth the remark; 'Good gracious! if that man ain't enough to try the patience of Job: Setting her teeth hard, she awaits the final flop, and then quietly inquires: 'Are you settled for the night?' To which he replies by muttering: 'If you ain't the provokingest woman.'"

The Bulk of Silver.

The new vault in the United States sub-treasury, which was prepared for the storage of silver dollars, is forty-eight feet in length, thirty feet wide, and twelve feet high. If every available inch should be packed solidly with 412½ grain dollars it would not hold far from forty million dollars. Everyone knows that silver is bulky, but few persons are aware how bulky it is. A bag of 1,000 412½ grain dollars weighs 59 3-16 pounds avordupois. Accordingly, 100,000 dollars weigh not far from three tons. If a merchant or a banker having a payment of $30,000 to make, is compelled by circumstances to pay with silver dollars, he would need a vehicle as strong and as large as an ordinary coal cart (made to carry a ton of coal) to transport them and if this should be heaped up no more than 32,000 silver dollars could be loaded on it.

Big Results from Little Causes.

"Do you know?" remarked a man to his friend on Chestnut Street, a day or two since, "I believe both Conkling and Platt had a bad case of skin disease when they resigned!" "What makes you think?" inquired the listener in astonishment. "Well, you see they acted in such an eruptive manner—so rash-ly as it were. Save?" "Oh! yes, I save," replied the other, "they were boil—ing over and merely resigned to humor themselves, I suppose." If such is the case, the National difficulty might have been averted by applying Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

Is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West!

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca; with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island" is magnificently equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

At ENGLEWOOD, with the L.S. & M.S., and Pt. Ft. W. & C. R. Rds.

The Jackson Citizen has been looking back into history. It shows that while Chicago was still burning, in October, 1871, an aid meeting was called at Jackson, and in 40 minutes $3817 in cash and 40 barrels of flour were raised for suffering Chicago, and the next day the sum was increased to $5757. Colts had a sum of money with him when seen last, and the belief is that he was killed for plunder on or about November 1, 1880. TO ADVERTISERS.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

The ban of disqualification is removed from my pen at a time when little that is pleasant remains to be told. Sunday I attended the funeral of Mr. Ira Reynolds, a long time resident of this village. His death occurred under circumstances peculiarly distressing, and drew around his family a host of sympathizing friends.—He was widely known in Lenawee county where many of his relatives reside, and his name is familiar to the few veterans remaining, who shared with him the hardships of the Mexican war. His record as a soldier was honorable, but as a citizen he was a man of peace and uniformly kind to his family.

PEARLIE.

Farmers' Club.

The regular meeting of the Farmers' Club will be held at John Fisher's Friday evening, Nov. 4th. The following is the program:

Singing and Instrumental music.
Select Reading—Mrs. J. Fisher.
Essay—Mrs. F. Rector.
Subject for Discussion—The best and most economical manner of securing the corn crop, and the best way of saving seed corn.

All that are interested in farm discussions are invited to attend. Farmers, come out and compare results, and make our meetings interesting and profitable.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

Adrian Press: At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Hulett, of this city were gathered Tuesday evening, a large crowd of friends accompanied by the K. T. band. The occasion was a somewhat singular one, but in harmony with ancestral precedent.—Away back in the Hulett family it was and still is the custom to bake and seal up a cake on the marriage of the first born the cake to remain sealed till the 21st birthday of the first born of the next generation. On this occasion "Buzz" Hulett had attained the age when the cake should be cut and it was found well preserved after 25 years. The scene was one of rare enjoyment to all who were present.—The young man, Mr. "Buzz" Hulett, was the recipient of some very handsome presents, among which was a silver B flat cornet. Buzz is a "blower" and knows how to use it.

Godey's Lady's Book for November

Opens with a beautiful Steel Plate engraving, "Recalled to Life," a richly colored double page fashion illustration, with numerous engravings of various designs of the latest fashions. The diagram pattern is a novelty in the fact that it is a Lady's Bodice without shoulder seams. The novelette is a thrilling story of land and sea, by Thomas S. Collier, entitled "Beyond." There are numerous shorter stories by good writers, Aunt Ruth's funny sayings, and indeed the general get-up of the magazine is worthy of all praise. One thing to be said of this old favorite is, that there is never any vulgarity or immorality in its pages, and therefore, it is worthy of a place in any refined home. The publication office is 1006 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Adrian Times: The authorities of the reform school are in a quandary what to do with a recent accession to the institution from Ann Arbor. The girl is evidently crazy, and the way she bites and scratches the other girls is far from quieting to their nerves.—Yesterday she varied the order of exercises by belting one of the girls over the head with a tumbler. The return of Capt. Miller, the local member of the board of control, is anxiously awaited by both teachers and pupils at the school, for until he returns it is not thought best to take action in the direction of sending her back to Ann Arbor. She ought never to have been sent here.

Clinton News: William Millspaugh met with a painful accident Saturday. He was at work on the new house of Mrs. Howell, north of the town hall, putting on the roof when the high wind blew him off the scaffold. He fell to the ground striking in such a way as to break his left wrist. The side of his head was also bruised. In his fall he struck a brace on the scaffold which broke the full force of the fall, or he would have probably been injured much more seriously.

OUR farmer friends all give good reports of the present condition of the growing wheat. All agree that the season has been the very best for it, that a large acreage has been put in and that it looks most excellent at this stage of the game.

CIRCUIT COURT.

October 19.—The court to-day is engaged upon the case of Casper Ruedy and George Shloeller vs. Christ Burghart. Appeal, Judge Stacy and E. T. Cook for the plaintiff, Weaver & Weaver and O. F. Sheldon for the defense. In this case the plaintiff claims that the defendant owed them a store debt, which was in part to be paid in apples, and that the defendant did not keep the apples in proper condition, while the defendant claims that the plaintiff did not come after the apples as per agreement, so that they were frozen.

October 20.—In the case of Kasper Ruedy and George Shloller vs. Christ Burghart the jury brought a verdict of $65 in favor of the defendant.

In the afternoon the court was occupied with the case of George McCormick vs. Lester Gibbs. Breach of contract, appealed from justice court. In this case the plaintiff claims that the defendant did not clear off sixteen acres of land as per agreement, and the defendant claims that he did not clear the land because plaintiff did not do as agreed, and because the land was so wet that he could not work thereon.

October 21.—In the case of McCormick vs. Gibbs, the jury brought in a verdict for the defendant, no cause of action.

In the case of M. E. Chittenden & Co. vs. Hitchcock & Saviers, judgment of $180.36 by consent, for plaintiff.

The case of Benjamin H. Warder et al. vs. Jacob Reed, the last jury trial of the present term was called on this morning. In this case the plaintiffs sue to recover the price of a Champion self-binding harvester, sold to defendant, the conditions of sale being that if the harvester did not perform according to warranty, it might be returned to plaintiffs, free of cost. B. F. Graves, Hammond & Barkworth, attorneys for plaintiffs, and Millard & Bean for defense.

Blissfield Advance: Bert, a young son of Dr. Parker's, had a narrow escape from drowning last Monday noon. The doctor having experimented in boring for water last summer, filled up the hole and covered it over with sod. The recent heavy rains had settled the earth filled in, the sod remaining apparently solid. Bert, who was walking about, accidently stepped onto the thin crust thus formed, which gave away under his weight and he was percipitated into the water and mud below. Bertha, an elder sister, saw the accident, and calling for help, Miss Ladoucour ran to his assistance, reaching down five or six feet to where Bert had caught hold of the earth and kept himself above water. The hole was twenty-three feet deep and it was remarkable the child did not sink out of sight at once. Miss Ladoucour is to be complimented for her prompt action in rescuing the boy; and more so, as she had nothing to cling to while reaching down but the bank above, which might have caved in any moment.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

OCT. 18.—The board met yesterday at 2 P. M. The report of the committee on equalization, substantially the same as in June, was adopted.

H. C. Conkling presented the report of the superintendents of the poor which may be summarized as follows:

Transportation, Lenawee county and office accounts	$ 384 52
Temporary relief for the city poor	6027 19
" " " " county poor	4021 04
Expenses at the county house	8497 26

The committee on ways and means recommends that for the year 1881, $82,585.25 be raised upon the taxable property of Lenawee county.

The reports of the committees on ways and means and equalization were referred to the committee on apportionment to apportion the state and county tax.

This morning the committee on public buildings changed their former report as far as the old jail is concerned. It is becoming very necessary to enlarge some of the county offices and therefore the committee submitted a proposition by A. J. Dean to the board. Mr. Dean proposed to build brick offices in connection with his opera house suitable for the county treasurer and clerk, with suitable vaults attached, for which he proposed to charge $300 rent per annum.

The account of J. S. Harrison, court stenographer, was not allowed.

A. L. Bliss appeared before the board and offered to sell his abstract of titles to the county. His proposition was referred to the committee on ways and means.

The board adjourned until 9 A. M. to-morrow.

OCTOBER 19.—The board met this morning according to adjournment.

J. S. Harrison was allowed to withdraw and correct his claim, and present it at the next session. After a report from the judiciary committee the board adjourned until 7 o'clock.

This afternoon the board visited the reform school and the county poor house.

OCTOCER 20.—The board met according to adjournment Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

The chairman was authorized to appoint a committee of three to dispose of the old jail property.

Supervisor Cogswell brought a petition signed by a hundred names of Blissfield men, asking that Josephus M. Robertson be appointed drain commissioner. After considering the subject, the board concluded to indefinitely postpone the appointing of drain commissioner.

One hundred dollars were appropriated to pay Judge Morris for holding the summer term of court in 1879, during the illness of Judge Pratt.

The committee on printing reported that the Adrian Press had made the lowest bid for the county printing during the coming year, and recommended that it be therefore given to the Press. Report adopted.

A number of claims, including the supervisors' accounts, were allowed.

It was resolved that each and all drains now completed, or in process of construction, be referred to the drain commissioner of the township in which the drain is situated.

The account of George Westerman, drain commissioner, was allowed.

It was resolved that each supervisor be allowed to correct all errors in his assessment roll.

The taxes upon the different drains were allowed as placed by the commissioner, with the exception of a few corrections, mostly in descriptions.

This morning it was resolved that the township drain commissioners be allowed to accept all contracts made by the last county drain commissioner, and furnish contractors' certificates which shall authorize the clerk to issue an order on the county treasurer for contract price.

The board adjourned until Dec. 26.

Dundee Ledger: A young lady of a village not over a thousand miles from Dundee was terribly upset by her own foolish mistake. Being sent for some flour to a store in a hurry, took what she supposed to be a clean pillowslip from the bureau drawer.—When she bounded into the store, smiling like a basket of chips, she handed the thing to be filled with flour. The store-keeper didn't notice what they were until a scoop full of floor had gone through them. When he raised them up and displayed the two outlets at the bottom, nicely fringed, the young lady quickly "lit out," without saying a word, and the storekeeper covered with flour, laid the garment in the money drawer to await her return, which had not eventuated at the last report.

A six months game of freeze out will begin soon.

Harper's Magazine for November, concluding the sixty-third volume, is a number of rare excellence. It opens with a very interesting article, by W. H. Rideing, entitled "In Cornwall with an Umbrella." We are reminded again of the Yorktown Centennial, by Mr. Howard Pyle's strong poem, "Tilghman's Ride from Yorktown to Philadelphia," with two striking illustrations from the author's drawing. In the second instalment of his "Journalistic London," Joseph Hatton describes the London Times building and gives a history of that paper, with an interesting account of the careers of the late Mr. Delane and his successor, Mr. Chenery, as Editors. One of the most entertaining things in the article is the biographical sketch of Henry Labouchere—the editor of Truth. The article is profusely illustrated with sketches and portraits. A very interesting chapter in the pioneer history of Ohio is contributed by Alfred Mathews, under the title of "Ohio's First Capital"—referring to Chillicothe. The forthcoming volumes will be even more interesting and beautiful than the volume just concluded—rich as the latter has been in literary and artistic treasures.

Morenci Observer: Our citizens, that is to say "the kids," who are making a rattling among the dry bones of this part of the valley of the Bean, are feeling pretty well over three important prospective acquisitions to our local interests, and they are these: 1st, A good stave mill that will do a staving business for the next few years, 2d, The establishment in our union schools of Normal department, under the direction of one of the most thorough teachers in this part of the county; and 3d The securing of a first-class lecture course for the coming winter.

THE Michigan crop report for October, made up from returns from 1,002 correspondents in 674 tows, has been received. It shows that the acreage sown to wheat this fall is but little if any greater than in 1880; that the number of acres of potatoes raised was about the same, but that the yield per acre was not over two-thirds as much, and that the acreage of clover seed was about one-fifth greater, and the yield per acre one-fourth greater than than in 1880. As there has probably been considerable wheat sown since October 1, the estimate is doubtless too low, and later reports are likely to change the estimates of the yield of clover seed and potatoes, and therefore correspondents will be asked to again report on December 1 the acreage of wheat sown, and the yield of corn, clover seed and potatoes.—Evening News.

Co. B, of Adrian, had a fine time on their Yorktown trip. Among other trophies they brought home a genuine contraband, a little negro bootblack.

KATIE'S ANSWER.

"Now, Katie's a rose, is thine,
But her eyes, like the sky, are so blue,
An' her dimples so swate,
An' her ankles so nate,
She dazed, an' she bothered me, too—

Till one morning we went for a ride
Whin, demure as a bride at my side
The darlin', she sat,
With the wickedest hat
'Neath purty girl's chin ever tied.

An' my heart, arrah, thin how it bate!
For my Kate looked so temptin' an' swate,
Wid cheeks like the roses,
An' all the red posies
That grow in her garden so nate.

But I got just as thinte as the dead,
Till she said, with a toss of her head,
"If I'd known that to-day
You'd have nothing to say,
I'd have gone with my cousin Hayduck."

Thin I felt myself grow very bold,
For I knew she didn't scold if I'd hold
Av the love in my heart,
That would never depart,
Though I'd live to be wrinkled and gray.

An' I said: "If I dared to do so,
I'd jump off my hoss, an' I'd throw
Both arms about your waist,
An' bestain a taste
Av them lips that are coaxin' me so."

Thin she blushed a more liligant red
As she said, without rissin her head,
An' her eyes lookin' down
'Neath her lashes so brown,
"Would ye like me to drive, Mather Ted?"

Esquimaux Houses.

SNOW ARCHITECTURE.—THE EXPERTNESS OF THE MANIPULATORS.

As probably many people know, an igloo is usually built of snow. The word, however, means house, and as their house consists of a single room it also means room. Sometimes at points that are regularly occupied during the winter months, igloos are built of stones and moss piled up around and over them, so that when covered by the winter snows they make very comfortable dwellings. This is the case at Igloolik, which means the place of igloos, and also near Tullock point, on King William's Land, where the ruins of these underground houses are quite numerous. They had been built a great many years ago by the Ookjooliks, when they occupied the land before the Netchillik invasion. A long, low passage way leads into each dwelling, so constructed as to exclude the wind from the interior, though ventilation is permitted by leaving open the door. This, by the way, is an Inuit custom. Even in the coldest weather the door is open except when the occupants are asleep, and they are only closed then to keep the dogs from making a raid on the igloo. If the door faces the wind a shelter is erected outside to cut off the wind so that the door need not be closed. The coldest day I ever saw, when the thermometer was 71° below zero, the door of our igloo was open all the time we were not asleep. A snow igloo is made of snow-blocks about three feet by eighteen inches wide and five or six inches thick.

The snow knife is simply a large thin-bladed knife, like a cheese knife of the grocery stores, with a handle made large enough to be conveniently grasped with both hands. Before iron and knives became so plentiful as at present, snow knives were made of bone and reindeer or musk-ox horn, but such knives are quite rare now. The Netchillik, Ookjoolik and Ooquesiksillik tribes are still quite deficient in iron weapons and implements, and many of their knives are marvels of ingenuity. I saw several made of a little tip of iron, perhaps an inch square, mounted on a handle two feet long, and so shaped that the iron would do much of the cutting and scratching, and the handle merely acted as a wedge to assist the operation. I also saw a man making a knife by cutting a thick piece of iron with a cold chisel, afterward to be pounded out flat and ground down on stones. The entire operation would probably take about three or four weeks with the poor tools at their disposal.

The builder selects snow of the proper consistency by sounding a drift with a cane made for the purpose, of reindeer horn, straightened by steaming, and worked down until about half an inch in diameter, with a ferule of walrus tusk or the tooth of a bear on the bottom. By thrusting this into the snow he can tell whether the layers deposited by successive winds are separated by bands of soft snow, which would cause the blocks to break. When the snow is selected he digs a pit to the depth of 18 inches or two feet, and about the length of the snow block. He then steps into the pit and proceeds to cut out the blocks, first cutting down at the end of the pit and then the bottom, afterward cutting a little channel about an inch or two deep, marking the thickness of the proposed block.

Now comes the part that requires practice to accomplish successfully. The expert will, with a few thrusts of the knife in just the right places, split off the snow block and lift it carefully out to wait the removal to its position on the wall. The novice will almost inevitably break the block into two or three pieces utterly unfit for the use of the builder. When two men are building an igloo one cuts the blocks and the other erects the wall. When sufficient blocks have been cut out to commence work the builder marks with his eye or perhaps draws a line with his knife describing the circumference of the building, usually a circle about ten or twelve feet in diameter. The first row of blocks is then arranged, the blocks placed so as to incline inward, and resting against each other at the ends, thus affording mutual support. When this row is completed the builder cuts away the first and second blocks, slanting them from the groung upward, so that the second tier resting upon the edges of the first row can be continued and around spirally, and by gradually increasing the inward slant a perfect dome is constructed of such strength that the builder can lie flat upon the outside while chinking the interstices between the blocks. The chinking, is however, usually done by the women and children as the building progresses, and additional prorection secured from the winds in very cold weather by banking up with a large wooden snow shovel, the snow at the base often being piled to the depth of three or four feet. This makes the igloo perfectly impervious to the wind in the most tempestuous weather. When the house is completed the builders are walled in. Then a small hole about two feet square is cut in the wall on the side away from where the entrance is to be located, and is used to pass in the lamps and bedding. It is then walled up and the regular door cut about two feet high and nicked at the top. It would bring bad luck to carry the bedding into the igloo by the same door it would be taken out. Before the door is opened the bed is constructed of snow blocks, and made from one to three or four feet high and occupies three-fourths of the entire space. The higher the bed and the lower the door the warmer the igloo will be.

THE BUILDING OF THE SHIP.

PART II.—THE LAUNCH.

All is finished! and at length
Has come the bridal day
Of beauty and of strength.
To-day the vessel shall be launched!
With fleecy clouds the sky is blanched
And o'er the bay,
Slowly, in all his splendors dight,
The great sun rises to behold the sight.

The ocean old,
Centuries old,
Strong as youth,
And as uncontrolled,
Paces restless to and fro
Up and down the sands of gold.
His beating heart is not at rest;
And far and wide,
With ceaseless flow,
His beard of snow,
Heaves with the heaving of his breast.

SHE STARTS.

He waits impatient for his bride.
There she stands,
With her feet upon the sands,
Decked with flags and streamers gay
In honor of her marriage day,
Her snow-white signals fluttering, blending,
Round her like a veil descending,
Ready to be
The bride of the gray old sea.

On the deck another bride
Is standing by her lover's side.
Shadows from the flags and shrouds,
Like the shadows cast by clouds,
Broken by many a sunny fleck,
Fall around them on the deck.

The prayer is said, the service read,
The joyous bridegroom bows his head;
And in tears the good old Master
Shakes the brown hand of his son,
Kisses his daughter's glowing cheek
In silence, for he cannot speak,
And ever faster
Down his own the tears begin to run.
The worthy pastor—
The shepherd of that wandering flock,
That has the ocean for its wold,
That has the vessel for its fold,
Leaping ever from rock to rock—
Spake, with accents mild and clear,
Words of warning, words of cheer,
But tedious to the bridegroom's ear.
He knew the chart
Of the sailor's heart,
All its pleasures and its griefs,
All its shallows and rocky reefs
All those secret currents, that flow
With such resistless undertow,
And lift and drift with terrible force,
The will from its moorings and its course.
Therefore he spake, and thus said he:
"Like unto ships far off at sea,

SHE MOVES.

Outward or homeward bound, are we.
Before, behind, and all around,
Floats and swings the horizon's bound,
Seems at its distant rim to rise
And climb the crystal wall of the skies,
And then again to turn and sink,
As if we could slide from its outer brink.
Ah! it is not the sea,
It is not the sea that sinks and shelves,
But ourselves
That rock and rise
With endless and uneasy motion,
Now touching the very skies,
Now sinking into the depths of ocean.
Ah! if your souls but poise and swing
Like the compass in its brazen ring,
Ever level and ever true
To the toil and the task we have to do,
We shall sail securely, and safely reach
The Fortunate Isles, on whose shining beach
The sights we see, and the sounds we hear,
Will be those of joy and not of fear!"

Then the Master,
With a gesture of command,
Waved his hand,
And at the word,
Loud and sudden
there was heard,
All around them,
and below,
The sound of hammers, blow on blow, Knocking away
the shores and spars.
And see! she stirs!
She starts!—she moves!—she seems to feel

SHE SEEMS TO FEEL
THE THRILL OF LIFE ALONG HER KEEL

The thrill of life along her keel,
And, spurning with her foot the ground,
With one exulting, joyous bound,
She leaps into the ocean's arms!

And lo! from the assembled crowd
There rose a shout, prolonged and loud,
That to the ocean seemed to say,
"Take her, O bridegroom, old and gray,
Take her to thy protecting arms,
With all her youth and all her charms!"
How beautiful she is! How fair
She lies within those arms that press
Her form with many a soft caress
Of tenderness and watchful care!
Sail forth into the sea, O ship!
Through wind and wave, right onward steer!
The moistened eye, the trembling lip
Are not the signs of doubt or fear.
Sail forth into the sea of life,
O gentle, loving, trusting wife,
And safe from all adversity
Upon the bosom of that sea
Thy comings and thy goings be!
For gentleness and love and trust
Prevail o'er angry wave and gust;
And in the wreck of noble lives
Something immortal still survives!

Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what master laid thy keel,
What workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope.
Fear not each sudden sound and shock
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's rear,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, no fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee!

Longfellow.

Not long ago an Irishman applied to an overseer in a Tyne ship-yard to be put on a job. He was informed that his request could not be complied with; but as Pat continued to gaze at an anchor which was lying in the vicinity, the foreman repeated his reply that there was no work for him, and advised him to go away. "Divil a bit will I stir, sorr, till I see the man that's going to use that pick."

Death to rats and vermin, Parsons' Exterminator.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Sauce Robert.—Put two medium-sized onions, chopped very fine, with a large lump of butter, in a stew-pan; let them brown well, constantly stirring; add a teaspoonful of flour mixed with half a pint of good stock; salt and pepper; cook about five minutes; add a teaspoonful of mixed mustard and one of vinegar.

Sauce for Venison Steak.—Put a cup of stock, a small teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, and a very little cayenne, two or three cloves and a few allspice in a saucepan; let all boil up, then stir in a piece of butter half the size of an egg, in which a teaspoonful of flour has been well mixed; one teaspoonful of currant jelly; one wineglassful of claret; heat it once more, pour it through a strainer so as to remove the whole spice.

Making Coffee with Cold Water.—An exchange says that the full aroma of coffee can be extracted without any application of fire by the following process, and that indeed cold water gives the best results: Take five ounces of the best Mocha or old government Java; roast and grind to a coarse powder; pour the grounds into a glass bottle or decanter; pour on a sufficient quantity of cold water to cover the coffee; stop the mouth of the bottle or decanter close; set in a warm place for thirty hours; now filter the infusion by passing it through some fine lawn or blotting-paper placed on a glass funnel, or by straining through muslin. The experiment, it is asserted, will delight as well as surprise all ladies of intelligence and taste.

Mashed Potato.—To make it light and delicate, beat it with a spoon after you have seasoned it. Mash it well, salting first. It is often made too salt for my taste, and as I cannot take out the salt, it sometimes seems to me it would be quite fair to put in only a little and those who do not care to taste something else but salt in their food can add it at their pleasure. Butter is sometimes added when the potato is mashed, but I think thin cream the best of anything, and next to this good sweet milk. Now stir all thoroughly together, beat it well with a large spoon. The product is something quite superior to lumpy, poorly seasoned mashed potatoes often found. A dish may be called "well-seasoned" when only enough good seasoning is used, and that properly put into or upon it.

Marble Cake (dark).—One cup of brown sugar, one half cup of molasses one-half cup of butter, one-fourth cup of milk, yelks of four eggs, two teaspoonsfuls of cloves, two of cinnamon, two nutmegs, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two cups of flour.

Ribbon Cake.—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of sweet milk, one large teaspoonful of baking powder, two cups of flour, three eggs, taking out two of the whites for frosting. Bake in three layers, put spice and fruit in the middle layer, between each light one put jelly, then frosting between each.

Big Results from Little Causes.

"Do you know?" remarked a man to his friend on Chestnut street, a day or two since, "I believe both Conkling and Platt had a bad case of skin disease when they resigned!" "What makes you think?" inquired the listener in astonishment. "Well, you see they acted in such an eruptive manner—so rash-ly as it were. Save?" "Oh! yes, I save," replied the other, "they were boil—ing over and merely resigned to humor themselves, I suppose." If such is the case, the National difficulty might have been averted by applying Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases.

Destruction of Timber Lands.

Since 1835 the forest area of the Western hemisphere has decreased at the yearly average rate of 7,600,000 acres, or about 11,000 square miles, and at this rate, in the United States alone, has advanced from 1,600 square miles, in 1835, to 7,000 in 1855, and 8,400 in 1877, while the last two years have been scarcely less exhaustive. Statistics for eighty years previous to 1835 show that we have been wasting the supply of moisture to American soil at the average rate of 7 per cent for each quarter of a century during the last 125 years, and that we are now approaching the limit beyond which any further decrease will materially influence the climate of the entire continent. Many Eastern regions such as Afganistan, Persia, India, and Asia Minor, once possessed a fine climate and abundant harvests, are now often scourged by pestilence and famine, and it is altogether probable that their misfortunes began with the disappearance of their native forests.

True to her Trust.

Too much cannot be said of the ever faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a single duty in their behalf. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleansing, the stomach and bowels regulated, blood purified, malarial poison exterminated, she must know that Electric Bitters are the only sure remedy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world, and only cost fifty cents.—Sold by

C. A. Wright & Co.

The eminent physiologist, Dr. Cutter, says that the increase of nervous diseases, decaying teeth, premature baldness, and general lack of muscular strength are generally due to the impoverished quality of flour now in use; the gluten being thrown away in order to make the flour white. He urges the use of unbolted flour and of eggs, milk and butter. He denies that fish is brain food, or that Agassiz ever said that it was, and claims that butter, being nearly all fat, is a better brain food than any other.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. FEVER SORE.

What I tell you is the truth, told for no other purpose but to testify to the merits of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. Mr. Frederick Yetten, of this town, has been troubled for years with a Fever Sore on one of his legs. Last fall and all winter he could hardly walk a step. I induced him to take your REMEDIES. He has taken about four bottles BUTICURA RESOLVENT, and used the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. His leg today is almost well, and he walks with ease. It was a sight to behold—black and swollen very badly. I wish you could see his leg to-day. The change would astonish you.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND—A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

By Dr. David Kennedy, one of the Surgeons on Duty at the U. S. A. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, now of Roundout, N. Y.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

Difficulties of a Young Housekeeper.

Charley Lamber was a printer. I mention the fact merely to let you know that he was not rich. But he had fallen deeply—blissfully—in love with a nice, industrious little girl, and the consequence was that he became reckless with his money—began to save—and at the expiration of a year offered said "little girl" a neatly furnished suit of rooms, and his "heart and hand" to keep the bread-basket filled, if she would come and make the "room" home for him.

Like a sensible girl she came. Everything was cozy for two, new and bright as life itself promised to be.

Charley frisked around the type like a happy man, and the "little wife" stayed at home and studied nice little surprises for him in the way of economical tit-bits for his hungry palate, and gently—somewhat shyly—entertained the socially inclined neighbors who "ran in" to see the pretty young wife and offer her the benefit of their superior experience as wives and housekeepers.

Charley thought it was kind indeed—he was glad he had selected rooms in such an interesting social house; the people were all respectable, and the intercourse would keep the new Mrs. Lambert from becoming lonely during his absence.

One morning Charley brought home a couple of bottles of American champagne as a present for the young wife from some of the boys at the office.

"Get the corkscrew, little wife, while I break up some ice for our feast," going to the neat little refrigerator he had provided for their tidy establishment.

"O, dear, what shall we do? The woman up stairs borrowed the corkscrew a few days ago. She has not returned it yet" Mrs. Charley remarked, in some distress.

"Never mind, we'll manage. But what's all this stuff on ice. You have laid in a big breakfast—cucumbers, steak, chicken," the young husband enumerated.

"The steak is for us, the cucumbers belong to the woman on the upper floor, and the chicken to the old lady in the rear room; they have no place to keep things, and I don't like to refuse when they asked me to give it place, it seems so disobliging."

Charley felt like saying bad things; he thought those social neighbors rather inclined to impose upon his wife's inexperience, but he only said:

"Dont ask a favor of any of them."

"I have no occasion. Surely you are not vexed with me. They are so friendly."

"That's all right; but don't you ask a favor. If we need anything, buy it; if we cannot afford it we must do without!"

A few evenings later the little wife met Charlie with a troubled face. The woman on the first floor had company and begged the loan of the new tea-set; she had not returned them as she promised in time for their own tea."

Charlie said a bad word, and with burning blushes the young wife asked the return of her china with many apologies, and got fearfully snubbed by the offended neighbor. The next evening supper was not ready, the little wife had lent her neighbor the frying pan. The woman had one of her own, but "she didn't like to use it for fish, because it clung to the taste of the next thing fried in it," the wife reported tearfully.

"And you let the impudent woman have yours?"

"What could I do?"

"Take the broomstick to her!" Charlie replied. "Never mind," he added, seeing his wife's tears, "I'll put a stop to this business." He grabbed his cane and flourished through the hall as if he were going to do something desperate. When he reached the door where his frying pan had gone visiting he politely requested the loan of it for a moment. It was handed over. Charley turned the under side up, and began to belabor it with his cane as frying pan never was belabored before. Its metallic cries brought all the neighbors to the "panic," and Charley beat with all his might, shouting:

"There! and there! You stupid, black thing! I'll teach you to go gadding when you are needed at home! Stay where you belong after this. There, madam; I guess that will do. If you will kindly send it home when you are through with it, I'll be greatly obliged."

He returned to his frightened little wife, but had barely got into the room before the frying pan came after him, sent by the hand of a "social neighbor," who was too mad to give vent to her fury otherwise. That settled the borrowing and "obliging" business in that house; and the new housekeeper found that to get on peaceably in a promiscuous world it is best to be distantly and selfishly unsocial.—Sunday Graphic.

From the Talmud.

"Who is strong? He who subdues his passion. Who is rich? He who is satisfied with his lot." "He who sacrifices a whole offering shall be rewarded for a whole offering; he who offers a burnt offering shall have the reward of a burnt offering; but he who offers humanity to God and man shall be rewarded as if he had offered all the sacrifices in the world." "There are four characters in scholars: Quick to hear and quick to forget, his gain is canceled by his loss; slow to hear and slow to forget, his loss is canceled by his gain; quick to hear and slow to forget, he is wise; slow to hear and quick to forget, this is an evil lot." "There are four characters in those who sit under the wise: a sponge, a funnel, a strainer, and a bolt-sieve. A sponge, which sucks up all; a funnel, which lets in here and lets out there; a strainer, which lets out the wine and keeps back the dregs; a bolt-sieve, which lets out the pollard and keeps back the flour." "He who has more learning than good works is like a tree with many branches but few roots, which the the first wind throws on its face; while he whose works are greater than his knowledge is like a tree with many roots and fewer branches, but which all the winds of heaven cannot uproot." "If thy wife is small, bend down to her and whisper in her ear. He who forsakes the love of his youth, God's altar weeps for him. He who sees his wife die before him, has, as it were, been present at the destruction of the sanctuary itself—around him the world grows dark." "He who marries for money, his children shall be a curse to him." "Rabbi Jose said, I never call my wife 'wife,' but 'home,' for she indeed, makes my home." "Underneath the wings of the seraphim are stretched the arms of the divine mercy, ever ready to receive sinners."—University Magazine.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Live Up to the Mottoes.

There is no use putting up the motto "God bless our home," if the father is a rough old bear, and the spirit of discourtesy and rudeness is taught by parents to children and by the older to the younger. There is no use putting up the motto "The Lord will provide," while the father is shiftless, the mother is shiftless, the boys refuse to work, and the girls busy themselves with gewgaws and finery. There is no use putting up the motto "The greatest of these is Charity," while the tongue of the back-biter wags in the family, and silly gossip is dispensed at tea table. There is no use in placing conspicuously the motto "The liberal man deviseth liberal things," while money chinks in the pockets of the "head of the household," groping to get out and see the light of day, and there are dollars and dimes for wine and tobacco and other luxuries, but possibly not one cent for the church. In how many homes are these mottoes standing—let us say hanging—sarcasms, which serve to point a jest and adorn a satire! The beauty of quiet lives, of trustful, hopeful, free-handed, free-hearted, charitable lives, is one of surpassing loveliness, and those lives shed their own incomparable fragrance, and the world knows where to find them. And they still remain fresh and fadeless when the colors on the pigment and the gloss have faded, and the very frames have rotted away in their joints.

Plain Talk to a Girl.

Your every-day toilet is a part of your character. A girl that looks like a "fury" in the morning is not to be trusted, however fine she may look in the evening. No matter how humble your room may be, there are eight things it must contain, viz.: a mirror, washstand, soap, towel, comb, hair, nail and tooth brushes. These are just as essential as your breakfast, before which you should make good and free use of them. Parents who fail to provide their children with such appliances not only make a mistake, but commit a sin of omission. Look tidy in the morning, and after the dinner work is over improve your toilet. Make it a rule of your daily life to "dress up" in the afternoon. Your dress may or may not be anything better than calico, but with a ribbon or flower, or some bit of ornament, you can have an air of self-respect and satisfaction that invariably comes with being well dressed.

W. R. MERWIN, M. D., DETROIT, MICH.

Ague Cure

is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

ALL SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, PILES, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and PLEURISY, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, NEURALGIA, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all disorders attendant with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood; by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

A NEW INSURANCE COMPANY.

The National Relief and Accident Association—The Company fully Organized and now Ready for Business.

A movement was set on foot here several days ago to organize a Mutual Life Insurance Association. The movement has grown into a successful one, and the establishment of the National Relief and Accident Association is the result. The proper articles have been executed and the legal formalities have all been taken. The company is now full fledged and ready for business. The following are the stock holders and officers.

OFFICERS.

R. B. House, President; A. W. Slayton, Vice President; Chas. A. Slayton, Secretary; W. C. Fitzsimmons, Treasurer; R. B. House, M. D., Medical Director; O. C. Kneale, Supt. of Agencies.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

William C. Fitz-simmons, President Peoples' Bank; Augustus W. Slayton, Furniture Manufacturer and Dealer; Chas A. Slayton, Grain and Produce Dealer; Robt. B. House, Physician; O. C. Kneale, Supt. of Agencies.

With the exception of Mr. Kneale, the officers are all well known in this community and nothing need be said in their favor. They are among our most trusted and responsible business men. Mr. Kneale, who has been selected to fill the position of Supt. of Agents is an experienced insurance man, having been connected with similar companies in Ohio for several years and he is an admirable man for his particular post. People will see at a glance therefore that the company is well officered. When you come to the practical insurance features of the company, the prominent features of the association are safety, punctuality and economy. "Safe, Prompt and Cheap" is its motto. It is a mutual company, the membership fee and annual dues are moderate, and the assessments moderate, but extra care is taken to insure only sound lives, the expenses of the company will not be extravagant, and it will perform exactly what it promises. A membership certificate limited to $1000 will cost $5.00 at 20 years of age, $6.00 at 30 years of age, $8.00 at 40 years of age, and so on. There is a division No. 2 for the benefit of old folks, who are over 65 years of age. There is also an accident division by which members receive a weekly indemnity in case of accident. The company has issued a leaflet containing a full and detailed explanation of their plan of doing business. Although the matter contained therein is beyond the limits of a local article of this kind, we append a few extracts therefrom to show the general character of the association.

The National Relief and Accident Association was organized for those who appreciate accident insurance and yet believe that the charges made by other companies are exorbitant; the aim being to afford equal security at annual saving of more than one-half the usual charges.

To afford to the widow and children of deceased members a certain sum of money when it is most timely and welcome.

To give at cost to the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow a sure and safe indemnity which he cannot well afford to do without.

To enable the rich and the well-to-do citizen to contribute to a fund, which, being a benefit to himself confers blessings upon others.

To furnish a sure and practical substitute at actual cost, for the more expensive and too often unreliable life insurance policies.

To supply a long felt want, viz: That of forming an association of sound lives and exactly equalizing the cost of indemnity according to the respective ages.

As an evidence that this class of assurance is reliable it is only necessary to state that the principles upon which this association is founded are as old as history.

They have been applied in various forms in almost every branch of business and society, and have afforded substantial relief and aid to the families of deceased members to a greater extent than any other plan offered.

The funds are held by the members themselves until actually needed.

There are in England alone more members of associations of this kind than there are policy holders in all the insurance companies in the entire continent of Europe.

To secure the benefits of the association each member pays a small membership fee for the purpose of defraying expenses of the association. The fee is paid but once.

We shall favor our readers with additional features of the workings of this association hereafter, as we become familiar with them.

Ayer & Son's Annual.

We have received a copy of N. W. Ayer & Son's Newspaper annual for 1881. It contains many improvements upon the former one and has many new features.

It gives the name of every paper published in the United States and Canada, its frequency of issue, politics or other distinctive features, its size, year of establishment, circulation and advertising rate.

It gives also a list of all newspapers published in the United States and Canada which insert advertisements, arranged in states by counties, with the population of each county and the description and circulation of each paper.

It gives separate lists of Religious and Agricultural publications which insert advertisements, numerous lists of class publications, and all newspapers and periodicals inserting advertisements published in foreign languages.

One of the most important features of this edition is a description of each state and territory, as well as of every county in the United States, and of each of the Canadian Provinces, giving location, area, physical features, and resources, furnishing a valuable guide to judicious and paying advertising.

The work is so managed that it is a valuable book of reference not only for newspaper men but for advertisers as well.

Life of Garfield.

Life and Work of Garfield: Embracing an account of his struggles in childhood, his career as a soldier, his success as a statesman, his elevation to the presidency, his dastardly assassination. By John Clark Ridpath, LL.D. J. C. Chilton & Co., Detroit. State Agents for Michigan.

The preparation of this memorial volume was well and wisely committed to the hands of Prof. Ridpath. Himself an accomplished scholar, of severe and delicate taste, and a love of research which no difficulty can daunt, he is just the man of all others to find the facts and make up the record of the scholar and statesman of his countryman. It may be truthfully said of Dr. Ridpath that he has "an elevated and pure discretion, sound and steady judgement; that he has seen and heard and read many and divers books and writings; and, what is more, he has the skill and the practice of turning all this rich and varied knowledge to the best account. He stands in the front rank of the living historians, and his contributions to standard literature are not only voluminous, but well judged, scholarly and finished. He cannot make an uninteresting book upon any subject.

This will Pay You.

We consult the best good of our readers in recommending them to now secure the valuable and important information and most interesting reading matter, including a thousand or more of pleasing engravings and sketches, that can be obtained at trifling expense in the American Agriculturalist. This is not merely a farm and garden Journal, but it is very useful to every house-keeper and to every household in village or country. It has an entertaining and useful department for the little ones. It is a journal that pays to take and read. Try it, and, our word for it, you will not be disappointed. Its constant, persistent exposures of humbugs and swindling schemes are worth far more than the cost of the paper. The 41st annual Volume begins January 1, but those subscribing now for 1882 get the rest of this year free. Term: 1.50 a year; four copies, $5 (English or German edition); single copies, 15c.

N. B.—Those desiring can get an an extra copy or double specimen number post free for 10 cents, by addressing the publishers. Orange Judd Co., 751 Broadway, New York.

Important to Farmers.

Farmers and others interested in resisting the claims of Nelson W. Green, patentee of the American driven wells, are requested to forward their names and address to F. M. Carroll, secretary of the West Michigan Farmers' Club, Grand Rapids, Michigan, without delay. State papers please copy.

Clinton News: The rhetoricals in the High School are conducted on a new plan this year. The school is divided into three literary societies, each having its own officers, and each in turn conducting the exercises, the other two being listeners. This novel arrangement has the merit of fostering in the pupils a spirit of self-reliance on themselves.

MR. E. J. SMITH has assumed the Editorial tripod of the Adrian Record and this is what he says about it:

We hereby convey to our readers the perhaps to them, appalling notice, that in the editorial conduct of the Record, Mr. Bonner has associated with himself Mr. E. J. Smith, who, for 7 years past, has been squandering plumbago in the editorial chair of the daily and weekly Press of this city. The fact that Mr. Smith comes into the joint management of this paper, fresh from the malodorous air of party politics, need cause no one any alarm, as no partyism will be lugged into these columns on that account; and if criticisms appear touching political subjects, they will be written in the light of honest conviction, whether averse to or favoring the policy of this party or that. We do not promise that the Record shall be one whit better for Mr. Smith's association with it. It was good enough before, and we desire that there shall be no false pretences in the case. Over a thousand subscribers endorse the Record, and if they continue satisfied, the feeling will be mutual. Nuff ced.

WE have received from Mr. A. McNeil, the agent for the work, a copy of the Pictorial Revised Testament with notes by the Abbotts. It is certainly the best work of the kind that has ever fallen under our notice. Mr. McNeil has sold a very large number of them in Tecumseh and the towns adjoining.

Adrian Times: Only one man pines in the county bastile at present. MR. CORNELIUS, who works on the farm for S. C. Stacy, drove down to Mr. Hamilton's, in Raisin, last Sunday afternoon taking two horses and the light spring wagon. When he started to return home Mrs. E. R. Crossman, who was down there, and Mrs. Cornelius took the back seat.—Mrs. Cornelius carrying her infant, about a year old, in her arms. On turning a corner the team sprang forward, the seat tipped out and both women fell over backwards upon the ground. Mrs. Crossman was somewhat hurt, and Mrs. Cornelius was severely injured, so much so that a doctor was summoned and she was confined to her bed at Mr. Hamilton's until yesterday afternoon when she was brought home. They fell into good hands at Mr. Hamilton's as the family were very kind and did all in their power to aid her. Fortunately the ground where they fell was soft and sandy or their fall might have resulted much more seriously.

MR. W. C. Mr. Dewey has taken great interest in the good work in New York, and acted as secretary of the meeting in question. The report made then stated "that as the result of its labors, $108,128.80 in money had been received by the treasurer, while $30,000 more have gone direct from individuals, and about $75,000 in goods and supplies have been forwarded. The sum of $93,800 has been remitted to constituted committees, at Detroit and Port Huron, and the balance will be speedily forwarded. The committee has incurred no expense whatever. Its organization is intact, and it still solicits further contributions for this pressing object."

The Popular Science Monthly for November, 1881.

Mr. Spencer opens this number of the "Monthly" with an article on "The Industrial Type of Society," the eleventh of the series on "The Development of Political Institutions." It is the culminating point of the discussion, and sets forth in a strong light the great fact that social improvement, to be most rapid, permanent and complete, requires the largest possible freedom of the individual—a condition only to be reached by the development of the industrial at the expense of the coercive pursuits of society. DIED.

RICHARD—Died of heart disease at his residence in the village of Tecumseh, Oct. 16, 1881, William Richard, aged 77 years.

Mr. Richard was born at Fleming Hall, county Antrim, Ireland, Jan. 1st, 1804, being the oldest of a family of ten children, who with their parents, descendants of the old Scotch puritans, emigrated to America in 1829. They afterwards came with their father, Archibald Richard who settled in the now township of Raisin in this county in 1833, but William, the oldest son stopped in the village of Tecumseh where he has for the most part continued to reside until his death. In 1834, in company with Hiram A. Adams, who still survives, he engaged in a furniture manufactory in that part of the village of Tecumseh called Brownville, and after a few years he and his brother-in-law, David Van Tyne, bought out Mr. Adams, and enlarging the business carried it on successfully for about 18 years. He also purchased an interest in, and afterwards the entire Tecumseh Herald office, which he sustained for many years more to the advantage of the community than himself. He had for several years a partner in the conducting of the Herald of adverse political faith, yet without a jar or word of difficulty between themselves they labored on, seeking together the public good, and especially the promotion of the material interests of the community in which they resided.

Not only in this respect, but in other respects Mr. Richard showed an abiding interest in the prosperity of his adopted village, and has always been active in promoting its growth and development. He has built, or been instrumental in building, ten brick stores and a large number of dwelling houses, has aided many poor men in securing their homes, sometimes to his own loss, and has always been found the discreet and ready friend of the honest and industrious poor, when in need of pecuniary aid.

He retired from active business about ten or twelve years since, and merely afterwards kept an office for the purpose of attending to his own personal business, collecting debts, loaning money, &c.

Mr. Richard was well known throughout the county, and has left an honorable record wherever known. He married for his first wife Mary E. Hoeg, youngest daughter of Judge Hoeg, of this county, in May, 1843, who died in 1853. In September, 1855 he married his second wife, Miss Sarah Logan, daughter of Edward Logan, Esq., of Sparta, N. Y., who still survives him.

Mr. Richard, like all his kith and kin, was a man of decided opinions, and great firmness of character. He was a fast friend and a man of unflinching principles and integrity.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church of this place and died as a christian in the full unwavering hope and expectation of a glorious resurrection. He left no children, but his surviving widow and a large circle of brothers and sisters and retinue of relatives and friends to mourn and feel his loss.

COM.

MITCHELL—Died in Lowville, N. Y., while on a visit to her friends, Mrs. Jerusha Mitchell in her 76th year.

Her native place was Steuben, N. Y. but her maiden life was passed in Oneida Co., N. Y. She was acquainted with many intelligent families and eminent christians there, and she appears to have abundantly profited by their friendship to the end of life. Her intellect was clear, her taste refined and cultivated, her piety sincere and evangelical, wearing the type prevalent in central N. Y. 50 years ago.

But she had a mission, though where it lay is concealed yet in the hands of Providence. She came to Tecumseh, then one of the new settlements of Michigan, and was soon after married to Mr. Mitchell, a widower with three little girls, and their home became the sanctuary of domestic bliss. But the meridian of life was soon passed. Mr. Mitchell, with failing sight, became feeble and the farm was sold. The Lord did not come, and until he should, they built a home near to him and rested. It remained for them seemingly only to prepare for Heaven. But Mr. Mitchell, though possessed of many virtues and deemed a God fearing man had not yet united with the church of Christ. With the aid of Mrs. Mitchell and friends he found the Savior and she led him lovingly to the altar of God when he was 80 years old. He shortly after became entirely blind, and with a heroism of a woman and the disposition of a child, Mrs. Mitchell watched over him day and night until death came bringing its sorrow and its rest when he was 89 years of age. She returned from the grave with constitution thoroughly broken down. Her memories of the past revived and she resolved to visit once more the scenes of early life ere death should disappoint her hopes.

While visiting her niece the sickness came that proved fatal. She was told that she must die, but without fear she looked beyond the grave with faith to "the place in the many mansions" prepared for her by the Lord.

"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, yea saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

Fear of Lightning.

SOME HINTS ON THE SUBJECT FROM ONE WHO HAS "SEEN LIGHTNING STRIKE."

Twenty years ago the writer remembers turning with a smile to others who shrank and cried at the peals of a terrible storm in a country house. The glare of a bolt coming down the center of the room caught the eye at that very instant; the next there was an explosion that shook the house and insensibility followed. Two men in the same room were burned by the bolt, though no lives were lost; but I never have been able to smile at lightning since. To give an idea of the terror felt on a nervous organization by the shock would involve extravagance of terms.

But, unfortunately, so far from being an exception, there are too many who suffer the same harassments with me. Nor are women alone subject to this nervousness. I knew a school superintendent and canal contractor, a man over fifty, with a large family, who would hide in a closet in a storm and had been known to rush from his bed with fright at lightning. Many will remember the professor of Bowdoin college who always retreated to the cellar in a thunder storm, although his house was bristling with lightning-rods. The strongest man I ever knew, who could throw another man across the street, and work a hand-press in a printing office as if he were a part of the machine, was discharged as a reporter because his desk was vacant every time there was a thunder storm. The mother of Washington was afraid of lightning, and never failed to retreat to her room at the first flash of a storm, where she stayed till the last flash died away. The physical efforts of this fear are most depressing. One woman knows when a storm is coming hours before, by a prostration of strength and spirits, accompanied with symptoms like cholera. One of the most dauntless young women I ever knew was sick in bed for hours after a great storm at Springfield, Mass. She had received a shock of lightning years before, and never failed to be ill in a thunder storm since.

Reason and study of the laws of lightning have done much to lessen the fear of it. It is true we live between two magazines of electricity—one of the earth and the other of the air—and a cloud charged with electricity passing over a point body in a negative condition will discharge its surplus by the very quickest and most congenial medium, which it finds in the human body, a tree or a house, indifferently. But it is also true that, provide the lightning with a convenient and easy conductor in the shape of a stout iron rod higher than any part of the house, and reaching well into the ground, where electricity may scatter harmlessly into the damp earth, it will prefer that conducting rod to anything in its vicinity, and people who stay indoors in a well protected house are safer from lightning than any bomb-proof from bursting shells. Every accident from this cause I ever knew of came from careless exposure in situations known to be unsafe. The first I noticed after my own accident was that of a missionary's daughter who was killed while passing an open window, just as a woman was on Long Island, while sitting at her sewing machine. A young man in Malden, I think, was killed while sitting on a porch with his chair tipped back and his head against a door-bell, making an excellent connection with the bell-wire. Many men have been struck while riding into a barn on a load of hay. Many will remember the frightful calamity at Scranton, Penn. when a party of women, out picking berries on one of the high hills crowded into a deserted log-hut in a sudden storm, and seven were killed by one bolt. Steep hills with mineral veins cropping out are not fit places for persons to live in who wish to escape lightning, and unprotected houses there are doubly dangerous.

It is never too soon to go into the house when a storm is rising. When the clouds are fully charged with electricity they are most dangerous, and the fluid obeys a subtle attraction which acts at great distances and in all directions. A woman told me of a bolt which came down her mother's chimney from a rising cloud when the sun was shining overhead. N. P. Willis writes of a young girl who was killed while passing under a telegraph wire on the brow of a hill, while she was hurrying home before a storm. The sad accident at Morrisiana, when two children were killed, should warn every mother that it is not safe to let children stay out of doors till the last minute before the storm falls. People should not be foolhardy about sitting on porches or by open windows, whether the storm is hard or not. Mild showers often carry a single charge, which falls with deadly effect. It may or may not be fatal to stay out; it is safe to stay in the house, with the windows and doors closed. The dry air in a house is a readier conductor than the damp air outside; any draught of air invites it. A hot fire in a chimney attracts it, so to speak, and it is prudent for those who would be sure of safety to use kerosene or gas stoves in the summer, and avoid heating the chimneys of the houses. People are very ignorant or reckless about lightning. I have seen a girl of eighteen crying with fear of lightning, and running every other moment to the window to see if the storm was not abating, unconscious that she was putting herself in danger. If every one would hurry to shelter as soon as a storm cloud was seen coming, and if they would shut the doors and windows, and keep away from them afterward, and from wires, stove-pipes, mantels, chimneys, heaters and mirrors, with their silvered backs, which carry electricity, and keep away from lightning rods and their vicinity, and from metal water spouts, with good rods on their houses, they might dismiss the fear of lightning from their minds, so far as it is a thing of reason and not impression.—Hartford Times.

How Long Would it take to Count Two Millions.

Over two million volumes of the revised edition of the New Testament, were sold on the first day of its issue. These figures can only be equaled by the enormous sale of Swayne's Ointment for Itching Piles, which is universally used as a standard remedy for itching at night, when one thinks that pin worms are crawling about the rectum. To calculate the extent of its sale in actual figures, would involve the labor of a life time. Will you be pestered longer from the aggravating Piles.

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West!

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca: with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island" is magnificently equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meal, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

The principal R. R. connections of this great Through Line are as follows:

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

At ENGLEWOOD, with the L. S. & M. S., and P., Ft. W. & C. R. Rds.

In order to pay up the indebtedness of three townships, caused by the failure to get what was due on delinquent taxes from the county to the townships, the Claire county supervisors have voted to bond the county for $3000. Chicago parties appeal through the press of Michigan for donation for a college professorship, to be known as the Garfield professorship. This brings to mind that recent circumstances do not greatly incline Michigan people to shovel their money into Chicago very fast, and it is also worth remembering that any one who wants to give toward a Garfield college memorial can do so right here in the state, where a movement of that kind is on foot for Hillsdale college.

Morenci Observer: A letter from a lady with whom we had been acquainted thirty years ago, imploringly asks us for "a little help be it ever so little; she and her family had been sick, and her husband's once fine business abilities were gone." It was the old, old story, a tale of the ruin which whiskey has brought to a host which no man can number. The Northern fire may sweep over a home and lay it in ashes, but the father remains, and with his strong right arm soon repairs the damage, but who shall make the desert solitude which whiskey and the saloon brings in their train, bloom again as the rose?

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

The flood that has so long deluged our streets, may have suggested to the village council the old adage that extremes follow each other, and they are preparing to alleviate future droughts by building a public reservoir and thereby not only save surplus water but keep from moth and rust some talents committed to their care, and for which they would rather not waste their napkins by wrapping for burial.

That such an immense well, as the one contracted for, will be very useful in case of fire or thirst, and ornamental to the street where it is located, no one can deny; but a very disagreeable person, who appends the name of Innius to a voice in last week's edition of the Exponent, appears to doubt the propriety of defraying the expense of making village improvements by selling rights to forage on the happiness of other people.

As this is a conundrum for women to investigate I will give it attention. I do not presume to argue the question with Innius, who is evidently a much prejudiced fanatic, but will simply remind him that the custom is ancient, and for that reason if no other is worthy of consideration. If he has ever read the bible he must know that the fashion of healing a damaged conscience, by perverting ill gotten gains to a good purpose, is not new.—When Judas betrayed Christ for thirty pieces of silver the money was rendered useless to him as an individual because he hanged himself. It ought to have established a double precedent for it really was the price of two lives, but it did not. The money had an unpleasant shine in the treasury to which it reverted, so a field was bought with it, in which to bury strangers, who previous to that time may have been blotted out or extinguished for ought we know.

That established the custom of doing evil that good may come of it. It flings a glamour between right and wrong when people receive some benefit for an injury received. It makes them forgiving, and almost forgetful of the wrong. Innius cannot deny that forgiveness is an element of christianity. No doubt there are some women who will look upon that fountain as something their piece of mind has been sold to pay for. It is just possible that some children, whose minds are newly stamped with a never to be forgotten horror, may regard it as the price of a father's life, and question the right to sell them into wretchedness for the purpose of furnishing a street for the many instead of a parlor for some single individual.—They of course will believe with Innius, but the fact that great benefits accrue from sacrifices of such sentiments remain just the same.

If Judas had not sold Christ Jerusalem would not have had a free cemetery; and if somebody had not been badly sold Brooklyn could not have had a Judas pool.

PEARLIE.

RIDGEWAY.

Tom Temple is to be seen disbursing quinine and pills at the Gault drug store.

Geo. Scollick is still very sick, with not much change. Hope to hear of a change for the better soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lucking, of Detroit, made a few days visit at the old home of Mrs. L. last week.

Miss Heath, of Hastings, will spend the winter with her aunt, Mrs. Sam. Arner.

Building at Gault is being crowded now; that is, the night operator is putting up a new pig pen.

Mrs. J. Thompson, accompanied by her sons, Lewis and Freddie, are visiting friends in this vicinity.

Frank Freer is spending a few days with "Shaugnessy."

What next? We are to have a pipe organ in the church. Something like $800 is being raised for that purpose.

The new mail route is in full blast and Ridgeway gets Detroit papers wet from the press, but Tecumseh need not feel bad. If there is any very important news we will walk up and tell you about it, and not keep you waiting for your round-about mail.

A meeting was held at the M. E. church on Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a church social society. Mrs. Wm. B. Wilson was elected president; Mrs. Lafe Rappleye secretary; Adah Linn, treasurer; Ella Jackson, organist. We think we can smell oysters.

American Ladies.

The first impression Sara Bernhardt received of the American ladies manifested itself thusly:—"Oh! ze ladies, za are so beautiful, such clear complexion I nevare see before," all of which is due to the universal use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases, which insures a clear and clean complexion, and a healthy color. This recalls to mind the vivine precept "cleanliness is next to Godliness."

She is Going to Try It.

A correspondent writes from way down East, in Lubec, Me., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.: "I called upon you about six weeks ago, sick with Bilious Disease. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' and it cured me. What I want is some more of your medicine. My daughter is going to try it." Sensible man.—He will not regret it, and when his daughter has tried it she will be satisfied too. "Favorite Remedy" is just the thing for the ills that afflict womankind.

IMMORTALITY.

Are they looking down upon us,
Loved ones who have gone before?
In a world of light and glory
Do they love us as of yore?
Are the bright eyes closed in slumber
Oped and gazing from on high,
Beaming with a clearer vision,
Watching o'er us, yes, for aye?

Do they know our thoughts and feelings
Know our inmost hearts to read?
Do they mourn when we are tempted?
When we fail to do good deed?
Are they watching, are they waiting
For the counting of our feet?
Will the same fond hearts receive us?
Will the same fond voices greet?

Who shall say they are not with us?
Men of science, mind of love
Can, yourself as, with your wisdom,
As you give your volumes prove.
If the departed are far beyond us—
If those realms are high above?
Or are they all around us
Where God's blessed spirits move?

Are angels hovering [illegible]
Hedging them round [illegible]
Better to wish [illegible]
Better [illegible]
Or [illegible]
All shepherded [illegible]
Where no [illegible] can mingle
With the [illegible] earth hath known?

Oh, for hope that comes to gladden,
Oh, for faith that doth assure
That our loved ones have not left us,
Though, unseen, all else, and pure,
They are still beside us walking,
Though unseen by mortal eye,
They are working in his vineyard,
They are with the Father high.

TWIN LOVED.

"Come, Bessie, nurse is waiting! Run, now, and let her attend to your curls; you must look very neat, or Mr. Irving will not love you. It is almost dinner time," said Bessie's mother.

Immediately the child arose, raised her sweet lips to kiss mamma, and followed the nurse from the room.

"It is perfectly wonderful how much influence Mr. Irving has over the child! Just tell her to do anything, and say it will please him, and that is enough. I never saw anything like it," said Mrs. Wallace to a friend beside her, who answered:

"I have, and would not encourage—or rather I would endeavor to overcome—that influence."

"Now, my dear Georgie, what is troubling that wise head of yours? What means that grave look and anxious light in your eye?"

"Fannie, I'm perfectly astonished at people whose duty it is to watch over and guard their little ones, especially their girls, from sorrows, planting in their young hearts seeds which may grow to be thorns, and treating children as though they were void of any deeper thought and feeling than the appreciation of a doll or bow of ribbon. You are children of five years have hearts that love as devotedly and suffer as keenly as many of mature years. You are shaking your head. I want to tell you a little story to prove my assertion. We have half an hour before dinner; will you listen?"

"Yes, certainly; but it must have a happy ending," answered Mrs. Wallace.

"I cannot promise; perhaps the end has not yet come. You know Hettie Le Roy?"

"I do, certainly; a lovelier girl I never knew. Why she has never married has been a source of wonder to me."

"Aye, and to many who know her, not so well as I. It is of her I am going to tell you.

"Twenty-five years ago, when just at the age of your Bessie, and just as loving too, a young man passed her path. We will call him Joe Hewberry. He was the classmate and dearest friend of Hettie's brother. At a party given during the Christmas holidays by Mrs. Le Roy, Joe, to pique one of the girls, attached himself for the evening to little Hettie, dancing with her, promenading through the rooms, with her tiny hands clasped in his, much to the annoyance of many bright-eyed maidens, who really were envious of the baby girl.

Joe was handsome, and very fascinating, a universal favorite with the ladies, both young and old. Several mammas endeavored to draw him away from his 'little love,' as he called her, and maneuvered to get her from him. But all in vain, until wearily the sunny head drooped, and with her arms around his neck, her sweet lips giving the good-night kiss, she sank to sleep. Gently then he resigned her to her nurse's care.

Every day from that time he came to the house. His home was quite near. At the sound of his voice Hettie sprang forward with outstretched arms to meet him. I have seen her, with her hand in his, looking up into his face for hours, seeming perfectly happy.

Of course this was noticed by the family and commented upon. The child's older sisters and brothers could win her to do their will by saying, 'I'll tell Mr. Hewberry if you don't, and he won't love you then.'

Daily she gathered a little bouquet for him, and when the autumn days came and the flowers were few, the 'little love' would watch closely the slowly-opening buds, lest some one else should get them.

So the days passed by for two years, and then for a time she was separated from the one she had grown to love so dearly.

'Better than brother?' they would sometimes ask her.

'Yes,' would come the whispered answer, quickly.

'Better than sister?'

'Yes.'

Without any hesitation the whispered answer came.

'Than father and mother?'

And then the deep blue eyes would grow so earnest, and the pretty lips would part and close again, as if unwilling to utter the words she feared might wound. When pressed to answer her eyes sought mamma and papa, as if imploring their forgiveness, and 'I can't help it; just a little bit more,' she murmured, and buried her head in Joe's bosom.

She clung around his neck and begged to be with him when the hour of parting came. With promises of a speedy return he managed to soothe her.

Perhaps the child might have in time been weaned from this strange attachment, if they had ceased to talk to her of him. But possessing, as it were, a magic wand to guide her actions, they used it freely.

How well I remember her as she stood eagerly watching the postman, as he came from door to door. As nearer he drew, she became so excited and anxious that her heart trembled lest she should be disappointed. But the letter came, and, with a wild cry of joy she pressed it to her bosom, and ran with it for mamma to read.

His absence was short. He returned, bringing her for a Christmas present a pretty little chain, to which was attached a locket with his portrait. For both drawn.

When ill with fever, tossing restlessly from side to side to side, his hand could always quiet, his voice soothe. Without a murmur she would take from him the nauseous doses.

'How will all this end?' I asked her mother, once; and lightly she replied:

'Oh, all right, of course. She will learn to love some one nearer her own age when the proper time comes, and he will be married long before then. He has a distant cousin who, I am inclined to think, he is engaged to. I am sure their parents are anxious for their union.'

As Hettie grew older, a little shyness crept gradually into her manner. Still the love was there.

Once, in a moment of confidence, she came to me and asked:

'Do you believe Mr. Hewberry loves Cora Cushing better than he does me? Fred says he does—that he remained by her all the time at the party last night. I wish I was old enough to go to parties! And I wish—indeed I do—'

'What, Hettie?' I asked, as she hesitated.

'I wish Cora Cushing didn't live in this world—indeed I do!' nodding her head decidedly, while striving to force back the tears.

'Oh! oh! Hettie, this is dreadful!' I said, drawing her within my arms.

'Well, then, I wish Mr. Hewberry and I lived somewhere else, where Cora Cushing wouldn't come,' she sobbed.

I assured her that Joe did not love Cora Cushing; that Fred was only teasing her.

When she was ten years old, Joe was called suddenly away by the severe illness of his nearest relative, an uncle. There was only time for a hasty 'Good bye, my little love! Make haste to grow fast, and be a tall girl when I come back,' he said, kissing her.

His going was so sudden, she did not seem to realize it. I was glad to see that how I prized the little thing, which she wore day and night, as she had done for years, but watched.

'Maybe he might come,' she said once to me.

Letters came often to Fred, with messages of love for her, with sometimes a little note accompanying a gift. Food enough to keep her loving little heart from suffering he gave, and fuel enough to keep the love brightly burning. But he came not, nor promised of his coming.

Time passed on; the pretty child grew to be a beautiful maiden. Youths gathered about her, and friends had ceased to talk of Joe. Other names were mentioned as his had been, yet none could win an answering smile or blush. I knew for whom her love was kept.

The waiting, yearning look in her eyes gave way at last, and a joyous light broke forth. Joe was coming back. A letter to Fred brought the glad tidings. He wrote:

'I've a secret to tell you, dear boy, but I shall keep it for a surprise. I know you will rejoice for my sake, I am sure. In a few days I shall be with you.'

Again as in her baby days, Hettie sang her washing. Oh, I know her heart was singing a joyous song, though the sweet lips gave forth no sound.

She stood in the porch, waiting his coming, clothed in fleecy white, roses in her hair, and a bright smile playing on her face.

Hettie!

Fred came toward her. The boy's face had lost its usual look of merriment—his voice its careless tone.

'Hettie, Joe came by the train awhile ago'—he paused, darting an anxious searching glance at his sister's face—'and he was not alone. I'll not let him surprise you, little sis. I've hurried home to tell you his wife is with him.'

The light went out of eye and heart. The blush faded quickly on the young face, and, whiter than the dress she wore, she put forth her hand to grasp the balustrade.

Fred sprang forward to catch her fainting form. Like a broken lily, he bore her in. And when Joe came she knew it not.

For many days her gentle spirit hovered between the shores. Sometimes, since, I've almost regretted that it passed not away to the other and brighter one. But she was left with us for a wise purpose, I know.

She has never seen Joe Hewberry since his marriage. Three years after, she sent to his little girl, who bears her name, the chain and locket she used to wear.

'Where is he now?' Mrs. Wallace asked.

'I've not heard of him for years. I know not if he lives.'

'Thanks for your story, Georgie; but I wish its ending had not been so sad.'

'Then its lesson would have been less powerful.'

'True. I must profit by it without delay. I will send Bessie home with her brother to-morrow. The change will do her good and break the spell.'

* * * * * * *

A few days after this, Georgie Clark came to see Bessie's mother, and said with a bright smile:

'I've come to change the ending of my story of the other day. In fact, the end had not then come. Here are Hettie's wedding cards; her Joe has been a widower over two years. Hear what she writes to me:

'Forgive me for keeping my happiness from you, my dear friend, but I have not been able to realize sufficiently that this great joy was for me to speak of to others. Now that it is so near, and he is with me, surely it must be. You, who have known so much, must know all. He loved and was pledged to her before he knew me. You will be glad to know this; I was. Had I known it, it would have soothed greatly the agony of bygone days.'

'We were at Hettie's wedding yesterday, a happier, lovelier bride I never saw.'

Those who keep their sweetness, who hold fast the tenderness of their souls, and have ardent friendships, are young still, whatever the years that have passed over their heads.

The great mistake men make is in the idea that they must be holy to become heirs; the truth is they must become heirs in order to be holy. We do not serve in order to become sons, but we must become sons in order rightly to serve. It is those who believe on His name that have the power, the privilege to become the sons of God.

Household Rights of Women.

No one who has not been tried can imagine the discomfort and inconvenience that results from irregularity in regard to meals. The whole business of the day is broken up by the tardiness of part of the members of the family, and it is unjust to practice it; and yet many men who would chafe and fret if their business was delayed never give a thought to the fact that it is just as inconvenient for their wives to wait for them. Order is the first law of nature, and it should be the same in families. A regular day and hour for especial purposes make housework easier and far more pleasant, and this order should be recognized by each individual in the family, and it is the mistress's privilege to insist upon her right in this respect.

Again, the various contrivances and improvements for making housework less laborious, and thereby saving both time and strength, should be considered as great a necessity in the house as upon the farm. A woman does not grudge the money expended for machinery in carrying on the business of the farm, and if she did it would probably make no difference, and it is just that she, too, should avail herself of the helps that lighten the labors of her department. Spirits of ammonia is useful in expediting the tiresome business of house-cleaning. And it does not cost but little, yet how very few housewives ever think of availing themselves of its assistance, because, forsooth, it costs so much; and just the same with other articles of utility, and a wife will make a martyr of herself by scrubbing and working, even unto death, to save a little expense.

It is a woman's privilege, too, to have resting hours. The law of custom allows men an hour's dooning each working day; but where does a woman's dooning come in? No one ever thinks of letting the dinner table stand while a little rest is taken, and it is just as needful for women to rest from their labors as for men, and if they would only assert their privilege they could, as a matter of course, enjoy it. Men are not at all bashful about claiming their rights and privileges, and there is no mortal reason why women should not claim theirs also, when their health and comfort both demand it. They will fret over their tasks, complain of the thoughtlessness of the men and boys, but do not do the first thing to help themselves, or make a change for the better; and, in fact, husbands and fathers do not think about it—that is just where the trouble lies. They have no idea that they are hard taskmasters; it is really no special design on their part; their attention has not been called to the matter. It is simply because women do not like to call their attention to it that men are so heedless of their needs and comfort; and it lies in the hands of women themselves, in a great measure, whether they will make their work easy by claiming the privileges which are rightly theirs.

Corn Beer.—Take one pint of corn and boil it until it is a little soft, add to it a pint of molasses and one gallon of water, shake them well together, and set it by the fire, and in twenty-four hours the beer will be excellent. When all the beer in the jug is used, just add more molasses and water. The same corn will answer for six months, and the beer be fit for use in twelve hours, by keeping the jug which contains it warm. In this way, the whole ingredients used in making a gallon of beer will cost but a few cents, and it will be better and more wholesome than cider. A little yeast added greatly forwards the "working" of the beer.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Constipation—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy

Constantly choose rather to want less than to have more.

Men seldom improve when they have no other models than themselves to copy after.

There are men whose tongues might govern multitudes if they could govern their tongues.

That was a good prayer of the old deacon: "Lord, make us willing to run on little errands for Thee."

A man can profess more religion in fifty minutes than he can practice by working hard for fifty years.

The hum of a tea-kettle that is paid for is far more beautiful than an operatic air on a piano that is not.

If a man have love in his heart, he may talk in broken language, but it will be eloquence to those who listen.

Cunning men always get beat in the long run, because they are just as dull on one side as they are sharp on the other.

Learn in childhood, if you can, that happiness is not outside, but inside. A good heart and a clear conscience bring happiness, which no riches and no circumstances alone ever do.

If we would keep our garden free from noxious weeds, we must commence early in the season, while they are yet young, the work of extermination. It is the criterion of a good spiritual gardener that he excels in keeping the garden free from evil passions and lusts that war against the soul.

A canal boat animal is neither black or white, it's a mule-at-tow.

Nothing perplexes a married man more than to find his wife using his bachelor cigar case to keep hair-pins in.

A little girl, on looking at a picture of a ship in a thunder-storm, remarked that "God was striking crooked pins into the bad men."

There are beautiful warm soda springs in Colorado, and people who go bathing in them at once exclaim: "Oh, but this is sodalicious."

In a Massachusetts temperance town a punch bowl is used as a baptismal font. This is supposed to be conducive to pugnacity in the infant.

"How dare you say 'damn' before me?" severely inquired a clergyman of a loafer. "How did I know you wanted to say 'damn' first?" retorted this bad man.

Houses, it seems, are now built of paper. In one of the parables we read of a man who built his house upon the sand. Perhaps it was sand paper.

Huxley says "there was a time when men walked on all fours." He probably alludes to that interesting time in the early life of us all when we approached a neighbor's melon patch from the back way.

"Why," asked the atrocious punster at the restaurant table, when all had finished their strawberries and cream, "why are we in a most horrible position?" "It is," said he, when all had given it up, "it is because we have been berried, and are still alive."

College Professor (to Junior, who has been taking advantage of absent-mindedness:) "Young man, I find on looking over the records that this makes the fifth time in two years that you have been granted leave of absence to attend your grandmother's funeral."

A gentleman not extremely given to piety was dismayed by being asked to say grace at a strange table. To refuse and explain would be embarrassing; to comply would be equally so. He chose the latter, and started off briskly enough with "Oh, Lord, bless this table"—. Just here, being unused to the business, he nearly broke down, but by a gigantic effort pulled through with "World without end. Yours respectfully, amen."

"Doctor, I feel sig all over, and de pebles dell me I better take your physicks." Drug clerk—"All right, sir. Will you have a dose of some salts or some purgative pills?" "Vell, vat it costs for sanids?" "Ten cents, sir." "And how mooch for dem fi-sicking pills?" "I'll give you a dose for the same price." "Doctor, you dond got no second-hand fi-sicking pills, ain't you?"

"Papa what made you go to the war?
Said Jennie, climbing on my chair.
"You might have had two fingers more
To twine amid my flowing hair."
"Why, dear, they grafted your brave pa,
And I lost those fingers on a saw."

No human scheme can be so accurately projected but some little circumstance may intervene to spoil it.

Innocence is a flower which withers when touched, but blooms not again, though it be watered with tears.

Persevering mediocrity is more respectable and of unspeakably more use than talented inconstancy.

Contentment is not happiness. An oyster may be contented. Happiness is compounded of richer elements.

The true end of freedom is to develop manhood and womanhood, not to make authors, mechanics or statesmen.

They asked Lucman, the fabulist, "From whom did you learn manners?" He answered: "From the unmannerly."

Our hearts ought not to be mere resting places where the Lord sometimes comes, but dwellings in which He abides.

He who thinks he can do without others is mistaken; he who thinks others cannot do without him is still more mistaken.

Praying and practicing Christ's commandments will keep out sinning; nothing else will do it. Positive steps will save you.

A gentle person is like the river flowing calmly along; while a passionate man is like the sea, casting up mire and dirt continually.

To be happy at home is the ultimate result of all ambition; the end to which every enterprise and labor tends, and of which every desire prompts the prosecution.

Humility is the true proof of Christian virtues; without it we retain all our faults, and they are only covered by pride to hide them from others, and often from ourselves.

False happiness renders men stern and proud, and that happiness is never communicated. True happiness renders them kind and sensible, and that happiness is always shared.

A Frank Man.—The most agreeable of all companions is a simple, frank man, without any pretentions to an oppressive greatness; one who loves me and understands the use of it; obliging alike at all hours; above all, of a golden temper, and steadfast as an anchor. For such a one we gladly exchange the greatest genius, the most brilliant wit, the profoundest thinker.

A Trifling Thing.

One has said that "It is hard telling what a trifle means." Everything in nature seemes to be closely connected with everything else. An undue preponderence of one force sets in motion all other forces. The eddying of a few particles of air may give rise to a tornado. A few drops of oil slowly leaking from a cask may seem of little account; but in due time the vessel will be empty. A small pin, bolt or screw out of place may stop a powerful engine. A particle of dust may stop or render a chronometer useless as a time-keeper. The prick of a pin in a balloon may destroy it. Another writer has put the thought in a still stronger light: "There is no such thing as a trifle." Any person who has lived many years, and been engaged in the transactions of daily life, will certainly appreciate this quotation. A useless expense of a few cents daily to a laboring man will amount to no small sum in a series of years, while a judicious expenditure in the same way will be exhibited in a few years in the general appearance of thrift all around such a man. To know how to do things in the best possible manner involves a knowledge of a thousand little things to insure success.

How to Stop a Paper.

The following, from one of our exchanges, so fully and clearly expresses our views on the subject, that we copy it without comment: "You have an undoubted right to stop a newspaper when you feel disposed, upon the payment of all arrearages. Do not hesitate to do so on account of "tenderness" for the editor. Don't you suppose he would stop buying sugar of you, or meat, clothing, or dry goods, etc., if he thought he was not getting his money's worth, and why should you not exercise the same privilege with him? And when you discontinue a paper, do so manfully. Don't be so spiteful as to throw it back to the postmaster with a contemptuous "I don't want it any longer!" and have "refused" written on the margin, and have the paper returned to the editor. No gentleman ever stopped it in that way, no matter if his head is covered with grey hairs that should be honorable. If you do not longer wish to receive a newspaper, write a note to the editor like a man, saying so—and be sure that arrearages are paid. This is the way to stop a newspaper."

Effects of Tea on the Skin.

If you place a few drops of strong tea upon a piece of iron, a knife blade, for instance, the tannate of iron is formed, which is black. If you mix tea with iron filings, or palverized iron, you can make a fair article of ink. If you mix it with fresh human blood, it forms with the iron of the blood the tannate of iron. Take human skin and let it soak for a time in strong tea, and it will become leather. Now, when we remember that the liquids which enter the stomach are rapidly absorbed by the venous absorbents of the stomach, and enter into the circulation and are thrown out of the system by the skin, lungs, and kidneys, it is probable that a drink so common as tea, and so abundantly used, will have some effect. Can it be possible that tannin, introduced with so much liquid producing respiration, will have no effect upon the skin? Look at the teadrinkers of Russia, the Chinese, and the old women of America, who have so long continued the habit of drinking strong tea. Are they not dark-colored and leather-skinned?

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

Concerning Women.

A San Francisco woman calls her husband her darkest hour, because he generally comes just before dawn.

The economical side of a woman's character shines forth with radiance when she succeeds in fastening an 18-inch belt around a 22-inch waist. Her justifiable pride in making both ends meet deserves commendation.

When a woman's eyes sparkle and her face glows from fire within, while her tongue rolls off information about igneous rocks and stratified rocks, silurian rocks and conglomerate rocks, of calcareous rocks and argillerous soil, it is safe to say she was born in Boston, or at least has an uncle living in Massachusetts.

A Physician of Great Prominence

in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Courage and Meekness.—Courage is always greatest when blended with meekness. Intellectual ability is most admired when it sparkles in the setting of modest distrust. And never does the human soul appear so strong as when it forgoes revenge and dares to forgive injury.

Dr. T. L. Phipson says the purer water is the better it will dissolve lead, and that many a good spring of water has been spoiled by storing in lead cisterns, being supplied by lead pipes, or pumped through a leaden pump. Slate cisterns are preferable, but they should not be tightened at the joints with red lead, as is usually done.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. Ayer's Pills are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

Ayer's Pills are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these Pills are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

Almost incredulous are convinced, and the skeptical are compelled to believe in the virtues of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

Of SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and LIMBS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, FITS, GAS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all cases attended with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood; this means a controlling power is gained over almost malignant forms of disease. It penetrates every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it cures readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

The Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have never used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle. Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all druggists in medicine.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 3, 1881.

Owing to the scanty supply of water in New York city, the fire department have laid in a quantity of dynamite to blow up buildings in the event of an extensive conflagration.

The carpet baggers who plundered the south so long with impunity are one after another getting their deserts. An ex-Governor of South Carolina was lately arrested in New York for theft and another one is now on trial in Ohio for murder.

This country claims to be the best governed, and to possess the most fertile soil under the sun, and yet it is a sad truth which must be told that we are now importing beans from Germany. A country that cannot raise white beans enough for home consumption must be in a pretty bad way.

The rapid increase in both the number and excellence of the newspapers of the South is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. All the leading cities of that section now have papers that are ably conducted and widely read, while new dailies and weeklies are being started in large numbers. There is no truer index of the prosperity and intelligence of any country than the number and ability of its newspapers.

Mr. Geo. M. Scoville, the attorney who is to defend Gitteau intimates that the only defense will be that of insanity. The following extract from a private letter which President Garfield wrote ten years ago to a Cleveland attorney would be very appropriate matter for the Judge who tries the case to insert in the charge to the jury.

"The whole country owes you a debt of gratitude for brushing away the wicked absurdity which has lately been palmed off on the country as law on the subject of insanity. If this thing had gone much further, all that a man would need to secure himself from the charge of murder would be to rave a little and tear his hair a little, and then kill his man."

Two new fast trains will soon be placed on the route between New York and Chicago. The Pennsylvania line, encouraged by the success of the Limited Express between New York and Washington, have decided to put a similar train on the Chicago line. This train will be composed wholly of Pullman parlor coaches and one dining car, and will take only a limited number of passengers. It will stop at Harrisburg, Pittsburg, and Fort Wayne and hence will carry none but through passengers except to those three points. The train between New York and Chicago will be twenty-six hours. Vanderbilt has been compelled to meet this competition and he will soon put a train on the N. Y. Central and Lake Shore, which will make the run to Chicago in twenty-four hours.

A trade school has recently been opened in New York. This is a step in the right direction. Since the apprentice system has gone out of use there has been no method of properly training young men in the useful trades, and the rising generation is wretchedly deficient in this direction. A few natural geniuses will master a trade by self culture, but the majority of young men must have some systematic instruction to enable them to become proficient workmen. Skilled labor is in great demand in all the useful trades, and skilled workmen can always obtain steady work at good wages. In the school referred to three trades are taught—plumbing and sanitary engineering; house sign and decorative painting, and bricklaying.—The course of instruction in the first consists of lectures on the science of plumbing and sanitary engineering, and practical instruction in the manual labor of the trade. The pupils are posted in both the theory and practice of the business. The course of instruction in painting embraces plain painting, mixing colors, painting in various colors, fresco painting, polishing and preparing hard wood, lettering, gilding and paper hanging. The course in brick laying is both scientific and practical. It comprises mechanical drawing, laying out plans, for architects, and the principles governing the strength of walls and the thrusts of arches. Also the mixing of mortar, and cement, laying of face bricks, building of solid and hollow walls, flues and fire places, cutting brick for arches and mouldings, and the formation of brick mouldings and cornices.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

Harmony.

Detroit Free Press: The "harmonizing" in New York still goes on. But the terrible shadow of Conkling in the Cabinet is becoming more and more distinct every day. And what will the half breeds do then?

A Very Pretty Fight.

Cincinnati Star: It is an uncommonly pretty fight. First Vanderbilt is on top and then it is Jewett, but amid the flying hair and the dust of the "scrimmage" it is difficult to decide which will whip.

Michigan at Yorktown.

Army and Navy Register: Michigan, which has just adopted the army helmet, developes a surprising amount of merit in her troops. It was indeed remarkable to see such a solid and admirably drilled and equipped force from this State, while States like Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were wholly unrepresented.

A Capital Choice.

New York Sun: An able, clear-headed and upright lawyer ought to be Secretary, because the administration of the revenue laws constantly involves legal questions, which he should be competent to decide quickly and correctly, without running in the ruts of the offices of the Attorney General and Solicitor of the Treasury. The daily routine of the department demands physical vigor on the part of its head quite as much as mental capacity. All requirements are met in the nomination of Judge Folger. It is a capital choice.

The Fight Postponed.

Philadelphia Times: Both sides have been making mouths at each other in the United States Senate over the Secretaryship and Sergeant-at-Arms of the body, but they finally called a truce, made Chief-Clerk Shober acting Secretary, and postponed the fight until after the Virginia election, because "one was afraid and the other dasn't." If Mahone wins Virginia he will hold the Republicans to Gorham and Riddleberger; if he gets beaten, he will be little more than a bump on a log on either side of the Senate.

Aid for Michigan.

New York Herald: Now that the Garfield fund has come to an end and our people have so magnificently responded to the appeal in behalf of the murdered President's widow and orphans, it would be well to give some attention to our friends in Michigan. They are suffering from a great calamity—a calamity that cannot be expressed in words without exaggeration. Desolating fires have swept over a large district of a populous, virtuous, liberty-loving, God-fearing people. Homes have been destroyed.—The accumulation of a lifetime crackle like thorns under a pot. Sorrow, suffering, misery, death, confront us.

A Wise Step.

New York Sun: News comes from Washington that Temporary President David Davis is giving days and nights of attention to the selection of a keeper of the Senate restaurant.—Candidates for that place are required by Senator Davis to file credentials as to their gastronomic abilities and to send to him their bills of fare with prices affixed. This is a wise step. The intimate relations of gastronomy and statesmanship has hardly ever been appreciated by Senator Davis's predecessor. Who can tell what political animosities might have been prevented, what deadlocks broken, what bitter personalities averted, had the effect of the Senatorial stomach on the Senatorial brain been understood at an earlier period in our national experience? and who can foresee the far-reaching effects of a well-regulated diet on our destiny?

TIME, it is said, proves everything, and among other things it has proved the value of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as a standard remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs. This is a household medicine with thousands of people, and deservedly so, for it has been in use more than forty years, and all who use it know that it accomplishes even more than is claimed for it. Nearly every community possesses evidences of its great curative power in persons who have been cured by it of various throat and lung complaints, and who owe to it alone their recovery from the threatening symptoms of consumption. In emergencies like croup and sudden colds, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the remedy that every family should have at hand for the treatment of these cases as they arise.—Richmond, Va., Standard.

Mr. James A. Weatherford, of Springfield, Ohio, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of the worst case of dyspepsia man ever had. The muscles of my stomach, liver and bowels now seem so strong, I believe I could almost digest petrified cheese! I recommend it to all who suffer as I did."

The best preventative of consumptive diseases of the lungs, bowels or kidneys is Brown's Iron Bitters. It checks all decay.

Cuticura

Scrofulous, Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

Reported by F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr. , in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin was as smooth and natural as ever.

C. F. FIELD, of the Clinton News dropped into our sanctum last Tuesday. He is well pleased with his journalistic experience thus far.

IT is said that school teachers are scarce in the southern part of the county. Several good teachers could find employment there.

THE completion of the Erie & Kalamazoo railroad from Toledo to Adrian was celebrated in the latter city forty-five years ago yesterday.

THE annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance company of Lenawee county, will be held at the Light Guard armory, in Adrian, on Monday, Nov. 14th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. A full attendance is desired. Z. COOK, President.

BY the last crop report, we see that old Lenawee is among the first six counties in the price paid for wheat, and Tecumseh has the reputation of being the best wheat market in Lenawee county. Ergo, Tecumseh is one of the best wheat markets in the state.

NEW blacksmith shops seem to be the rage in Tecumseh this fall. Jas. Elliott has completed a new brick shop on Railroad street, and Elliott & Haines on Pearl street have recently occupied a bran new shop at Griffith's old stand. They are both needed improvements.

FRANK DARLING is home for a few days.

THE Baptist choir will give a musical entertainment at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Fisher, next Thursday evening, Nov. 10th. Refreshments will be served. A cordial invitation to all.

Adrian Times: A Texas man named Walters evidently entertains a deep, dark hatred for the editor of the Tecumseh HERALD. He sends him a centipede and a tarantula, and then closes the grim and ghastly joke by sending him a pair of jack rabbit's ears.

JAMES WESTERMAN, father of ex-drain commissioner George W. Westerman, who died recently in Detroit and was buried in Blissfield, was perhaps the oldest Odd Fellow in the world, as he was a charter member of the first lodge of that order, both in England and America.

The Century company have issued a portrait of their late editor, Dr. J. G. Holland, as a premium to subscribers. It is said to be an excellent likeness. The friends of Dr. Holland can obtain a good portrait of their favorite author on favorable terms by subscribing for the Century magazine.

ONLY for a limited period will the ten cent rate for three months trial subscribers for The Echo remain open. After that such an offer will probably never occur again. Democrats and Republicans can alike read The Echo with satisfaction, for it is strictly and honestly independent in politics.

THE school authorities of Portland, Oregon, have shown uncommon wisdom in demanding experienced teachers for the lowest grade of their primary departments, and in paying their teachers reasonable salaries, the same amount given for the work of the third grade in the grammar schools.

ALL persons who have taken stock in the Lever Lecture Association are requested to meet at the Council Rooms in the village of Tecumseh on Saturday evening, Nov. 5th, for the purpose of organizing the association, and for the perfecting of any other business that may come before the meeting. Let every one attend.

THE principal reason for the success of The Evening News is that people can put confidence in what it says.—It has never lent itself to any party, clique or faction, but honestly tells the truth, hit where it may. It is also edited with the greatest care to make just such a paper as the people may want. Hence its 34,000 circulation.

THE following pupils in District No. 3, of Franklin, have been neither absent nor tardy during the month ending Oct. 28th: Cora and Lotta Bunting, Mary Brewster, Fannie and Anna DeRyke, Ernest Hunt, Eddie, Edith and Gracie Spalding; Carrie Taylor, Elbert and Jimmie Updyke, Minnie Wisner, Sadie Taylor, Anna Allen, Watson Hunt.

Clinton News: The estate of Achsah Field which has been in the probate court for a great many years has recently been settled. The remnant of the property after paying all claims was given by the will to the Congregational Church of Clinton. The property consisted of the house and lot situated near the mill and it has been sold by the trustees to W. S. Kimball. The church have decided to appropriate out of the proceeds enough to remove the bodies of the family, consisting of Pliny Field and wife and their daughters, Sarah and Achsah, from the old cemetery to the new one, and to erect to their memory a neat monument. The bodies were accordingly removed on Wednesday.

THE Tecumseh HERALD announces that it has received a pictorial copy of the revised New Testament. Thus slowly but surely the Gospel is being opened to benighted sinners.—Adrian Record.

We regret Bro. Smith, that you are not supplied with one. We will lend you our copy occasionally if you will agree to be careful of it and not turn down the leaves.

REYNOLDS & SILVERS have erected two commodious single horse stables in the rear of their livery barn, where they will keep Banker Rothchilds and Cassius M. Clay. These horses were added to the stock by Frank Silvers when he bought his interest in the business. He also added six livery rigs to the stock which gives the new firm a very complete outfit in their line. They propose to keep an establishment which will be a credit to our village, and they will doubtless be rewarded for their enterprise by a good run of business.

THE Educational News makes these sensible remarks:

There are two things which ought to be done, and we hope will be done under the operation of the new law. The first is increased requirements for teachers, and the second is a corresponding increase in wages. Many teachers do not receive enough to pay their board and buy their clothes, and the result is that there is no inducement for teachers to prepare themselves thoroughly, and they only teach as a temporary means of support. We are in favor of increased pay and increased requirements so that there may be an inducement for making teaching a life work.

Trust It Every Time.

A grateful patient, living under the shadows of the Highlands of the Hudson, writes to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y.: "Your medicine recommends itself so thoroughly that you may hardly care for a statement from me, yet from my own experience of its excellence, and from what I know of its operation in other cases, I should like voluntarily to say that 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' deserves its high reputation. The public may trust it every time to do what you claim for it." Sold by all Druggists. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

A Lecture Course.

The Reform Club have hit the nail on the head this time. An arrangement has been perfected to have a first class temperance lecture course here during the coming winter. Sufficient pledges have been taken to secure the "Lever Course" which will consist of ten lectures, by the most eminent temperance orators in the nation.—Season tickets will be issued for the course, and single tickets will be sold for each lecture. The plan adopted is to secure a pledged fund, in advance, sufficient to cover all expenses, and then no risk is run of making a failure or running the club into debt. The necessary number of pledges were obtained without any trouble whatever, and the subscribers are requested to meet next Saturday evening, at the Council rooms to organize.

Deerfield Record: W. F. Hood, the druggist, has just received a patent on a new barrel cover, which is a very useful article to all dealers in barrel goods. The cover is made of sheet iron, and in two equal sized pieces, one of which is fastened to an adjustable iron hoop that can be fitted to any size barrel and tightened by means of a set-screw. The front half of the cover is fastened to the other by a rivet in the center, and is turned around on top of the back part. A smaller size will be made for tobacco pails. It is a great improvement over the old style wooden cover, as it can be used in a very small space, and keeps out all dust. The cover has been pronounced a success by all who have seen it, and several of our merchants who have them in daily use say they are invaluable. It is an article which will be appreciated by dealers, and will find a ready sale.

JOHN R. CLARK.

The Detroit Evening News says:—Twice of late has the News called the attention of the temperance people and others to the fact that the well known and eloquent temperance lecturer, John R. Clark, was sick and hard up at Tecumseh. The call for help was responded to by the Jackson convention with a purse of $25, Chelsea lodge with $28, Tecumseh lodge something, and a few individuals a few dollars, making less than $75 in all. Mr. Clark was striken down when full of life and hope, and now is sick and helpless, has five children, and a mortgage on his home. He is no beggar, but humanity begs for him. Gentlemen and ladies, this is not a case for sympathy and prayers alone; it calls for ducats. If you are too modest to send it to Mr. Clark, send it to the architect of this column, and he will see that it is sent to Clark.

Mr. Clark has made no appeal for aid, but he is none the less entitled to it on that account, and we are heartily glad to see the temperance people waking up to the necessity of assisting him. We are glad to be able to state that Mr. Clark has greatly improved since cool weather set in and he hopes to take the platform again soon. He will lecture in Clinton next Sunday afternoon to test his strength. As soon as he takes the field his friends will doubtless give him plenty to do.

Kind Words from Texas.

Many of our Tecumseh readers will remember Mr. J. S. Walters, who formerly lived here and who now resides at Greenville, Texas. These kind words received from him the other day are appreciated.

DEAR HERALD:

Pardon me for addressing you in so familiar a manner. I knew you when you were in your swaddling clothes; I knew you in your youth and I have not lost cognizance of you in your more mature years. Although we are separated by hundreds of miles, you being in the Frozen North and I in the Sunny South, yet I have not forgotten the many courtesies extended to me by you in days of "Auld Lang Syne."

When your first number was issued I lived in your beautiful village. It has been my pleasure to know personally every editor which has presided over your columns from that time until the present. In all this time I have known you to be a sheet of which any town might be proud, and your editors to be gentlemen worthy and competent to conduct a public journal.

I extend to you my kindest regards and trust you will prosper in the future as you have done in the past.

Respectfully,
J. S. WALTERS.

Literary Note.

A new and enlarged edition of "The Ladies of the White House," by Laura C. Holloway, one of the editors of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, has been issued by J. W. Bradley & Co., Philadelphia. It contains a lengthy sketch of Mrs. Garfield's life, and of Mother Garfield. The life of the President, and of his assassination and death, are incidentally told in connection with his wife's career. There are fine steel portraits of Mrs. Garfield and of Mother Garfield, and an engraving of the home at Mentor. This volume is the only work of its kind ever published giving complete and accurate biographies of "The Ladies of the White House," in the order of the Administrations, from Washington to Garfield. It is issued in superb style and is sold only by subscription.

AUCTION SALE.

Anson Ayres having sold his farm will sell at auction on the premises, ¾-mile east and ½ mile south of Hank Lancaster's, in the town of Franklin, on Tuesday, Nov. 8th, 1881, at 12 o'clock, M., the following property:—Span of work horses, 4 cows, 4 shoats, 2 heavy hogs, breeding sow, 70 sheep, lumber wagon, pair bob-sleighs, single buggy, double harness, single harness, ½ stack of hay, quantity of corn fodder, 150 bushels of corn in the ear, lot of poultry, farming utensils, &c.—Usual terms of sale. Ben Reynolds, auctioneer.

Be Of Good Cheer.

There is one remedy which has proved itself to be a priceless boon and a true friend to suffering humanity. It has saved thousands of nervous, debilitated, heartaching mortals to lives of usefulness and the full enjoyment of robust health. If you are weak, nervous and debilitated or suffer from indigestion or dyspepsia, you make a serious mistake, and do yourself great injustice if you fail to try this excellent medicine. You will find it a perfect panacea for all your troubles. In a few weeks time your shattered nervous system will be restored to a natural and healthful condition, all symptoms of dyspepsia and indigestion disappear, and the possibility of paralysis, apoplexy, and other disorders that lead to sudden death, will be removed forever. This meritorious compound is a preparation of Iron and essential vegetable tonics.—It is the only preparation of Iron that does not give headache and blacken the teeth. It is called Brown's Iron Bitters. Demand it of your druggist, and take no substitute. It will give the greatest satisfaction, for its effects are lasting, and not temporary, as is the case with alcoholic preparations. Brown's Iron Bitters contain no alcohol.—Enquirer.

Man's Ingratitude.

This is an ungrateful world to say the least. A man will act like a lunatic when he has the Itching Piles, and declare that he knows he cannot live another day, yet he applies Swayne's Ointment, the intense itching is allayed at once, he gets cured and goes down to the lodge without one whit of gratitude. When asked why he looks so cheerful, he dodges the question by an indifferent answer. Its just like a man though, is it not?

DIED.

HOUSE—In Tecumseh, Oct. 31, 1881, after a long and painful illness, John W. House, father of R. B. House, M. D.

He was born in 1804. He removed to Michigan in 1852. He had lived in Tecumseh for several years. He was a member of the M. E. church over 50 years, and had filled its various offices of trust and position. He was an ardent anti-slavery man, advocating the cause of the oppressed when it required courage. He had a large circle of warm friends. He leaves three sons and one daughter. His long illness was endured with great fortitude and christian resignation.—He died peacefully and rests from all pain and sorrow. "How blest the righteous when he dies." R. S. P.

OSBORN—Died Oct. 20, 1881, Jessie L., son of C. and M. D. Osborn, Macon. Age 14 years, 5 months and 3 days.

OSBORN—At the family residence in the township of Franklin, Maria, wife of Hannibal Osborn, aged 56 years.

The deceased was born in Seneca county, N. Y., April 1st, 1825. Her early life was passed there. On the 14th of January 1849 she was married to the husband who now survives her. In 1867 the family moved to this state and settled upon the farm in Franklin now owned by LeRoy Mills. Here they lived until 1877, when they exchanged farms with Mr. Mills and moved to the homestead now occupied by Mr. Osborn. The deceased had been suffering from a serious illness for two months prior to her death. About thirty-fours hours before the final summons came she became paralyzed, and although she was conscious of the presence and care of her friends, she was speechless. She quietly passed over the river without a struggle. The deceased was a model wife and mother. Kind and affectionate, dutiful and thoughtful, nothing that husband or children needed to minister to their health and comfort was sought for in vain at her hands. The vacant chair in that family circle can never again be filled.

She leaves five children and a devoted husband to cherish her memory, emulate her virtues and mourn her loss.

LEWIS—In Tecumseh, Oct. 27, 1881, Alice E. Lewis, aged 47 years.

The deceased was the eldest daughter of Daniel G. and Elizabeth Quackenboss, and her childhood was passed in Tecumseh, her father's family residing in the house now occupied by Jacob Van Tine. Alice was a girl of more than ordinary promise, but her life has been tinged with trouble and sadness. Her husband, Sheldon Lewis died eleven years before her, and her health since has been feeble. She lived for several years in the south. A few months since Alice and her mother returned to Tecumseh, and have been boarding in Mr. Van Tine's family, beneath the same roof that sheltered them 40 years ago. Her spirit took its departure in the same room where her father died 28 years ago last June. The deceased has one son living, Daniel S. Lewis, who lives in Columbus, Ohio, and her aged mother still survives her who is now boarding in the old home.

History of Joseph.

The life of this man, as it is recorded in the Sacred History, illustrates in a striking manner how God exerts a control in human affairs, while at the same time there is the utmost freedom on the part of those who are instrumental in bringing to pass what he has appointed. It had been told to Abraham that his descendants should serve in a strange land for a certain period, at the end of which time they should be brought back to Canaan. This was one of the certainties of the future. It was just as much destined to take place as anything could be, and yet it was brought about by a train of events in which the actors did not dream of what they were doing. Joseph was a youth of singular uprightness. He was his father's favorite. He wore a coat of many colors. He reported the evil doings of his brethren. He had a dream and told it. He was sent to visit his brethren. He was cast into a pit, at the suggestion of his eldest brother, who meant in this way to save him. Just then a company of merchantmen came to the place on their way to Egypt, and Joseph is sold as a slave. In Egypt he is bought by a man in high position. He is falsely accused and cast into prison. His fellow prisoners dream, and he interprets their dreams. Two years later Pharaoh has a dream and Joseph is sent for, and does the same for him. There is a famine in the land, and so forth. Thus the chain by which God was preparing for what was to take place, had so many links. So now, in the midst of the people, with their diverse characters, their love and hatred, their envy and jealousy, their plotting and scheming, and in the midst of the various things that take place, God is ruling and presiding and bringing to pass what he has determined.

Is "Damn" an Oath?

"Damn," as a noun substantative, is an irregular word, used frequently in English writers down to the first part of the seventeenth century. We do not see why so ponderous a word has been dropped by lexicographers. In some places, as, if we speak of how original sin lies heavy on us, it seems a most appropriate word. "We inherit, with Adam's nature, the damn cleaving to it!" This use of the word came down to our American grandfathers, and lasted even till the time when the "continental currency" was a "dead loss." So came the expression: "Not worth a continental;" "Not worth a continental damn," or "dead loss." And, for short: "Not worth a damn"—or bit of paper that was a dead loss! It is not to the credit of our American lexicographers that they have not recognized this origin of a phrase peculiarly American, and that, if "slang" at first, having a basis in fact, like a countless number of other words, has been enrolled as a factor in our accepted language—as "gerrymandering" is been. The people did better than their writers of primers, grammars and dictionaries. They kept the old words. Damn means a loss—(in American parlance, as above, a worthless scrip.) Damnable, for its general meaning, signifies "worthy of severe censure." Only when used in a theological connection does it imply what Puritans suppose. It, most certainly, is not "swearing!" And, except by the imposition of Puritan signification, it is not cursing! And yet we remember hearing people, using a phrase whose history they know not, say "I do not care a cuss"—meaning a curse.—Freeman's Journal (Catholic.)

Santa Claus.

Was it not a happy winter-night long ago dear reader, when you closed your eyes with the glad anticipation that to-morrow's arms would be laden with stockings full of toys, and cookies, and nuts, and candies, and whatnot? You fell asleep—didn't you?—uncertain whether Santa Claus did wear a furry coat and trowsers, or smoke a pipe, or drive his team adown the chimney; it was not clear how he could get down the smoky flue, and somehow mother seemed to hold some undefined relation with the nocturnal visitor. With all this incertitude, there was enough of mystery in the matter to frighten you just a little,—not quite sufficient to hold your eyelids waking. Then you were but a little boy, and you need not be at all ashamed to confess that when the morning brought a humming-top and whistle, you felt a richer delight than a fat comfort yields to you now. Ye men of gravity, pompousness and years,—ye teachers and preachers, ye governors and judges,—speak we not the truth? Certainly we do: though it does seem somewhat odd and preposterous that such important personages as you were once on a time but little shavers who were tickled with toys.—Typographic Advertiser.

The Prodiograph.

Another measuring instrument is described in the French papers—the "prodiograph," so called because, when in use it traces mechanically on paper the outlines of the ground over which it travels. It is a small carriage mounted on two wheels, drawn by one man, and attended by another, who marks the levels at the proper places, and underneath hangs an iron [illegible] with a large ball at the lower end, serving as a pendulum. This pendulum maintains a constant vertical position, while the machine inclines in one direction or the other according as it ascends or descends a slope. To the upper end of the rod is fitted a pencil which marks down on a piece of paper the ups and downs of the country traversed, whether on an ordinary road or across trackless fields—the exact profile being thus recorded to a given scale. At the same time one of the wheels acting the part of chain-bearer, measures and indicates the distances traveled throughout the survey—the whole being accomplished with complete accuracy.

Good succotash wants tender young corn. Have a dozen ears, and remove with a sharp knife the kernels. If your corn is tough, do not cut too close to the cob. String a quart of young beans and cut them in three. Boil the beans with the corn in half a pint of water. Boil for three-quarters of an hour. When cooked, cover closely, add a piece of butter, a teaspoon of salt, and some pepper. If cream is obtainable, add half a pint at the conclusion.

A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West.

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca; with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Bektrap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

The "Great Rock Island" is magnificently equipped. Its road bed is simply perfect, and its track is laid with steel rails.

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

The principal R. R. connections of this great Through Line are as follows:

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

At ENGLEWOOD, with the I. S. & M. S., and P., Ft. W. & C. R. Rds.

At LA SALLE, with Ill. Cent. R. R.

At PEORIA, with P. D. & J.; P. D. & E. R. R.; Ill. Mid.; and T. P. & W. Rds.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Roundout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi, or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

While "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Bilious disorders, constipation of the bowels, and all the class of ills apparently inseperable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address. Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y. The doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

BROOKLYN.

The only variety introduced with last week's lack of sunshine were lectures by Prof. Bateman, who gave innumerable reasons for humanities' queerness, based chiefly on expansion, or littleness of brain development, and illustrated by portraits, skulls, maps, and other paraphernalia of phrenology and physiology. Though the subject was not as new to me as to some present it was equally interesting. His delineation of character, whether by guess work or chart was good. The boys and girls for once forgot to whisper and whenever that happens the talker is sufficiently complimented without aid of words. The head of a mummy, resurrected from an Egyptian catacomb occupied the platform chair of honor. It is supposed to be at least three thousand years old, and at a respectful distance looked as if chiseled out of a lump of stone coal. A nearer view did not pale the color but dispelled all doubts of its once having been the home of a mind, that long ago found its way to some other receptacle.

When we see an old tumble-down house with broken doors, sashless windows, and decay throned on hearth and roof we involuntarily wonder who lived there, and whether fate still hurls arrows at the wanderers whose shadows have faded from the threshold. Some such thoughts trespassed while looking at this tenement. Broken teeth were firmly set between strangely parted lips; for the art of embalming, though born of love and fidelity, cannot entirely resist the crumbling edict of time.—Cavernous depths in that brain-shell tells that eyes once gleamed there, and looked on the world with as much curiosity as we.

It is said the ancients embalmed their dead because they believed unless they had the original frame-work of humanity to re-enter they could not live again. The care taken to insure future existence shows the strength of love, but in this case the person has little chance of finding a local habitation or name. One was lost in Nile land, the other has become a bewildering phantom at which nervous people should not lack.—Since attending those lectures mistakes appear so natural that I have less hesitation in correcting one I as good as made in my last letter. You are so far off I would dare skip the duty, if I did not know very many ladies have, like myself, been groping in the darkness of ignorance, and are, even now, imputing blame wrongfully to innocent people. It has appeared to them that an incorporated village was, by proxy of council, entitled to exercise in some degree a sort of local option, regarding the establishing of saloons or gambling dens; and when the head of the household smashes crockery and raises particular Ned they sometimes blame the Council. Like myself they imagine that if the bond securities required by those buying license were made as much as the law permits that few would buy.

Those few would have less chance of charging their delinquences to so many others that they would be lost sight of if an investigation was indulged in, and those so ready for a per cent. to become bondsmen would be less willing to risk money with the certainty of loss. Besides we thought the determination not to own a nuisance was half a cure of it, and the omiting to do a mean act the next best thing to christianity.

We thought the Council had some influence in regulating the sale. We are mistaken. One of 'em, who speaks in last week's Exponent as one having authority, informs Junius that no Council in the state ever sold a license. That makes the case plain. It is precisely like the case of the girl who went to the Foundling Asylum and exchanged her own baby for a strange one. She had got used to caring for a child and thought she should feel lonesome without one, but if any one took a notion to ask questions it would sound better if she could say it was one furnished her by the company.—It appears that voters exchange sentiments in the ballot box, which in turn is swapped with the Lansing Asylum for licenses, which are furnished by the state company. They are simply political Japhets who have no particular father.

The Minnesota House of Representatives has adopted articles of impeachment against Judge Cox, and appointed a committee of five to present charges. The testimony in the case was read in secret session, and shows that the accused appeared on the bench in Mankato in an intoxicated condition and was ejected from a brothel in that city; that he procured the acquittal of a woman indicted in his court, and subsequently lived with her for several days. The Judge wrote to Representative Baxter asking a speedy trial.

Crow Dog entered a demurrer to the indictment found at Deadwood for the murder of Spotted Tail, claiming that under section 2,146 of the Revised Statutes an Indian cannot be tried for an offense against another Indian. The prisoner at Milwaukee who claims to be William Kuhl, of Metamora, Iowa, has been positively identified by Henry Coleman and two others as Lon Williams, the murderer of Sheriff Coleman, of Dunn county. The suspected man has been convicted of vagrancy, and will not be given up without further identification.

Jeff. Davids, a negro 70 years of age, living near Abbeville, S. C., was five years ago convicted of murdering his former master. Five times has the prisoner been placed on the scaffold for execution and as many times respited through distrust of the circumstantial testimony. There is intense excitement in Milwaukee over the case of William Kuhl, or Lon Williams. Three sisters of the accused arrived there Wednesday to identify him, only to learn that he had been recently handed over to Deputy Sheriffs from Dunn and Pepin counties, who were taking him to Menomonee. A strong guard around the jail at the latter place will doubtless protect the prisoner from violence until his identity can be clearly established.

Mrs. Garfield is packing the household goods at Mentor for removal to Cleveland, where she will occupy for the winter one of the handsomest residences on Euclid avenue. Her health is excellent. Letters of condolence and requests for keepsakes continue to flow in at the old homestead. Mrs. Garfield went to Painesville Wednesday and took out letters of administration, the bondsmen being Revenue Collector Streator and Postmaster Sherwin, of Cleveland. The main property is the house at Washington and the farm at Mentor. The life insurance of $50,000 has been equally divided between the widow and family.

Caveats on file in the Treasury Department show that there are outstanding $2,541,000 in stolen registered bonds, for which new ones have been issued. It has been discovered that thieves lend their plunder to dishonest officials of banking and other large corporations, to be filed away as legitimate securities, receiving as compensation a sum equal to the legal interest. The Metropolitan Bank of New York recently found among its assets $50,000 in stolen registered bonds, placed in the vaults by a middleman of the thieves, and the offender is serving a term in prison. Bank examiners will be ordered to make a re-examination of securities coming under their charge.

The Mechanics' National Bank of Newark, N. J., which was regarded as the strongest in that city, has suspended. At a conference of the Directors on Sunday, the Cashier, O. L. Baldwin, stated that it would be useless to proceed with business. An offer by those present to subscribe $500,000 was met by the statement that $2,000,000 would not suffice. It appearing that Baldwin had made way with everything but a heavy safe, a Director caused his arrest by a United States Marshal. While confined in his residence, the Cashier was waited upon by Commissioner Keasby and admitted to bail in $25,000. He then stated that in 1873 he began to make loans to C. Nugent & Co., morocco manufacturers, without security or the knowledge of the Directors, and soon found himself in the power of the firm, who promised to restore all advances and protect him. The loans steadily increased to $2,000,000, the void being placed in the accounts of the Mechanics' Bank of New York. Baldwin claims to have lost nothing by speculation. Under the justice administered in New Jersey, the accommodating Cashier will doubtless end his days in prison. The bank has a building worth $50,000. Joseph A. Halsey was President of the institution, which has been established for fifty years, and has of late paid 7 per cent. semi-annual dividends. On a charge of aiding in the wreck of the bank, Christopher Nugent has been arrested, and gave $25,000 bail.

SMALL BEGINNINGS.

One step and then another,
And then the longest walk is ended;
One stitch and then another,
And the largest rent is mended.
One brick upon another,
And the highest wall is made;
One flake upon another,
And the deepest snow is laid.

So the little coral workers,
By their slow but constant motion
Have built those pretty islands
In the distant dark-blue ocean;
And the noblest undertakings
Man's wisdom hath conceived
By oft-repeated efforts
Have been patiently achieved.

Then do not look disheartened
O'er the work you have to do,
And say that such a mighty task
You never can get through;
But just endeavor day by day;
Another point to gain,
And soon the mountain which you feared
Will prove to be a plain.

"Rome was not builded in a day."
The ancient proverb teaches;
And Nature, by her trees and flowers,
The same sweet sermon preaches.
Think not of far-off duties,
But of duties which are near;
And having once begun to work,
Resolve to persevere.

CHASED BY COYOTES.

All Californians who ever have traveled in the Golden State much have either seen or heard of coyotes. Therefore it will be unnecessary for me to give a minute description of the animal.

As a general thing they resemble the dog; are, however, smaller than a common-sized cur, and have a long, pointed nose; they are inveterate cowards, and very rarely attack men, unless hard pressed by hunger.

Many a wearied miner has had his slumbers ruthlessly broken by the unearthly howling of coyotes; and in his extreme indignation has seized his gun with the intention of putting an end to some of his tormentors, but sallied forth only to see the whole pack scamper off.

However cowardly coyotes may usually be, I, for one, have just cause for bitter hatred for the animals, as I once had an adventure with them that came near costing me my life.

In the winter of '53 I was residing in one of our mountain towns, and often by way of recreation would take my gun and go to a small stream, called Dry Creek, about three miles from the town, in pursuit of ducks—which article of game was very plenty there.

One afternoon I took my fowling piece, and sought my usual haunt for ducks.

I was very fortunate, and before nightfall had bagged more than I had anticipated; the consequence was I ran out of powder. Inwardly upbraiding myself for not bringing more, I started for home; by this time it was probably an hour after sunset.

It was a glorious night; the stars were out in all their brilliant magnificence; the moon soared high in the unclouded sky, affording me sufficient light to travel with ease.

I was charmed with the beauty of the evening, and was walking at a slow pace—humming snatches of tunes I had often heard from the lips of loved ones—when suddenly I heard the familiar howl of a coyote.

"Ah! you cowardly beast," I mentally ejaculated, "were you only within gunshot, and I had my never failing Old Tom (that was the name I always called my gun) loaded, I would send you into the middle of next week, making a different noise from that."

As I proceeded further, the howlings increased, and occasionally a coyote more bold than the rest would venture out of the thicket, take a good look at me, and disappear.

"Supposing they should attack me now," thought I, "here in this desolate and lonesome place, with no powder to use in my defense." Pooh! I laughed at the idea. What, coyotes attack a man! Those skulking devils, that throwing a stone at would drive away, ha! ha!

As I proceeded farther toward home, the howlings became more numerous, and gangs of two and three would cross my path at a distance of probably one hundred feet, and scamper off on my throwing a stone at them.

I was probably a mile and a half from where I had been hunting, when I noticed that the coyotes began to throw off their timidity, and would approach quite near me. "Getting tame," thought I; "undoubtedly you know I am out of powder, and think to impress me with the idea that you are a courageous set of hounds. Oh! you can't come that game," and I threw a stone at a large, long-nosed fellow, which struck him on the head, and had a tendency to accelerate his movements.

Nearer and nearer the ugly things would come, till finally, I noticed that some were following, at about fifty feet distance. Still this did not excite any suspicion that I was to be attacked.

I was now about half way home, and began to feel uneasy, as the pack had steadily increased until they numbered some twenty-five, all the while snapping, growling and fighting, and, you may imagine, making rather an unpleasant noise for a lone traveler, at night, and full a mile from any house.

Closer and closer they passed as I walked along, at rather a brisker pace than when I started; they seemed to really mean mischief by their actions.

I admit, a cold perspiration broke out upon my forehead, but still I would not admit that I was in danger. True, I had heard of instances where men had been killed by coyotes, but had never placed faith in such stories.

Snapping and growling like a lot of dogs over a bone, the whole pack were following close upon my heels, and at every step they seemed to gain upon me, until they were within ten feet of me.

Turning round, I shouted with all my might and threw a handful of small stones at them, with the idea of frightening them away; but it wouldn't do; they were not to be put to flight by either loud words or stones. Nearer and nearer they advanced, stretching out in the form of a semi-circle, and presenting a very formidable front. Occasionally one would make a feint as though to fasten his teeth in my leg. So bringing my gun from my shoulder, I used it as a sort of club in defense.

Grasping it by the barrels firmly, I would raise it over my head and bring it down with considerable force on the body of any coyote that would make a dash at me.

By this time they were very close to me; so close, in fact, that I could hit one every time I swung my gun; and now the startling fact broke upon my mind that I was the game they were after. I had heard of horrible adventures with wolves, and here was a species of animals equally as formidable as any wolves, and having as murderous intentions as any wolves ever had.

Oh! the terrible thought of being made food for this, at any other time, cowardly set of whelps! A thousand thoughts crowded through my mind. Home and friends, mother and loved ones whom I had left far away and journeyed to this land of gold only to meet an untimely end. I grew faint, and would have fallen, but the thought of my perilous position gave me strength and nerved my arm for the unequal contest.

With all the force I could muster, I swung my gun right and left, striking a coyote every time, but without any apparent effect; for as speedily as one would fall back, two or three would crowd in his place.

Some ten minutes I thus combated my terrible enemies, advancing backwards, for I had a dim hope that by this means I might near the cabin of some miner, who would come to my rescue, and still the coyotes gave no signs of falling back. I grew weak and faint; I know not why, but all hope seemed to have fled, and despair took possession of my soul.

My gun fell harmlessly from my hands, and was immediately trampled under foot by the coyotes. As if by instinct I took one long step backwards, when, heaven! the earth seemed to crumble under my feet. I felt myself going slowly, slowly, I knew not where. Was I being devoured by coyotes? I fainted.

* * * * * * * *

When I regained my senses I found myself lying in the water at the bottom of an old shaft that had been sunk by some prospecting party, and which was probably thirty feet deep.

I could hardly believe my own senses. I really was alive and free from danger. No matter what predicament I was in now, I was removed from immediate death, and I felt thankful.

With the exception of a sprained ankle I sustained no injuries.

The coyotes hovered round the mouth of the shaft until near morning, when they disappeared, no doubt very much disgusted with their night's sport.

Early next morning my loud cries attracted the attention of a party of miners on their way to work, when I was rescued from my damp bed, and you may imagine I felt grateful enough when I found myself once more surrounded by friends.

Manufacture of Farina, or Potato Flour.

The nature, manufacture and exportation of potato flour, or farina, as it is often called, are but little understood in this country. To this fact we can ascribe the failure of our people to recognize the value of an industry which has long been in successful operation in Great Britain, France, Germany, Holland and other European countries. Twenty-five years ago the Dutch drove the Scotch out of their own field, in the production of farina, through the cheapness of the raw material and the abundant facilities for internal transportation which Holland affords.

The cheap production of potatoes in the United States, and the quantity which is annually exported, should draw attention to this source of national and individual wealth. The manufacture of farina forms a subject well worth a careful investigation by our people.

Farina is used mainly in the manufacture of starch, for sizing fabrics, and in confectionery. The principal demand is for starch. It has been calculated that Great Britain alone could readily take 100,000 to 200,000 tons annually for the latter purpose. But whether made with starch or sold as farina, a ready sale is assured.

Although the potato yields a smaller percentage of farina than corn, yet taken by the acre, the potato surpasses any known product in this respect. Farina is worth about $100 per ton. It takes three or four tons of potatoes to make one of flour. Calculating $35 to $40 as the price of the potatoes in a ton of flour, we have $65 per ton for the cost of manufacture and profit. In many sections and at some seasons, potatoes would not cost as much as we have estimated.

During the late Franco-German war, the French Government purchased all the farina it could secure, and mixed it with wheaten flour in "potato cakes" for the army. Farina at that time rose to $200 a ton, and even then the supply fell far short of the demand. Since then an increased amount of farina has been regularly consumed in France, and farina mills have correspondingly multiplied in the country.

The manufacture of potato flour is so simple, and the result so methodical, that it requires very little experience to reach a satisfactory issue. The potatoes are first steeped in water from six to twelve hours to soften the dirt and other matters adhering, after this they are thoroughly washed by mechanical means with the aid of either steam or water power. They are then reduced to a pulp by a rasping or grinding process in a properly constructed mill. A small stream of water is caused to flow on the upper surface of the rasp or grinder, to keep it clean of accumulation of pulp.

From the grinder the pulp falls into a washing machine, and through a series of sieves, through which the farina is forced by revolving brushes, the coarser pulp being thrown out at lateral openings. The granules of farina pass into a trough and are conducted to vats, where the farina is permitted to deposit. After the proper number of filterations and depositions have occurred, until the last deposit is pure white farina, the latter becomes of sufficient consistency to cut into lumps and place, either unsupported or in conical wire cases, to dry.

The drying process can be accomplished in a building supplied with shelves, and capable of being heated at from 60 degrees, at which the farina begins to dry, up to 212 degrees, which is the highest temperature it will require. The heating apparatus may be such as is most convenient. In Europe the farina is packed in 200 to 212 pound fine sacks, but flour barrels are said to be preferable, as the wood protects it from damage and allows it to be transported safely to the most distant regions.

As indicating the demand for potatoes which might be expected to spring up with the growth of this industry, we mention the fact that in Aroostook County, Maine, the starch manufacturers are said to offer two dollars a barrel for potatoes delivered, in many cases paying one-half of this in advance. And this, notwithstanding a largely increased acreage planted.

Going Away.

There isn't a day in the year but what we can see just such a parting as took place yesterday morning at the Union depot. Man and wife had come down to the train which was to bear her to her mother's. The husband had fully persuaded her that her health was failing, and that she ought to go home on a six week's visit. She thought she felt even better than usual, but husbands know best about these things, of course. This wife seemed to have made her preparations quickly, and had not yet said what was on her mind to say. It lacked thirty-five minutes of train time, and as they sat down in the waiting room she said:

"Now, Henry, the last time I went away—"

"Just wait—I want to see if that's our train," interrupts the husband as he rose up. Going out he was absent several minutes. When he returned she was ready to say:

"I wanted to say to you that the neighbors—"

"Did I give you the check for your trunk?" he suddenly inquired.

She found it in her pocket, restored it, and began again.

"Of course I have confidence in you, but—"

"You remember you must not change cars at the Junction," he said, as he looked at his watch. "When you reach there you will hear men yelling change cars for this and that place, but you sit right still."

"Haven't I been over the road four different times, and don't I know all the stations? Now, Henry, although there will be no one in the house but you, I have—"

"Did you forget that lunch basket?" he excitedly asked, as he looked around and under the seat.

She had it on her lap all the time. As soon as she had assured him of its safety she said:

"You now come from the office every evening at six, and of course, I shall expect—"

"That's our train!" he exclaimed, as he leaped up and grabbed for the satchel.

"Dear me, but I wanted to say to you—" she replied as she followed him out. He rushed down to the depot and put her aboard the coach as fast as possible, but while arranging the seat, she said:

"Now, Henry, I am going away for six weeks, but I want to say that—"

"There goes the bell—I'll be left—let me kiss you—good-bye, dear!" and he was out of sight in an instant.

A man across the aisle, who seemed to know how matters stood, looked at his watch and then called out:

"It lacks just twenty-two minutes of train time."

The wife rose up and walked to the door, but Henry was clear of the depot, and all she could do was to give one of her band-boxes a kick and mutter:

"I'll pay him for this—I'll return unexpectedly!"

Advice to Young Writers.

William Cullen Bryant once gave the following sensible advice to a young man who had offered him an article for his paper:

My young friend, I observe that you have used several French expressions in your letter. I think, if you will study the English language, that you will find it capable of expressing all the ideas that you may have. I have always found it so, and in all that I have written I do not recall an instance where I was tempted to use a foreign word, but that, on searching, I have found a better one in my own language.

Be simple, unaffected; be honest in your speaking and writing. Never use a long word when a short one will do as well.

Call a spade by its name, not a well know oblong instrument of manual labor; let a home be a home, and not a residence: a place not a locality, and so on of the rest. When a short word will do, you always lose by a long one. You lose in clearness; you lose in honest expression of meaning; and, in the estimation of all men who are capable of judging, you lose in reputation for ability.

The only true way to shine, even in this false world, is to be modest and unassuming. Falsehood may be a thick crust, but in the course of time truth will find a place to break through. Elegance of language may not be in the power of us all, but simplicity and straightforwardness are.

Write much as you would speak, and as you think. If with your inferior, speak no coarser than usual; if with your superior, speak no finer. Be what you say, and within the rules of prudence. No one ever was a gainer by singularity of words or in pronunciation. The truly wise man will so speak that no one will observe how he speaks. A man may show great knowledge of chemistry by carrying bladders of strange gases to breathe; but one will enjoy better health, and find more time for business, who lives on common air.

Sidney Smith once remarked: "After you have written an article, take your pen and strike out half the words, and you will be surprised to see how much stronger it is.

Their First View in a Mirror.

The effect which the sudden seeing of themselves as others see them had upon several Siamese women is thus narrated by a lady:

A few weeks ago a company of Siamese women came to see me and to look at my house. They consider it a great treat if I invite them through my rooms, and let them look at my bed, my tables, my chairs, my pictures and nick-nacks, and especially if they can get a look at themselves in the mirror on my bureau.

One or two of those who came had been here before, and they were telling how they looked in the glass, till the others were anxious to see too, so they gathered in a crowd and stood before the mirror.

One quick look, and then a surprised startled cry, and some of them hid their faces, others jumped away, and some looked about to see who was really there.

They had never seen themselves before, and did not know how miserably they looked, with their black teeth and naked bodies. They drew their scarfs over their breasts, and tried to hide from the sight of themselves.

One turned and said to me, "We are very hateful-looking; don't you think so?"

I did not tell them I had always thought so, but I said:

"Now, since you know how you look, is it any wonder we always tell you to wear more clothes, and to quit chewing betel?"

Some of them would not be induced to look the second time, while others stood and stared.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

Moral and Religious.

Always speak the truth.

Carelessness gives temptation to dishonesty.

A little impatience subverts great undertakings.

He who loses hope may then part with anything.

The Christian life is not knowing nor hearing, but doing.

The error of a moment becomes the sorrow of a whole life.

Love, faith, patience—the three essentials to a happy life.

A judicious silence is better than truth spoken without charity.

The man who passes on his honesty wants little of the villain.

The finest fruit earth holds up to its Maker is the finished man.

There is nothing terrible in death but our life hath made it so.

He, who can pay homage to the truly despicable is truly contemptible.

Never lend an article you have borrowed unless you have permission to do so.

Virtue pardons the wicked, as the sandal tree perfumes the axe that strikes it.

Character alone is immortal. Not what we have, but what we are, is enduring.

God's treasury is absolutely inexhaustible. He can never fail a trusting heart

He who strikes the endearments of life increases, at the same time, the terrors of death.

We may at our peril reconcile ourselves to the world, but it will never reconcile itself to us.

He who has his thoughts best employed when alone will use his tongue best when in company.

With God caring for us we are strong to live; with God supporting us we are strong to die.

Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

Renew Your Lease.

There are times in every one's life when energy fails and a miserable feeling comes over them, mistaken for laziness. Danger lurks in these symptoms, as they arise from diseased organs. Parker's Ginger Tonic will restore perfect activity to the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood and renew your lease of health and comfort.—Advocate.

In these days, when so many would-be reformers are recommending the general adoption of beer drinking as a cure for the evil of intemperance, it is refreshing to read articles like the following, copied from the Scientific American:

"In appearance the beer drinker may be the picture of health, but in reality he is most incapable of resisting disease. A slight injury, severe cold or shock of the body or mind, will commonly provoke acute disease, ending fatally. Compared with inebriates who use different forms of alcohol, he is more generally diseased. The constant use of beer every day gives the system no time for recuperation, but steadily lowers the vital forces. It is our observation that beer drinking in this country produces the very lowest forms of inebriety closely allied to criminal insanity."

Catarrhal Poison.

Catarrh poisons the mucous membrane, poisons the blood and vital fluids, poisons the lungs, liver and kidneys. From a simple cold to a rotting, sloughing and death of the senses of smell, taste and hearing, Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh is supreme. Complete treatment $1.

DEW AND SUNSHINE.—Love and appreciation are to woman what dew and sunshine are to a flower. They refresh and brighten her whole life. They make her strong hearted and keen-sighted in every thing affecting the welfare of home. They enable her to cheer her husband, when the cares of life press heavily upon him, and to be a providence to her children. To know that her husband loves her, and is proud of her, and believes in her; that even her faults are looked upon with tenderness; that her face, to one at least, is the fairest in the world; and the heart, which to her is the greatest and noblest, holds her sacred in its inmost recesses above all other women, gives her strength and courage, sweetness and vivacity, which all the wealth of the world could not bestow. Let a woman's life be pervaded with such an influence, and her heart and life will never grow old, but will blossom, and sweeten, and brighten in perpetual youth.

Living Witnesses.

The hundreds of hearty, and healthy looking men, women and children, that have been rescued from beds of pain, sickness and well nigh death by Parker's Ginger Tonic are the best evidence in the world of its sterling merit and worth. You will find such in almost every community.

Weather Indications.

An eminent French meteorological writer asserts that one of the most trustworthy prognostics of the weather is the color of the sky, and this is regulated entirely by the state of condensation of the suspended watery vapor; the successive layers of air charged with vapor stop the different rays of light—first the blue, then the yellow, and lastly the red. When the sun is near the horizon, the rays have to traverse a great thickness of vapor, and so the last rays of a sunset and the first at sunrise are red. The disappearance of clouds at sunset is a sign of fine weather, for it is due to the sinking of the clouds into the warmer strata near the surface of the earth, where they are evaporated, and these clouds, in disappearing, leave behind them a large amount of vapor in the air, and the sun's rays shine red through the medium.

Hon. Wm. Taylor, Boston, is well again. Completely cured of a scrofulous humor which poisoned his blood, covering his face and head with sores, by Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally.

INNOCENT MIRTH.—There are a large class of people who deem the business of life far too weighty and momentous to be made light of; who would leave merriment to children, and laughter to idiots; and who hold that a joke would be as much out of place on their lips as on a gravestone or in a ledger. Surely it cannot be requisite to a man's being in earnest, that he should wear a perpetual frown. Is there less of sincerity in Nature doing her gambols in spring, than during the stiffness and harshness of her wintry gloom? And is it then altogether impossible to take up one's abode with truth, and to let all sweet homely feelings grow about it and cluster around it, and to smile upon it as a kind father or mother, and to sport with it, as with a loved brother or sister; and to fondle it, and play with it, as a child.

Trust It Every Time.

A grateful patient, living under the shadows of the Highlands of the Hudson, writes to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y.: "Your medicine recommends itself so thoroughly that you may hardly care for a statement from me, yet from my own experience of its excellence, and from what I know of its operation in other cases, I should like voluntarily to say that 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' deserves its high reputation. The public may trust it every time to do what you claim for it." Sold by all Druggists. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

ENTHUSIASM.—Many people are prejudiced against enthusiasm; they confound it with fanaticism, which is a great mistake. Fanaticism is an exclusive passion, the object of which is an opinion; enthusiasm is connected with the harmony of the universe; it is the love of the beautiful, elevation of soul, enjoyment of devotion, all united in one single feeling which combines grandeur and repose. The sense this word wore amongst the Greeks affords the noblest definition of it; enthusiasm signifies "God in us." In fact, when the existence of man is expansive, it is something divine.

She Is Going to Try It.

A correspondent writes from way down East, in Lubec, Me., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.: "I called upon you about six weeks ago, sick with Bilious Disease. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' and it cured me. What I want is some more of your medicine. My daughter is going to try it." Sensible man.—He will not regret it, and when his daughter has tried it she will be satisfied too. "Favorite Remedy" is just the thing for the ills that afflict womankind.

The skin of a boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be applied to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply to the part affected. It will draw off the matter, and relieve the soreness in a few hours.

American Ladies.

The first impression Sara Bernhardt received of the American ladies manifested itself thusly:—"Oh! ze ladies, za are so beautiful, such clear complexion I nevare see before," all of which is due to the universal use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases, which insures a clear and clean complexion, and a healthy color. This recalls to mind the vivine precept "cleanliness is next to Godliness."

For Hot Weather.

Scald four tablespoonfuls of Hyson tea in a pint of sweet cream; it is best to scald it either in a custard kettle or in a tin pail placed within a kettle of boiling water. When partly cool, strain into it a pint of a cold cream, bring it to a scald, and stir in four beaten eggs and three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Let cool, and freeze. I have found that in making water-ices, if the sugar be not well stirred in before freezing, it will sink to the bottom and give to the mixture a sharp, unpleasant taste. It is best to make a syrup of sugar and water by boiling, and when cold, to add the pure juice of the fruit.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

CUTTING GRASS.—Chemical analyses and common experience has proven that grass cut when in blossom is better for cows than when cut later. For horses and working cattle it is better when more nearly ripe, but not wood. As a rule farmers dry hay too much. Cured grass is far better every way, cheaper to make and better to feed. Grass cut in the morning and shaken up once or twice in a good hay day, is cured enough, as a rule, to be carried to the barn in the afternoon. With a good mowing machine to do the work quickly, time may be saved by not cutting until the dew is off. Or the same result will be obtained by late cutting in the afternoon, the grass lying flat prevents the dew from getting to the ground, and only the top is moistened.

Given Away.

We can not help but noticing the liberal offer made to all invalids and sufferers by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. You are requested to call at Worth Preserving.

1,000 laths will cover 70 yards of surface, and 11 pounds of nails put them on. Eight bushels of good lime, 15 bushels of sand, 1 bushel of hair make about enough mortar to plaster 100 square yards. A cord of stone, 3 bushels of lime and a cubic yard of sand will lay 100 cubic feet of wall. One thousand shingles laid 4 inches to the weather, will cover 100 square feet of surface, and 5 pounds of nails fasten them on. One-fifth more siding and flooring is needed than the number of square feet of surface, because of the lap in the siding and the matching of the floor. Five courses of brick will lay 1 foot in height on a chimney; 6 bricks in a course will make a flue 4 inches wide and 12 long, and 8 bricks in a course make a flue 8 inches wide and 16 long.

A Physician of Great Prominence

in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Hens do much better when allowed a free range outdoors than when confined. In France it has been found that with fowls allowed considerable freedom, 20 per cent. only of their eggs failed to hatch; with less freedom, forty per cent. failed, and in close confinement, sixty per cent were not hatched.

Chas. Eayre Hinkle, Jersey City Heights, N. J., reports that his son, a lad of twelve years, was completely cured of a terrible case of Eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. From his head to his feet was one mass of scabs.

When nature would make anything specially rare and beautiful, she always makes it little; little pearls, little diamonds, little dews. Little fortunes bring the most content, and little hopes the least disappointment, and little songs are the dearest loved.

Society Belles.

On account of its remarkably delicate and lasting fragrance society belles are loud in their praises of Floreston's Cologne.

THE TEMPERANCE WOMEN.

Proceedings of the Annual Convention of the W. C. T. U. held at Tecumseh.

The W. C. T. U., of Lenawee Co., held its annual convention at the M. E. church of Tecumseh, beginning Nov. 2, 1881.

Convention was called to order at 3 P. M. by the President, Miss Vevia Wadsworth of Adrian. The first half hour was occupied in devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Ann Bassett, of Ypsilanti. After reading of the scripture and singing, the convention united in earnest prayer for a blessing upon the meeting and upon the great work in which so many devoted christian women are engaged throughout the land.

The remainder of the afternoon session was devoted to business. In the absence of the secretary, Miss Zoe Pennington, of Macon was chosen secretary pro. tem. The call of the convention was read, after which the following committee on enrollment of delegates was appointed:

WEDNESDAY EVE. Meeting was opened at the time appointed by singing "What a friend we have in Jesus." Portions of the 5th and 6th chapters of Paul's epistle to Galatians were read by Rev. Mr. Pardington, who led in prayer. Singing, "Only an Armor Bearer." A select poem, "The burial of King Alcohol" was then read by Mrs. Wood of Tecumseh; discussion of the question of juvenile work by Rev. Wm. Grandy, Rev. Mr. Pardington, John Osborn, Mrs. Pardington, Mrs. Walker and others. Singing, "Let the Lower Lights be Burning." Miss Wadsworth here made a few remarks upon the question and urged the introduction of Richardson's Temperance lesson books in the schools.—Singing, "He Leadeth Me." Benediction by Rev. Mr. Pardington. Convention adjourned until 9 o'clock, Thursday morning.

THURSDAY, Nov. 3. Convention called to order by the President at 9 A. M. Devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Wood of Tecumseh. Minutes of the preceeding meetings read and approved. The president of the convention then gave a report of her missionary work throughout the county during the past year.

Reports of township vice presidents only three of whom were present.—Mrs. N. R. Merritt, Tecumseh; Mrs. Walker, Palmyra; Mrs. Scott, Blissfield.

On motion the following Unions were reported:

Tecumseh, Palmyra, Lenawee Junction, Blissfield, Adrian, Hudson, Macon, Raisin.

Essay by Mrs. Ann Basset, Ypsilanti; subject, "The encouragement of Unions." The subject was further discussed by Mrs. Basset, Rev. Mr. Pardington and others. Mrs. Scott, of Blissfield being called to the chair, the president made an appeal for greater zeal in the juvenile work. Prayer by Mrs. Derbyshire, of Ypsilanti. Convention adjourned for the afternoon session.

THURSDAY P. M. Convention called to order at 1:30.

Singing, "Rescue the Perishing." A portion of scripture was read by Miss Vevia Wadsworth, selected from the 4th chapter of Judges. After a short time spent in prayer and singing the convention resumed the work of the day. Minutes of preceeding meeting read and accepted.

Discussion of the question "Our girls in the temperance work." The committee on resolutions then submitted their report which was accepted.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Your committee on resolutions would respectfully present the following:

Resolved, That we express our rejoicing that so many earnest and devoted christian women throughout our land realize the great importance of this temperance work and are willing to devote themselves to its advancement.

That we deem it advisable and of the greatest importance to circulate the best of temperance literature among the people, especially scattering juvenile temperance works among the young, thus educating them up to a strong temperance sentiment and bringing our work to a practical result.

That while we recognize the ceaseless activity of the foes of temperance, willing at any cost to increase their sordid gains, and pitiless and regardless of the misery they cause in countless homes, we also recognize the upward progress that has been made, and that thousands have been rescued from the grasp of the destroyer.

That we see encouragement for our Unions to go forward in every effort for "God, home and native land," working especially for the youth of our country, against this awful curse, and willing, while they work with their might, to leave the result in the hands of God.

That we express our earnest and hearty thanks to the pastor and trustees of the M. E. church of Tecumseh for allowing us the use of their beautiful house of worship, providing us so pleasant a place in which to meet, and also thanking all who have kindly co-operated with us, making this convention pleasant and profitable to all.

That we gladly express our deep appreciation of the kindness shown by the editor of the Tecumseh HERALD, in giving us such favorable notice and so large a space in their columns.

MRS. WOOD,
MRS. M. J. WALKER,
MRS. JAMES COOK.

The Convention next proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year with the following result:

President, Miss Vevia Wadsworth, Adrian; Secretary, Zoe Pennington, Macon; Treasurer, Addie Wimple, Tecumseh.

Members of executive board, Mrs. Clegg, Adrian; Mrs. Mary C. Wood, Rollin.

On motion the following vice presidents of townships were elected:

Mrs. N. R. Merritt, Tecumseh; Haywood, Clinton; M. Harmon, Macon; Sarah Luke, Ogden; Dan Shire, Hudson; L. E. Street, Palmyra; Phebe Mitchell, Blissfield; Rev. A. W. Wilson, Franklin; Miss Emma Smith, Cambridge; Mrs. Sudborough, Riga; Augusta Waring, Ridgeway; A. H. Briggs, Adrian; Maybin, Seneca; Miss Mary Upton, Medina; Mrs. Laura Converse, Dover; B. J. Laing, Raisin; Dr. Town, Rollin; N. J. Strong, Fairfield; Nellie Smith, Woodstock; Myers, Rome; Deerfield and Madison to be supplied.

The question regarding the selection of a place at which to hold the next convention was then considered. The convention deeming it advisable to hold a part of the meetings at the country villages. After some discussion it was unanimously agreed that the next convention be held at Macon unless different arrangements be made by the executive board. Motion was made that a vote of thanks be extended to the M. E. society for the use of the church. Motion carried.

Owing to the repeated failures of the president to secure a lecturer for the evening the convention decided to adjourn at the close of the afternoon session.

The members of the convention were invited by Rev. Mr. Pardington to attend the Thursday evening prayer meeting where Mrs. Basset and Miss Wadsworth were requested to give addresses upon the gospel temperance work.

On motion the convention adjourned to meet again at the call of the executive board.

ZOE PENNINGTON,
Secretary.

THE ADDRESS.

"Again the silent wheels of time their annual course have driven," and again we have gathered to bring in the sheaves of the years harvesting to receive a fresh spiritual baptism for the service, and to lay wise and thoughtful plans for the future, for the work of the year that is to come.

In reviewing the affairs of our society we may say it has felt its depressions in common with all other enterprises, but it has, nevertheless, done much work to accomplish the purpose for which it was intended. We have relieved some in distress, have raised fallen ones, wiped tears from many, have dashed the cup from not a few inebriates, and stand to-day as firm as ever the enemy of the wine cup and propose to go on to victory.

We think we see a break in the clouds, a break with a silver lining in it. On looking over the present company we remember happy smiling faces that were wont to grace our board. Where are they now? Echo answers where. Some are with us still happy as ever. Some that we used to meet in pleasant intercourse have moved to other scenes and pastures new. Some have passed that "bourne from whence no traveler returns." But still their virtues will remain fresh in our memories.

In looking back we find that like Kate Dalrymole, there are ups and downs in life, and so with our society, sometimes flourishing like a "green bay tree" and again poor as the Hawthorn in the month of December. But through all vicissitudes we have endeavored to steer one steady course with duty as our beacon light, and our watchword "onward." This temperance reform, like every other great upward movement, has its difficulties and obstacles to overcome. Those things that mostly hinder our work summed up briefly are the following:

1st. Gross ignorance among the people respecting the subject of temperance.

2d. Political demagogism is another great barrier in the way of temperance success.

3d. The moneyed interest of the rum traffic is another, and one of the most sorrowful opposing agents in this warfare for human rights.

4th. The disfranchisement of woman is another powerful agent against the success of our cause. Place the ballot in the hands of the wives, mothers and sisters of the land, and the liquor interest would soon be buried in mountains of votes so deep that its name would never be heard again among the civilized nations.

5th. The legal support which the traffic enjoys is another and most powerful agent, preventing the success of our endeavors.

6th. A want of liberality among temperance people is another great barrier in the way of success. This great cause cannot be carried onward successfully without money.

Friends of temperance, prepare for the conflict, remove as far as you can these obstacles, and e're long we shall be permitted to shout victory is ours.

Why should timid, delicate women take so prominent a part in the great temperance campaign is often asked by men who look upon wives and daughters devoting month and years to embroidery, or engaged in fashionable dissipation with approval. The ugly fact stares us in the face. What of the sixty thousand doomed souls who yearly fill drunkard's graves. A large portion are women. There are loved and loving daughters, wives and mothers who will fill the quota this year. Who are they? Sin has no set, yet we shrink in horror from a drunken wife or mother, her crime seems more aggravated from the fact that she is a woman, queen of the empire, home. When once the spoiler has taken posession, there is little hope. But should not every free, sound, large hearted woman enter in the temperance army? In defense of the home sanctuary, in obedience to the command of Him who said "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do it with all thy might." Let christian women of America turn upon this enemy of our homes and loved ones by any and every legitimate means strive to drive strong drink from our land. It is a precious thought to us that Christ Jesus of Bethany presides over all the affairs of men, the same who gave us the cheering promise, "I will be with you always." This gives us the knowledge of a Savior present with us in all the experiences of life, and such a consciousness of His abiding presence, our burdens should be lighter, our sorrows less bitter, our joys deeper, and our hope in the future brighter. May we be more fervent in prayer and praise, never forgetting our privilege to lay our wants before the Lord, committing the keeping of our souls to Him. There are many sisters upon whom the cares of life bear heavily, but there is no one who cannot hold converse with God. The eyes of the Lord are on the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers. The heart can go up to Him no matter what the surroundings.—Where ever the christian is there is an acceptable altar from which prayer and praise may ascend. It is not the lack of time so much as the lack of heart which hold men and women from prayer, and our many cares are reasons why we should pray rather than why we should not. The mission of the Son of God was to seek and save that which was lost. That mission he committed to his followers. Truly we may say the master is come and calleth for thee.

We rejoice in the belief that the gospel is taking deeper root in our loved country, through the blessing of the God who said "my word shall not return unto me void," and when we hear from the far off Islands of the sea the echo of the Gospel as it is being sounded from hilltop to hilltop, and the valleys re-echoing the same, because a Savior is proclaimed to them, we are led to believe the time is fast approaching when knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters do the sea.

Believing that with greater intelligence we shall be able to do our work more effectually, let us continue to sow beside all waters, trusting the Lord of the vineyard to bless our work according to His will.

A Timely Warning, or the Experience of a Minister.

If you suffer from general debility, brought on by too close application to business and excessive brain work; or from increasing prostration and sinking spells, that even a rest or removal of the cause will not relieve, make haste to do as did a reverend friend of ours. He secured from his druggist a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, having heard of its merits from a physician who told him not to take any other Bitters or Tonic, for with the exception of Brown's Iron Bitters, they all contained alcohol, and had failed to give his patients lasting relief; nor should he take any other preparation of Iron, for with the exception of Brown's Iron Bitters, they all blackened the teeth and often gave headache, which Brown's Iron Bitters never did, but in fact cured headache. The effect was most satisfactory; he immediately realized wonderful results. His old energy returned, his natural force came back, and he felt himself altogether a new man, full of health, strength and vigor, and he has continued to remain so ever since. Now he recommends Brown's Iron Bitters to all his friends which we do unhesitatingly to all our readers.—Globe.

Cuticura

Scrofulous, Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. D. ..., in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin was as smooth and natural as ever.

The Michigan Southern conference of Congregational churches met Nov. 1st at Somerset. The meeting was a very pleasant one, and welcomed with much enthusiasm by the citizens. A bountiful collation was spread by the ladies at the parsonage Wednesday noon. Various important questions were debated, among which was how to reach the children in the Sabbath school and bring them into the church. Another was Christian sociology.—The next meeting will be held at Dundee the coming May.

Deerfield Record: Floyd Sperry a former resident of this township, and night watchman at Hall & Brewer's stave mill at Dundee, met with a terrible accident on the 24th ult. While oiling the engine Sperry's clothes were caught by a screw on the eccentric rod and he was rapidly whirled around the main shaft until his clothing was torn entirely from his person, letting him fall to the floor in an insensible condition. His body was fearfully bruised and cut, hardly a square inch escaping injury. The doctors report his recovery as doubtful.

THE temperance lecture course is a fixed fact.

C. A. KEIL makes his bow to the public this week in a new card.

THE Morenci Observer proposes to follow suit, and will soon have a power press in their office.

DEERFIELD is ahead on turnips. A farmer of that township has one that weighs twenty-eight pounds.

THE proceedings of the Farmers' Club are necessarily deferred one week on account of a press of other matter.

THE Adrian Record says that Winslow Bates husked 120 bushels of corn in ten hours. What does Smiley Watson say to that?

OLIVER TEFFT, of Raisin, has gone to Chicago to take a four months' course in Bryant & Stratton's commercial college. Success to him.

M. J. TREMAIN received a telegram that calls him to New York state to attend the funeral of his father, and is obliged to close his market for a few days.

THE paper mill at Palmyra has been obliged to shut down, as the roads are so bad that straw cannot be drawn in sufficient quantities to keep the mill running.

THE new plank walks each side of the railroad track in front of Strong & McNair's store is a convenience to passengers who patronize the "Chicago street" station.

ISAAC D. MILLER, of Macon, has been taken to the county house. It was a kindness to send him there.—The old man can now end his days in peace and comfort.

THE report of the W. C. T. U. Convention in this week's HERALD is the work of Miss Zoe Pennington. She deserves a hearty compliment for the manner in which it was done.

THE regular weekly drill of Company C for next week will take place on Monday evening, Nov. 14th, instead of Wednesday evening. A good attendance is requested at 7:30 o'clock.

LEROY MILLS sold his colt "Hunter" to Reynolds & Silvers the other day for $750. The colt is four years old past, and on the day he was four years old he made a mile in 2:41. LeRoy is in luck this time.

THE village Council have taken steps to have the poker rooms in the village suppressed. A very wise decision and taken none too soon. The Council proceedings this week are more entertaining reading than usual.

THE Blissfield Advance, since its enlargement, takes rank with the best papers in the county. The proprietor had some trouble with his new press last week—new presses are frequently unruly—but it runs all right now.

GEO. TRAIN got pretty well shaken up Tuesday afternoon by a team running into him while he was returning from Ridgeway on his mail trip. Fortunately he escaped personal injury, but the buggy was pretty well demoralized.

THE State Sheriff's Association met at Grand Rapids last week, and Sheriff Chas. Bidwell, of this county, received the honor of being chosen president for the ensuing year. The association showed its good judgment then at all events.

CAPT. ROMEYN bade adieu to the Hampton Institute Monday evening, Oct. 31st. The officers made it the occasion for presenting him with a fine silver ice pitcher, the ladies also presenting him with a gold headed ebony cane. He is now in Albany with his family.

A CIVIL service reform association has been formed at Ann Arbor, and is officered as follows: President, Prof. C. K. Adams; vice presidents, Judge Cooley, Prof. W. H. Pettie and Prof. V. C. Vaughan; secretary and treasurer, Hon. W. D. Harriman.—The society propose to do active work in the way of advancing civil service reform.

E. H. MERRITT left yesterday for Big Rapids, where he expects to reside in the future. He has engaged a position in the employ of a large lumbering firm there. We regret to have Mr. Merritt leave Tecumseh, where he has found a congenial home for so many years, but if his business interests compel him to go, we hope his lines may fall in pleasant places.

These lectures and all the session will be free to the public, and all are invited. Quite a large number of ministerial and lay delegates are expected.

MISS BROCKWAY of N. Y., is visiting Mr. J. W. Patterson.

THE Bryant anniversary exercises last week were a decided success.

MISS EVA PERRY has gone to Marshall to spend the winter with her sister.

A MAN by the name of Allen was quite seriously hurt at Wolcott & Temple's planing mill the other day while using an adz, nearly cutting his foot off.

"BILLY" DAGLISH is home for a short visit. He is keeping books for the Forest City File Works in Cleveland and looks as if "Buckeye" air agreed with him.

THE other day Uncle John Schreder brought us 24 ears of corn which made just an even half bushel. He says he had four acres which yielded 630 bus. which is pretty good after all the rainy weather.

LAST winter Mrs. W. B. Rowland met with an accident which seemed probable to disfigure her limb for life. A few days since an operation was performed by Dr. Catlin, and she now has almost the natural use of her limb.

MR. G. P. SPARKS has lately put up a fine residence on his lot, corner of Maumee and Shawnee streets, and the residence is about ready to occupy. It is a splendid two story building with eight rooms, comprising large double parlors, dining-room, kitchen and pantry on first floor, and four nice bed rooms on second floor; and to put on the finishing touch he is now putting on every wall and ceiling ornamental paper decorations which are fully equal if not superior in show and durability to fresco work. The work is being done under the supervision of Mr. C. A. Keil, and surpasses anything ever before done in the village.

Adrian Times: We would suggest that the county farmers' club at their next meeting, discuss the matter of the cutting down of trees along the public highways. If adjacent owners have the right to do this, which we very much doubt, it is something which no lover of nature should do.—And if they have no right, it is simply a piece of vandalism that should be stopped. Complaint comes to us that some noble trees, along numerous highways, and not a few contiguous to the city, have been felled simply for the cord wood they contained. Let our farmer friends be heard from on this matter, and meanwhile let the "woodman spare that tree."

Adrian Record: The remains of the young man whose body was found in the woods, were found badly decomposed. It was impossible to admit them into the house and a shroud prepared for burial was unused, the body being interred in the garments that were upon it when found. The burial was at the county's expense. We learn that the unfortunate young man has been in the habit of turning over his spare earnings to his sick mother, who is unable to be about. With a mother's affection, Mrs. Brownell desired to have a funeral and Christian burial for her son, but the obsequies were prevented by certain relatives of the family into whose care the burial was committed. There were no ceremonials whatever beyond a prayer offered by a German woman present.

LECTURE COURSE.

At a meeting called by the stockholders of the Temperance Lecture Course, held Saturday evening, Nov. 5th, at the Council rooms, the meeting was called to order by electing to the chair P. S. McKinnon, Esq. Rev. H. Shepard was chosen secretary.

The following permanent officers were elected:

President—Rev. R. S. Pardington.
Vice Pres.—P. S. McKinnon.
Secretary—C. A. Slayton.
Treasurer—L. J. Dutton.
Executive Committee — Rev. H. Shepard, Jebiel Davidson, H. W. Stevens.

On motion the officers elected were added to this committee as ex-officio members.

Music Committee—J. S. Strong, Dr. Steinhoff, Dr. House.

Moved to add to this committee, Mrs. L. I. Bidwell, and Mrs. C. H. McConnell. Carried.

Finance Committee—A. W. Mills, with power to choose assistants.

Committee of Entertainment—P. S. McKinnon with power to choose assistants.

It was moved and carried that the price of season tickets be fixed at $1,50 for the course of ten lectures; and the price of single tickets be 25 cents.—The form of the season tickets to be a plain ticket with names of leading lecturers, and the numbers from one to ten on the margin.

As none but first class lecturers, and of national repute, are to be employed, the course promises a rich treat in store for the public. Most of the lectures will be on temperance, but will probably include some upon popular subjects also. A sufficient sum, it was understood, had already been pledged to guarantee against failure.

Moved and carried that a copy of these proceedings be submitted to the Tecumseh HERALD for publication.

BRYANT'S DAY.

The Anniversary of William Cullen Bryant's Birth Observed by the Schools.

The plan adopted by Prof. Fairfield of observing the birthday anniversary of some of the leading American authors, has worked admirably thus far. Last Thursday was Bryant's day. Public exercises were held in the High School and Grammar departments all of which were of an interesting and instructive character. As our reporter could not very well spread himself over these two departments at the same time, we resorted to the expedient of securing a special assistant in each department, and hence are able to give our readers a full report of the entire exercises.—Miss Florence Shepard furnished the notes of the High School program, and Miss Gertie Hause those for the Grammar grade.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The exercises at the High School were quite well attended in spite of the inclemency of the weather. The platform and blackboard had been decorated by a number of pupils and the effect was very tasty.

At the center of the black board behind the stage, were the words in old English, W. C. Bryant, Born Nov. 3, 1794, died June 12, 1878. At the left of this a beautiful cross trimmed with flowers had been drawn by Miss Fannie Prichard. At the right was a very pretty design in violets and geraniums by Miss Cora Jones. There were also written on this board the English and American contemporaries of Bryant, with quotations from his poems.

On the right side board were written the names of some of Bryant's prose writings, on the left were the names of some of his many poems. On the platform was an easel holding a fine oil painting of Bryant, executed and kindly furnished by Mr. Hopkins, while a beautiful floral piece from Mrs. Spaulding's green house decorated the table.

The exercises opened at 1:30 with "America," by the school. This was followed by an essay, The Life of Bryant, by Fred Hendershot; William Cullen Bryant, an essay by Louise Hialey; The Stream of Life, recitation by Maggie Clarkson; Waiting at the Gate, recitation by May Avery; Thanatopsis, recitation by Frank Hall; Transposition of Thanatopsis by May Farley; Transposition of The Prairies, by Fred Eccles. Then came a quartette by four of the students entitled, Moonlight on the Lake. Bryant as a Writer, essay by Harry Dunn; William Tell, recitation by Dora Keyser; The White Footed Deer, transposition by Jennie Nyland; The Hunter's Vision, recitation by Miss Barlow; the Death of the Flowers, transposition by Myra Reynolds; the Planting of the Apple Tree, recitation by Martin Palmer; review of the poem, To a Waterfowl, by Ada Waldron.

Quotations were then read from the board and the exercises closed by a quartette, Give me my Own Native Isle.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The scholars of the 7th and 8th grades met for the exercises in Miss Wimple's room. On the front board was a picture of Mr. Bryant, over which in large white letters Willie Baker and Bertie Waring had printed his name, and on either side the date of his birth and death. A branch of Autumn leaves drawn by Florence Raymond adorned one end of the board while a drawing of a swan by Walter Heck occupied nearly all of the side board.

Quite a company having assembled, the exercises opened at 1:30, P. M. with a song by the school entitled, River of Peace. This was followed by a biographical sketch of the life of Bryant, by Lillie Brown. Then followed an essay by Nora Lamb, discussing the superiority of Bryant in his literary career, and also his personal character at the fireside. Willie Babcock then recited the poem entitled, Robert of Lincoln, after which five members of Miss Carman's room gave quotations from the well known Song of Marion's Men. Meta Grandy gave a recitation on the Death of the Flowers, which was followed by another recitation by Ina Daglish, entitled The White Footed Deer; quotations from the Forest Hymn were given by five of Miss Wimple's pupils, after which Nellie Reynolds recited The African Chief. A description of the island of Key West, its inhabitants and surroundings was given in a select reading by Clarence Cotton, followed by quotations from Letters from a Traveler. Bertie Raymond recited Ode to a Waterfowl, after which Anna Powers read Bryant's well known poem entitled, An Evening Reverie; then followed further miscellaneous quotations, and Hattie Sherrard read a select reading, representing a Sioux village as described by a party delayed there a few days. "When will the Birds come back" was very musically asked by Anna and Carrie Powers and Maude Eccles; Lyster Dewey declaim upon the Death of Slavery, and four members of Miss Wimple's room gave quotations from Bryant's poem concerning the Death of Lincoln. Inez Laing in a recitation entitled, After the Tempest, gave a vivid description of a pleasant day following one of wind and rain. Walter Powers gave select reading entitled, Rizpa, which was followed by quotations from the poem, The Order of Nature; then followed a declamation by Samuel Boyce concerning The Battle Field, after which were more quotations. Anna Hialey recited about The Child and the Snow-white Flowers, and eight quotations were given by Miss Wimple's pupils. The poem entitled, Waiting by the Gate, was recited by Bessie Church, after which four members of Miss Carman's room gave quotations from The Crowded Street. Letters from St. Augustine and Savannah were given in the quotations from The Letters of a Traveler, and the exercises closed at 3 o'clock with the recitation by May Temple, of Bryant's celebrated poem, Thanatopsis.

ORDINANCE.

Be it ordained by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh.

SEC 1. That no person under the age of twenty-one (21) years, and not a bonafide traveler shall get upon or ride upon or be upon any railway car or rail way engine within the corporation limits of said village, without the leave or consent of the conductor or other person in charge thereof.

SEC 2. Any person violating this ordinance shall, on conviction thereof before any Justice of the Peace of the township of Tecumseh, pay a fine not exceeding five (5) dollars and costs of prosecution, or in default thereof be imprisoned in the common jail of Lenawee county, Michigan, for a period of ten (10) days, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 3. This Ordinance shall be published for three (3) successive weeks in the TECUMSEH HERALD and shall take effect on the first day of December, 1881.

Council then adjourned.

P. S. MCKINNON, Recorder.

As previously noted by us, Mr. Frank Silvers, late proprietor of the Silvers House, Clinton, and also of Silvers' Livery Barns of that place, has moved to Tecumseh and taken an interest in the Livery business owned by Ben Reynolds of this village, and these two gentlemen are now running the Railroad street stables under the firm name of Reynolds & Silvers. We took a look around the establishment yesterday, to see what had happened, and if any change had been made, and found that the firm are keeping eleven horses, thirteen single carriages, three double carriages and a sample wagon for renting purposes, besides the two noted horses, Banker Rothchilds and Cassius M. Clay, Jr. It is useless for us to speak of the merits of these two horses for they are too well known all over the country, and last week the firm added to their stock the Mill's colt at a cost of $750. Their stock is all in good order, and their Livery is certainly one of the most complete in Southern Michigan. It is their aim to not only keep a good livery, but deal in good horses, and improve the stock throughout this section of the country.

A Useful Plant-Bug--the Cochineal.

While the Cocci, or plant bugs, are in our country deservedly detested as a nuisance, destroying the beauty of many of our garden plants by their blighting presence; while in 1843, the Coccus of the orange trees proved so destructive in the Azores that the Island of Fayal, which annually exports 12,000 chests of fruit, lost its entire produce from this cause alone, two tropical members of the family, as if to make up for the misdeeds of their relations, furnish us—the one with a most splendid of all scarlet dyes, and the other with gum-lac, a substance of scarcely inferior value.

The gardener spares no trouble to protect his hot and greenhouse plants from the invasion of the Coccus hesperidum; but the Mexican haciendero purposely lays out his Nopal plantations that they may be preyed upon by the Coccus cacti, and rejoices when he sees the leaves of his prickly pear thickly strewn with this valuable parasite.

The female, which, from her form and habits, might not unaptly be called the tortoise of the insect world, is much larger than the winged male, and of a dark brown color, with two light spots on the back, covered with a white powder. She uses her little legs only during her first youth, but soon she sucks herself fast, and henceforward remains immovably attached to the spot she had chosen, while her mate continues to lead a wandering life. While thus fixed like an oyster, she swells or grows to such a size that she looks more like a seed or berry than an insect; and her legs, antennæ and proboscis, concealed by the expanding body, can scarcely be distinguished by the naked eye.

Great care is taken to kill the insects before the young escape from the eggs, as they have then the greatest weight, and are most impregnated with coloring matter. They are detached by a blunt knife or dipped in boiling water to kill them, and then dried in the sun, when they have the appearance of small, dry, shriveled berries, of a deep brown purple or mulberry color, with a white matter between the wrinkles. The collecting takes place three times a year in the plantations, where the insect, improved by human care, is nearly twice as large as the wild coccus, which in Mexico is gathered six times in the same period.

Although the collecting of the cochineal is exceedingly tedious—about 70,000 insects going to a single pound—yet, considering the high price of the article, its rearing would be very lucrative, if both the insect and the plant it feeds upon were not liable to the ravages of many diseases, and the attacks of numerous enemies.

The conquest of Mexico by Cortez, first made the Spaniards acquainted with cochineal. They soon learned to value it as one of the most important products of their new empire; and in order to secure its monopoly, prohibited, under pain of death, the exportation of the insect, and of the equally indigenous Nopal, or Cactus cochinellifer. In the year 1677, however, Thierry de Meronville, a Frenchman, made an effort to deprive them of the exclusive possession of the treasure they guarded with such jealous care. Under a thousand dangers, and by means of lavish bribery, he succeeded in transporting some of the plants, along with their costly parasite, to the French colony of San Domingo; but, unfortunately, his perseverance did not lead to any favorable results, and more than a century elapsed after this first ineffectual attempt before the rearing of cochineal extended beyond its original limits.

In the year 1827, M. Berthelot, director of the botanical garden at Orotava, introduced it into the Canary Islands, where it thrives admirably upon the Opuntia ficus indica; so that in 1838 the exportation amounted to 18,000 pounds, and has since then been continually increasing. Cochineal is now reared near Valencia, Cadiz and Malaga, and in Algeria; in various parts of the West Indies and the United States of Columbia; in Brazil; East Indies and Java; and though Mexico still continues to furnish it in the geatest abundance, yet in point of quality it is distanced by its youthful rival, Teneriffe.

Worthy of Praise.

As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truly a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Billiousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints, even where all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at

C. A. Wright & Co.

A Monster Time-Piece.

The large clock at the English House of Parliament is the largest one in the world. The four dials in this clock are twenty-two feet in diameter. Every half minute the minute hand moves nearly seven inches. The clock will go eight days and a half, and will only strike for seven and a half, thus indicating any neglect in winding it up. The winding up of the striking apparatus takes two hours. The pendulum is fifteen feet long; the wheels are cast iron; the hour-bell is eight feet high, and nine feet in diameter, weighing nearly fifteen tons, and the hammer alone weighs more than four hundred pounds. This clock strikes the quarter hours and by its striking the short hand reporters regulate their labors. At every strike a new reporter takes the place of the old one, while the first retires to write out the notes that he has taken during the previous fifteen minutes.

Man's Ingratitude.

This is an ungrateful world to say the least. A man will act like a lunatic when he has the Itching Piles, and declare that he knows he cannot live another day, yet he applies Swayne's Ointment, the intense itching is allayed at once, he gets cured, and goes down to the lodge without one whit of gratitude. When asked why he looks so cheerful, he dodges the question by an indifferent answer. Its just like a man though, is it not?

When a baby stuffs its toe into its mouth, it little realizes how hard it will be in later years to make both ends meet.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Roundout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

While "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Billious disorders, constipation of the bowels, and all the class of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y. The doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

The sheriff of Bay county and an assistant went up to West Branch to arrest one Johnson, an escaped prisoner. H. B. Fox, a prisoner incarcerated in the penitentiary on a charge of bigamy, was released by the order of the supreme court. It appears by the decision of this tribunal he was absolutely guiltless of the crime alleged. His sentence was for two years, one-half of which he had served. For the disgrace and great wrong done him it is said there is absolutely no remedy, but in justice he should have some remedy against the jury that convicted and the judge that sentenced him.—Jackson Patriot.

A dispatch from Berrien county says: "The prosecuting attorney of this county has intimated that he will institute no more prosecutions before justices of the peace for violations of the liquor law, but will lay all cases of this kind before a grand jury to be called at the next term of the circuit court. The present liquor law is so stringent in its provisions that it is almost impossible to effect a conviction in a justice court. The mildest penalty for a violation of the law is ten days imprisonment and a fine of $25. A jury drawn from the immediate locality of the dealer is naturally averse to inflicting this sentence upon one who is perhaps a friend or neighbor."

WASHINGTON NOTES.

ARRIVAL OF HATTON.

First Assistant Postmaster-General Hatton has arrived in town with his family. Owing to the absence of Mr. James he will commence his duties as acting postmaster-general.

THE NEW SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Judge Folger announced his intention of coming to Washington on Saturday next, and taking possession of his office on the 14th, Monday; meanwhile Secretary Windom is in charge.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

The president is expected to return to the city on Wednesday or Thursday of this week. Owing to the near approach of winter it is probable that he will give up his intention of going to the Soldiers' home, but will remain on Capitol hill until the white house is ready for occupation.

SOUTHERN TIMBER THIEVES.

For years people living around the government timbered reservations in the south have appropriated timber without fear of prosecution. Millions of dollars worth is estimated to have been stolen in this way. First Comptroller Lawrence of the treasury department, decided to-day that district-attorneys are entitled to extra compensation for prosecuting these timber-thieves. The result will probably be a vigorous attack on the thieves, an incentive having been furnished district-attorneys.

GARFIELD MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

The National Garfield Memorial hospital committee, of this city, have received the following:

MR. A. SOLOMONS—DEAR SIR: Your letter of Oct. 22, giving an account of the action of the memorial hospital committee, was duly received. I regard the project as a grand tribute to the memory of Gen. Garfield, and one which would be to him most gratifying. The high character of those engaged in it is the best assurance of its accomplishment in a most worthy manner. It will be my pleasure to contribute to the object. Very truly yours,

LUCRETIA R. GARFIELD.

THE PENSION BUREAU.

The annual report of the pension bureau shows that on the 30th of June, 1881, there were 268,830 pensioners, a net increase during the year of 19,028. The aggregate annual value of all pensions is $28,769,967. The annual disbursements of the office, however, largely exceed this sum. For instance, the total amount paid for pensions during the year (exclusive of certain arrears in claims allowed prior to Jan. 25, 1879) was $49,724,147, the difference being accounted for by arrears of pensions, or "accrued pensions," covering periods dating back to discharge in each case of soldiers still living, and soldiers' deaths in the claims of widows or minor children.

DISSATISFIED TELEGRAPH OPERATORS.

An open meeting of the telegraph operators was held Sunday in the same building occupied by the Western Union company. There were about fifty operators in attendance. The meeting was only a preliminary one, but authority was given to communicate with a national organization known to be in existence which numbers between 8,000 and 10,000, the city of Chicago alone having over 200 members. They claim there are many grievances to be complained of—Sunday labor without extra pay, the employment of government clerks receiving $1,800 to $2,000 a year as night operators, thus competing with and depriving the regular force of extra pay. These men have light work under the government, and it is considered rather unfair for the heads of departments to allow them to do this work.

TREASURER GILFILLAN'S REPORT.

The annual report of United States Treasurer Gilfillan, shows that during the last fiscal year the receipts of the government show an increase over 1880 from every source. The increase in receipts from customs was $11,657,611.42, from internal revenue, $11,225,011.59, from the sale of public lands, $1,185,556.57, from miscellaneous sources, $6,127,702.01. Total increase, $27,255,881.59, which, added to the net reduction of $6,930,079.19 in expenditures, makes an increase in surplus revenue of $34,185,751.78. The net revenues were $360,782,292.57; the net expenditures, $260,712,887.56; excess of receipts over payments, $100,069,404.98, of which $90,872,261.62 was expended in the redemption of the public debt. The balance in the treasury has increased $48,697,661.63, from $203,791,321.88 at the beginning, to $252,457,925.81 at the end of the year. The amount expended on account of interest and premium on the public debt ran down from $98,852,895.53 during the year 1880 to $82,569,980.96, a reduction of $14,982,905.57 during the year.

TORONTO'S HANDSOME MEMORIAL.

Testimonials of sympathy with the country on account of the loss which has sustained in the death of President Garfield, and with the widowed and orphaned children of the deceased president, continue to reach Washington. There was received at the state department, recently, an interesting and elegant memorial of this sort, from the mayor and other officers of the city of Toronto. The memorial is handsomely engrossed, and is embellished with a faithful portrait of Gen. Garfield, and with the shields of the American and British flags. The memorial is designed to express, in behalf of the municipal authorities of Toronto, to the people and government of the United States their abhorrence of the foul and cowardly crime which deprived the states of their president; to express their grief and sorrow at the loss which the nation has sustained; their sympathy because of the calamity which has befallen it; and, further, to tender to the bereaved widow and family of the deceased president a respectful expression of the deep sympathy in their great distress.

THE ASSASIN.

Judge Cox has not yet decided to extend the time for the suspension of Guiteau's sentence. It is really thought now that District Attorney Corkhill, of New York, will not decline to conduct the prosecution unless he should receive clear evidence of New York sentiment have overcome all nervousness and manifest as well a zeal of his fellow-prisoner.

Guiteau has written the president asking that since God has placed him in such a high position that he submits for the consent of the instrument used to place him there. The assassin also sent the following to-day:

TO JAMES GORDON BENNET—DEAR SIR: I desire to call your attention through my brother-in-law and attorney, George Scoville, to the enclosed account of a suit I have against the Herald. I ask you to make a liberal contribution for my defense, in view of the suffering the Herald caused me in 1874, and I have no doubt, considering your liberality and right-mindedness, but you will do it. As your reporter suggested, a $10,000 check or cash, if you don't wish your name to appear, will be very gratefully received. I have no doubt, had I proceeded with the case and employed competent counsel, it would have cost you twice that amount, but I didn't want to put the Herald down on me politically and, therefore, did not press the trial. I therefore, ask you to make a liberal contribution to my defense. I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully, your [illegible] CHARLES J. GUITEAU.

The claim referred to is part of the unsuccessful suit of Guiteau's for $20,000, the "Herald" having published in 1874 that Guiteau had defrauded New York parties of elections he had made for them.

THE SIGNAL SERVICE.

Gen. Hazen, chief signal officer, in his annual report says the past year has been distinguished by additional progress and by decided improvement. Referring to the weather forecasts made this year for the first time in the interest of cotton-growers, Gen. Hazen says: "Congress did not appropriate the amount carefully estimated as necessary to meet the expense of increased work, and I was unwillingly compelled to reduce the number of stations to 100 selected from 248 stations promised, which are so situated as to best cover the cotton-belt. I earnestly hope that congress will this year provide funds necessary for a great extension of this special feature of the signal service, which promises, with very small expenditure, such great advantages to the staple interests of the south."

Gen. Hazen notes the deductions made of weather conditions for the day succeeding that for which forecasts are made, and says if the result of these studies is sufficiently successful, indications will, in time, be issued for all districts for periods of more than one day. Gen. Hazen calls especial attention to the value of river reports, and says the opinion is again expressed that with proper study of river floods, and with stations properly placed, reporting at times of especial danger, it can be made almost impossible for a flood to follow a river's course without notice being given of its coming in advance to the localities threatened. Frost warnings now telegraphed to New Orleans for the benefit of the sugar interest will be extended for the benefit of the orange interests of Florida, and the fruit interest at other points.

CAPITAL NOTES.

The president has signed the full pardon papers for William S. Golsen, of the Chicago whisky ring.

Hon. Isaac N. Arnold was asked to act as counsel for Guiteau, but was compelled to decline on account of previous engagements.

The heads of the departments propose to ask for the restoration of the salaries paid their clerks and employes to the figures that prevailed before they were cut down in 1876.

Experts, from the testimony taken in the treasury investigation, seem to show that men were employed on the house and stables of Secretary Sherman and their wages charged to various funds to which they did not belong.

The latest witnesses summoned on behalf of Guiteau are his brother John W. Guiteau, of Boston; Rev. T. N. Tarbox, secretary of the American Educational society; Rev. Howard C. Dunham, of the American Peace society; and Rev. John L. Withrow, of the Park Street church, Boston.

With a view of securing a more stringent system of bank examination, congress will probably be asked to incorporate the panal provisions of the Scotch and English laws, making bank directors to be present at the examinations and make them criminally responsible for the securities they approve.

Advices from Japan report that a very serious controversy exists between the native and foreign trade merchants as to the method of hoisting the Japanese flag, which is one of the leading state prerogatives of the empire. The Japanese silk merchants have formed a guild called the Guildhall of Silk Wholesale Company, which has established rules and regulations for the sale of silk. These are very obnoxious to the foreign merchants, and they refuse to submit to them. A deadlock in the trade is the result, with a very bitter feeling between the two parties, which is spreading into a wider feud between the Japanese and the foreigners generally. A later dispatch says that hopes are entertained that some amicable compromise may be reached.

Gen. H. G. Wright, chief of the engineers of the United States army, has submitted his annual report to the secretary of war. During the past fiscal year work upon seacoast defenses has been limited, in accordance with the terms of the act of March 3, 1881, to their protection, preservation, and repair. He calls attention to the importance of early and reasonable expenditures on the seacoast defenses.

Mrs. Mary Martin, of Harrisburg, Pa., says: I suffered severely from a complication of female diseases; that sense of bearing-down seemed as if it would kill me; my habits were very irregular; nothing seemed to benefit me until I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. They acted like a charm, and now I enjoy perfect health.

A Correction.

EDITOR HERALD:—Thanks for your kindly supplementary expressions to the statement of the Detroit Evening News, copied in your last week's issue. The statement relative to my circumstances was exceedingly kind but not accurate. I do not own or expect to own the house I live in, hence I have no mortgage o'ershadowing my pocket or mind. Further permit me to state with deep gratitude that the temperance people of this state have done wonders for me and my family, whereof I am glad. I desire to tender my hearty thanks to East Tecumseh, Ridgeway and Clinton for recent tokens of regard.

Cordially Yours,
JOHN R. CLARK.

Our Superstitions.

WHAT OLD LADIES SAY ARE THE "SIGNS."

The following superstitions, handed down by tradition, are yet fervently believed in many parts of America:

White specks on the nails are luck.

Whoever reads epitaphs loses his memory.

To rock the cradle when empty is injurious to the child.

To eat while a bell is tolling for a funeral causes toothache.

The crowing of a hen indicates some approaching disaster.

When a mouse gnaws a hole, some misfortune may be apprehended.

He who has teeth wide assunder must seek his fortune in a distant land.

Whoever finds a four-leaf trefoil—shamrock—should wear it for good luck.

Beggar's bread should be given to children who are slow learning to speak.

If a child less than twelve months old be brought into a cellar he becomes fearful.

When children play soldiers on the roadside, it forebodes the approach of war.

A child grows proud if suffered to look into the mirror while less than twelve months old.

He who proposes moving into a new house must first send in bread and a new broom.

Whoever sneezes at an early hour either hears some news or receives some present the same day.

The first tooth cast by a child should be swallowed by the mother, to insure a new growth of teeth.

Buttoning the coat awry, or drawing on a stocking inside out, causes matters to go wrong during the day.

By bending the head to the hollow of the arm the initial letter of one's future spouse is repesented.

Women who sow flax seed should, during the process, tell some confounded lies, otherwise the yarn will never bleach white.

When women are stuffing beds, the men should not remain in the house, otherwise the feathers will come through the ticks.

When a person enters a room he should be obliged to sit down, if only for a moment, as he otherwise takes away the children's sleep with him.

The following are omens of death; A dog's scratching on the floor or howling in a peculiar manner, and owls hooting in the neighborhood of the house.

Domestic harmony must be preserved when washing day comes, in order to insure fine weather, which is indespensable, as that ceremony is generally performed out of doors.

It is Better to Be

Out of debt than in jail.

A lawyer than a "roustabout."

A Christian than a sinner.

Handsome than ungainly.

Ambitious than indifferent.

A good man than a bad one.

Poor but honest than rich and a thief.

Gay and lively than a sanctimonious bore and wet blanket.

Buried on the hill-top than in the bosom of the ocean.

A man than a woman. This is a self-evident proposition, and needs no demonstration.

Born rich than lucky, the saying to the contrary notwithstanning. All the chances are in favor of the former.

Blessed with a large family of children than to a rambling bachelor with no home ties.

Sober—absolutely, entirely, ridiculously sober—rather than "half seas over," even at a royal banquet or a bear-fight.

A superintendent of the sabbath school than a dweller in the tents of the ungodly. There is more good in it, if not so much fun.

Meek and lowly than vain and impeperious. Yet the girls take more stock in the latter kind of fish than in the former, strange as it may seem.

The fellow who asked for a lock of his girl's hair was informed that "It costs money, hair does."

A man is always wanting some one to tell him how handsome he looks. A woman will just stand before the glass and see for herself.

The dullest times are between seasons, when the girls have nothing to wear it is too cool for a summer rig, and too warm for a fall suit.

Statistics prove that women's teeth decay at an earlier age than men's, which conclusively proves that spruce gum is more injurious than tobacco.

Experience teaches many things, prominent among which, to a man, is that it is safer to run your chances with a balky mule than dictate to a woman on wash days.

A young lady who didn't admire her sister's custom of writing a letter and then cross writing it to illegibility, said she would prefer her epistles "without an overskirt." Sensible.

When the girl who has encouraged a young man for two years suddenly turns around and tells him she can never be anything more than a sister to him, he can for the first time see the freckles on her nose.

"Never leave what you undertake until you can reach your arms around it and clench your hands on the other side," says a recently published book for young men. Very good advice; but what if she screams?

"You may talk," said Jones "of pert young ladies whose walk is graceful, of the maiden who trips so lightly by, of the high-toned lady with her haughty carriage, but give me the girl with the wide-swinging gate."

"A new belt-clasp has been invented which has three compartments, in which the wearer may stow pins, needles and cotton." Cotton in a belt clasp? Well, perhaps the wearer may stow it there, but it would be a change that—that is, we don't know anything about it.

Kansas school teacher: "Where does our grain go to?" "Into the hopper." "What hopper?" Grasshopper," shouted a scholar, triumphantly.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

ADDISON.

Levant Brown returned to New York city some weeks since, where he hopes to build up a practice at law.

A slight covering of snow this Monday morning, probably put on by way of variety, as the storm supplies do not appear to be entirely exhausted yet.

Some of our highway officials are engaged in the mending of ways.—Doubtless an earlier move in this direction would be just as acceptable to the great superintendent.

Streams, ditches, wells, cisterns, cellars and men's desires are alike over supplied on the water question at this writing. We are about drawing up a petition for a "let-up." Will the HERALD boys sign?

CLINTON.

In the case of Henry D. Rahlmeyer vs. George Sherwood and two other professional law breakers, for assault and battery, which was tried Monday in Justice Brooks's court, the defendants were found guilty and fined one dollar each and costs of prosecution. When young men become so degraded and lost to shame as to assault and deliberately bruise an old and peaceable citizen it is high time they were taught a lesson. Their being drunk was no excuse for their beastly conduct.

Walter H. Smith has again opened to the public the old Union hotel and offers good accommodations to all who may stop at his house. It is not necessary to say that the hungry will be well fed from his table, for any one who has stopped there in years past knows that a good meal awaits them always.

MACON CENTER.

Heavy rain Friday night; those having corn on the Macon flats will have to husk standing, the water is so deep.

Despite the wet weather fall work is nearly closed in. Wheat looks yellow from too much rain, about one-third of the clover seed lying on the ground, buckwheat threshed in handling.

People will go about as far to see Slayton & Waring's new hay press as they would to see an elephant; in fact they resemble each other very much.

The only navigable highway is the ridge road.

W. Osgood is moving into his new upright.

E. Hand has just commenced building an upright to his dwelling.

G. V. Osgood is painting his barn.

W. H. Osborn and wife will set up housekeeping next week, having their new residence in Tecumseh about ready for occupancy. "Irve" is in a quandary.

Ida Ambrose is visiting her sister at Whitehall, whom she expects to return with her about christmas. Ella Vescelius is visiting friends at Whitehall, and contemplates staying all winter.

Thomas Stewart, brother of John and Samuel Stewart, whose whereabouts has been unknown for the past fifteen years, has put in an appearance and is now visiting friends here.

Dr. Wm. R. Smith, mayor of Sioux City, Iowa, has been calling on his old friends and acquaintances here during the past two weeks.

Uncle Samuel Foote has returned to New York from a short visit with the family of W. H. Osborn.

W. L. Stewart, our township superintendent commenced teaching the winter term in the Culbertson district this week Monday. Mrs. W. Martin will teach the winter term at Lake Ridge, (dist. No. 4.) The fall term in dist. No. 8 closed this week Tuesday.

Mrs. Alex. Patterson and Miss Aggie Patterson remain in a very critical condition.

A Public Duty.

We are not in the habit of puffing any sort of patent medicines in our columns, for the business of a newspaper is to let people know what is going on in the world, and not to lend aid to what may be an imposition. But we happen to know Dr. David Kennedy, of Roundout, N. Y., and can personally testify to the excellence of the medicine which the Doctor calls "Favorite Remedy." For diseases of the blood, kidneys, and bowels it has no equal. We would not be without it for five times the dollar that it costs.—Daily Times.

Col. A. Wood Merryweather, whom everybody in Scranton, Pa., knows, writes and says: "I had long suffered from a derangement of the bladder and kidneys; it had made my general health very poor. I was also troubled with severe indigestion; pills only gave me temporary relief, and I experienced great anxiety of mind, as well as physical distress. A friend recommended Brown's Iron Bitters. I have used it with most gratifying results, and just now my health was never better, and I feel that the cure is permanent.

Exhausted and enfeebled constitutions suffering from dyspepsia, nervousness and general weakness cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

WAY DOWN IN DIXIE.

EDITOR HERALD:—Seeing you devote so much space in your paper to correspondence from all parts of your own and adjoining counties, I come forward from "away down in Dixie's land" with my politest bow and tip my hat and solicit a hearing for this part of the moral vineyard.

I read with pleasure the articles of your various correspondents, and especially those of Pearlie. She has such a quaint way of coming at the subject matter in hand that the reader does not at first suspect what she is driving at, but she always hits the nail squarely on the head by the time she is through. Yes, I admire Pearlie, (her letters in your paper I mean.)—Never having seen her I can but judge her through the medium of her thoughts. No doubt were I to see her personally my admiration would be none the less.

The fact is every column of your paper possesses a peculiar interest to me. In perusing it I see many names familiar to me—names that recall times past when I went in and out among you—names of persons with whom I have passed many pleasant hours. In the obituaries I often notice the names of some who have passed over to the other shore, with whom I had the kindliest relations in the years that preceeded them to eternity.

But I did not start out to write you a lengthy article; if this meets with a favorable reception I will have something to say at some future time. Before closing I wish to notice a clipping I saw in your issue of the 3d inst; it is from the Adrian Times, and is in reference to the tarantula, centiped and jack-rabbit ears I sent you.—The editor of that paper is 'evidently' mistaken when he attributes the motive which prompted me to send you those articles to 'a deep, dark hatred.' I have seen a statement that there is in the United States an editor who has such elongated ears that he can sit on the floor of his sanctum and by flopping his ears brush the cobwebs off the ceiling. Perhaps the editor of the Adrian Times is the man. For fear he is, my advice to you is not to enter the jack-rabbit ears against his ears for the purpose of getting a premium on long ears, as I am well satisfied he would carry off the blue ribbon.

TEXAS.

Good Advice from a Leading Medical Professor.

The learned doctor says: "Keep some kind of a tonic medicine always in the house, and if any one feels unwell, make free use of it. But first be sure that it is both harmless as well as meritorious. Put no trust in alcoholic preparations; their use will lead to intemperance; neither be partial to any remedy that produces a severe cathartic effect, for prostration of the nervous system and digestive organs is sure to follow. The mildest and best medicine ever invented for strengthening every part of the body and restoring impaired or lost organic functions to their normal condition, and one which is having an unparalleled and rapidly increasing sale in the Eastern States, is Brown's Iron Bitters. Any druggist will procure it for you if you request him to do so, especially when he finds you cannot be persuaded to take any substitute. It does not contain alcohol, and is the only preparation of Iron that cures headache and does not blacken the teeth. It is a sure reviver, a true strengthener, and the very best medicine ever invented for permanently strengthening the pulmonary, urinary and digestive organs, and preventing consumption, kidney diseases and chronic dyspepsia, often curing these diseases when all other remedies have failed; for it is truly nature's best assistant.—Gazette.

What The News is to the dailies The Echo is to the weeklies, and it is winning by the same method, that of giving the greatest possible amount of news in the smallest possible space and at the least possible cost to the subscriber. The Echo gives more news and choice miscellany for less money than any other weekly circulated in Michigan. This is not a boast, but a fact. Let any one make the comparison.

THE AGRICULTURAL JOURNAL.

The last number of the Journal of the American Agricultural Association is at hand. It is a very valuable number, containing several elaborate articles and over two hundred and fifty pages. The Journal is the official publication of the American Agricultural Association. This organization was founded by a convention of farmers, agricultural journalists and scientists, and representative men from all sections of the country, at the Metropolitan Hotel, New York, December, 1879. The objects are the protection and advancement of agriculture in all its branches in all sections of the United States, and the interests of those connected therewith.

All in sympathy with its aims are eligible to membership, and are cordially invited to join the organization. Two dollars covers the registration fee and annual dues for 1881. All members are entitled to each number of the "Journal" free, to all publications of the society, to free admission to its exhibitions, and to all the benefits of the organization.

Prominent amongst the work of the association will be National Exhibitions of the products of the soil, Conventions for discussion, the dissemination of the best thought and experience on agriculture and kindred topics through the "Journal," and careful attention to all the needs of agriculturalists. Through the various standing committees other practical work will be done. Applications for membership may be made as follows, and addressed as below:

The Art of Conversation.

A VALUABLE LIST OF "DO NOTS."

Do not manifest impatience.

Do not engage in argument.

Do not interrupt another when speaking.

Do not find fault, though you may gently criticise.

Do not talk of your private, personal and family matters.

Do not appear to notice inaccuracies of speech in others.

Do not allow yourself to lose temper or speak excitedly.

Do not allude to the unfortunate peculiarities of any one present.

Do not always commence a conversation by allusion to the weather.

Do not, when narrating an incident, continually say "you see," "you know," etc.

Do not intrude professional or other topics that the company generally cannot take an interest in.

Do not talk loud. A firm, clear, distinct, yet withal gentle, musical voice has great power.

Do not be absent minded, requiring the speaker to repeat what has been said that you may understand.

Do not speak disrespectfully of personal appearance when any one present may have some defects.

Do not try to force yourself into the confidence of others. If they give their confidence, never betray it.

Do not use profanity, vulgar terms, slang phrases, words of double meaning, or language that will bring the blush to any one.

Do not intersperse your language with foreign words and high-sounding terms. It shows affectation, and will draw ridicule upon you.

Do not carry on a conversation with another in company about matters which the general company knows nothing of. It is almost as impolite as to whisper.

Do not allow yourself to speak ill of the absent one if it can be avoided; the day may come when some friend will be needed to defend you in your absence.

Do not speak with contempt and ridicule of the locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthfully praise and commend; thus make yourself agreeable.

Do not make a pretense of gentility, nor parade the fact that you are the descendent of any notable family. You must pass for just what you are, and must stand on your own merit.

Do not contradict. In making a correction say, "I beg your pardon, but I had an impression that it was so and so." Be careful in contradicting, as you may be wrong yourself.

Do not be unduly familiar; you will merit contempt if you are. Neither should you be dogmatic in your assertions, arrogating to yourself much consequence in your opinions.

Do not be lavish in your praise of various members of your own family when speaking to strangers; the person to whom you are speaking may know some faults that you do not.

Do not feel it incumbent upon yourself to carry your point in conversation. Should the person with whom you are conversing feel the same, your talk will lead into violent argument.

Do not allow yourself to use personal abuse when speaking to another, as in so doing you may make that person a life-long enemy. A few kind, courteous words might have made him a life-long friend.

Do not discuss politics or religion in general company. You probably will not convert your opponent, and he will not convert you. To discuss those topics is to arouse feeling without any good result.

Do not make a parade of being acquainted with distinguished or wealthy people, of having been to college, or of having visited foreign lands. All this is no evidence of real genuine worth on your own part.

Do not use the surname alone when speaking of your wife or husband to others. To say to another that "I told Jones," refering to your husband, sounds badly. Whereas to say "I told Mr. Jones," shows respect and good breeding.

Do not yield to bashfulness. Do not isolate yourself, sitting back in a corner, waiting for some one to come and talk with you. Step forward, and have something to say. Though you may not say very well, keep on. You will gain courage and improve. It is as much your duty to entertain others as theirs to amuse you.

Do not attempt to pry into the private affairs of others by asking what their profits are, what things cost, whether Melissa ever had a beau, and why Amarette never got married? All such questions are extremly impertinent, and are likely to meet with rebuke.

Do not whisper in company; do not engage in private conversation; do not speak a foreign language which the general company present may not understand, unless it is understood that the foreigner is unable to speak your own language.

Do not take it upon yourself to admonish comparative strangers on religious topics; the person to whom you speak may have decided convictions of his own in opposition to yours, and your overzeal may seem to them an impertinence.

Do not aspire to be a great story-teller; an inveterate teller of long stories becomes very tiresome. To tell one or two short, new, witty, stories, appropriate to the occasion, is about all one person should afflict on the company.

Do not indulge in satire; no doubt you are witty, and you could say a most cutting thing that would bring the laugh of the company down upon your opponent, but you must not allow it, unless to rebuke some impertinent fellow who can be suppressed in no other way.

Do not spend your time in talking scandal; you sink your own moral nature by so doing, and you are, perhaps, doing great injustice to those about whom you talk. You probably do not understand all the circumstances. Were they understood, you would doubtless be much more lenient.

Do not flatter; in so doing you embarrass those upon whom you bestow praise, as they may not wish to offend you by repelling it, and yet they realize that if they accept it they merit your contempt. You might, however, commend their work whenever it can truthfully be done, but do not bestow praise where it is not merited.

Advice to Husbands.

The world is full of "advice to wives," and even the cheap commodity of courtesy addressed "To married people" is mostly one-sided, and intended for the ears of the weaker sex only. We can scarcely pick up a paper without reading the oft-reiterated injunction to "always meet him with a smile" (whatever may be his his delinquencies;) to be "always neatly dressed" (whatever work on hand;) to "never complain to him" (whatever the weight of your cares,) and all the rest of it, which everybody knows so well. For the sake of a more evenly balanced state of things, let us administer a little of the same dose to the other side of the house, on the old principle that "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

Husbands should always appear before their wives in a neat and becoming attire. Remember that was one of your chief attractions during your courtship. A man is not at all beautiful en deshabille, and how can you expect to retain a woman's love if you suddenly drop all the blandishment that won it? Husbands, be neat. Never come to breakfast with hair looking like a "fig tree shaken by a mighty wind," or soiled collar or neck-tie all awry. Never lounge about of a late hour in the evening, in stocking feet, sans coat and vest, and with slouchy suspenders. Had she chanced to see you thus in courting days, it would have taken a vast amount of romance out of her, depend upon it. Suppose your circumstances in life are such that you must assist in doing the "morning chores," then steal to your room before she has seen you and change the working coat for the dressing gown, polish your boots and make yourself presentable, that no suggestion of the barn-yard may accompany you to the breakfast table. The look of fond regard that will surely greet you from behind the fragrant coffee pot will be sufficient reward.

Never wear a clouded or angry countenance in the presence of your wife. No matter what the cares and annoyances of the day have been, before her you should be all sunshine. Thus you will make her happy, and forget your own troubles. In her own sphere she has petty vexations to bear that would break the spirit of any man alive. Don't add the burden of yours, too.

If the children are noisy or peevish, quiet and amuse them with as much tact as possible, in order that you disturb not their mother, who, in the evening, should find rest and tranquility. Above all, allow no impertinent word to arise to your lips should your wife object to your spending money on such selfish gratification as expensive and choice cigars, while she is economizing in many little ways. Though you may think her in the wrong, you had better be ruled by her wishes, as thus you may avoid future unpleasantness.

If you wish to be the true companion of your wife, don't allow yourself to degenerate into a mere drudge and money-catcher. Keep your intellect refreshened by reading good books; read the things she reads and repeat to her the news, both political and general, that you have gleaned in the world outside her sphere.

Bear in mind that many overtaxed wives are mere bundles of nerves, so to speak, and subject to a thousand and one irritations that enter not into man's philosophy to comprehend; therefore write it in your heart and prove it in your daily conversation that "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger."—Burdette.

A Cat's Experience with Bees.

Charles Kaisey, who has the only hive of bees in town, says that when he first got his colony his old cat's curiosity was much excited in regard to the doings of the little insects, the like of which she had never before seen. At first she watched their comings and goings at a distance. She then flattened herself on the ground and crept along toward the hive, with tail horizontal and quivering. It was clearly evident that she thought the bees some new kind of game. Finally she took up a position at the entrance to the hive, and when a bee came in or started out, made a dab at it with her paws. This went on for a time without attracting the attention of the inhabitants of the hive. Presently, however, Old Tabby struck and crushed a bee on the edge of the opening to the hive. The smell of the crushed bee alarmed and enraged the whole colony. Bees by the score poured forth and darted into the air of the astonished cat. Tabby rolled herself in the grass, spitting, spluttering, biting, clawing, and squalling as cat never squalled before. She appeared a mere ball of fur and bees as she rolled and tumbled about. She was at length hauled away from the hive with a garden rake, at the cost of several stings to her rescuer. Even after she had been taken to a distant part of the grounds the bees stuck to Tabby's fur, and about once in two minutes she would utter an unearthly "yowl" and bounce a full yard into the air. On coming down she would try to scratch her ear, when a sting on the back would cause her to turn a succession of somersaults, and give vent to a running fire of squalls. Like the parrot that was left alone with the monkey, Old Tabby had a dreadful time. Two or three days after the adventure Tabby was caught by the owner, who took her by the neck and threw her down near the beehive. No sooner did she strike the ground than she gave a dreadful squall, and at a single bound reached the top of the fence, full six feet in height. There she clung for a moment, with a tail as big as a rolling pin, when, with another bound and squall, she was out of sight, and did not again put in an appearance for over a week.—Rippon (Wis.) Press.

A novel use for glass has been found and so far it answers well—viz., as ties for railway lines. Soon after Dela Beole introduced his method of toughening glass Mr. F. Siemens, of Dresden, commenced a series of researches which have culminated at present in the production of a very hard glass which, unlike the material produced by the Dela Beole method, does not fly into a million fragments when broken. The ties which have been tested on the North Metropolitan line, at Stratford, England, are three feet long and four inches wide, by six inches deep, the upper side being made to fit the rails. The glass sleepers are not so strong as those cut from the sound pine, but they are practically indestructible, and what is more, are cheap.

The Manufacture of Spools.

It may have occurred to some of our lady friends, while using the common sewing thread, that a vast number of spools are required annually by the manufacturers of that article, but it may not be generally known that the Province of Quebec furnishes its quota of spools to the English and Scotch thread manufacturers. Such, however, is the case, and while on a flying visit to the romantic village of Drummondville, we had the pleasure of visiting the spool factories there in operation.

Drummondville is situated on the St. Francis river, and the Northern Division of the Southeastern Railway passes through it. Several years ago the prevailing wood which grew in the vicinity was white birch, which does not, we believe, make first class firewood, but which appears to be the best for the manufacture of spools. This probably was the reason why Drummondville was selected as the place in which to locate these factories, and the farmers in the vicinity can always find a ready market for this kind of wood at about $2.50 to $3 per cord.

The wood, after being delivered to the factories, is first sawed into pieces about four feet long and from an inch to an inch and a half square, according to the the size of the spool it is destined to make. These pieces are put into a dry-house and thoroughly dried, from whence they are taken into the factory and given to the "roughers" who in an incredibly short space of time bore a hole in the center a couple of inches deep, turn about the same space round, and then cut off the length required for a spool.

The machines used for this purpose are revolving planers, in the center of which is a revolving gimlet or bit, and immediately to the right a small circular saw with a gauge set to the proper size for the spools. The "roughers" receive a cent and a half per gross for their work, and experienced men can turn out from 100 to 130 gross per day. The round blocks pass from them to the "finishers," who place them in machines which give them the shape of spools and make them quite smooth.

It is quite interesting here to notice the men at work. A man stands with his left hand upon a small lever, and with the right he places the blocks, one at a time, in the lathe, then draws the lever toward him for an instant, and the work is done; the lever is pushed back and the spool drops down into a box below, while the right hand is ready with another block. These blocks are handled at the rate of 25 or 30 per minute. The "finishers" also receive one cent and a half per gross, and they can each turn out from 100 to 130 gross per day.

The spools are thrown loosely into a large cylinder, which revolves slowly so that the spools are polished by the constant rubbing upon each other for some time. On being taken out of the cylinder they are placed in a hopper with an opening at the bottom through which they pass down a slide for inspection. Here the inspector sits and watches closely to see that no imperfect spools are allowed to pass, and a very small knot or scratch is sufficient to condemn them. The spools then pass into the hands of the packers, who handle them very lively. They are packed in large boxes made the proper size, so that the layers of spools exactly fill the box and no additional packing is needed.

These boys receive a quarter of a cent per gross for packing, and a smart boy who is accustomed to the work can pack about 200 gross per day. One proprietor ships from 12,000 to 15,000 gross (or over two million spools) per month to England, and another firm ships from 6,000 to 8,000 gross (or over one million spools) to Glasgow, Scotland.

Caught at His Own Game.

Years ago, into a wholesale grocery store in Boston walked a tall, muscular-looking man, evidently a fresh comer from some backwoods town in Maine or New Hampshire. Accosting the first person he met, who happened to be the merchant himself, he asked:

"You don't want to hire a man in your store, do you?

"Well," said the merchant, "I don't know; what can you do?"

"Do?" said the man, "I rather guess I can turn my hand to almost anything—what do you want done?"

"Well, if I was to hire a man, it would be one who could lift well; a strong, wiry fellow. One, for instance, who could shoulder a sack of coffee like that yonder, and carry it across the floor and never lay it down."

"There, now, Captain," said the countryman, "that's just me. I can lift anything I hitch to; you can't suit me better. What will you give a man that will suit you?"

"I'll tell you," said the merchant; "if you'll shoulder that sack of coffee and carry it across the store twice, and never lay it down, I will hire you for a year at $100 a month."

"Done," said the stranger, and by this time every clerk in the store had gathered around and waited to join in the laugh against the man, who, walking up to the sack, threw it across his shoulder with perfect ease, though extremely heavy, and walking with it twice across the floor, went quietly to a large hook which was fastened to the wall, and hanging it up, turned to the merchant and said:

"There, now, it may hang there till doomsday, I shall never take it down. What shall I go about now, mister? Just give plenty to do and $100 a month, and it's all right."

They broke into a laugh, and the merchant, discomfited, yet satisfied, kept his agreement, and to-day the green countryman is the senior partner in the firm, and is worth a million dollars.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifier it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

This Remedy, which has done such wonders, is put up in the LARGEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle. For Diabetes, enquire for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy.

Tobacco Slaves.

A writer in the Gentleman's Magazine, who ably defends the moderate use of tobacco, relates the following instances to show what a hold the habit may have upon persons: "A city man that I know gets half an hour for his luncheon or dinner in the middle of the day; but he manages to eat a few biscuit during office hours, and spends his half hour walking up and down one of the quays smoking. This man walks to the city every morning from his home the distance being three miles; he also walks home every evening; and he smokes incessantly during the walks each way. He dines at 6 o'clock, and then smokes without ceasing until bed-time. On Sunday he smokes all day, except during meals; he will never attend a place of worship, because it would curtail his smoking. He will never go into society with his wife, and, indeed, will not readily talk to her at home, as it disturbs his smoking. In all other respects this man is a good husband and father. Another acquaintance of mine, who is a highly intellectual and deeply read man, will tolerate nothing that may postpone his smoke. At dinner he is in a perpetual drive to get done, so as to begin his pipe; he wants no pudding, cheese, or dessert; taking these would involve loss of time, and put off the smoking period a few minutes longer. He likewise requires no tea or supper, protesting he is not hungry, and that he does not wish to be disturbed in his smoke. Another man that I know is in a government office, and when the usual public holidays occur, such as the queen's birthday, his treat is to lie in bed all day and smoke. This gentleman is married, and always smokes his last pipe in bed."

Memory in Old Persons.

The brain is the instrument of the mind. Every thought and feeling is dependent on certain changes that take place between it and the blood. Mental activity may be quickened or retarded, exalted or depressed, by the action of drugs upon the brain. Singular effects are produced by cerebral disease.

Age works permanent changes in the brain; it shrinks its bulk and hardens its substance. In consequence of this, there is a change of mental manifestations. The mind acts more slowly in old persons. It does not turn readily to new subjects, and is not capable of as protracted or as lofty efforts. The feelings, also, are much lessened in susceptibility.

But in the memory the most marked changes occur. Some persons who have been more than ordinarily gifted in this respect, in old age become peculiarly deficient in memory. With the aged, recent facts and events are not so readily taken up into the mental storehouse, and what is learned is sooner forgotten.

At the same time the past stands out in vivid contrast with the present. Early habits return again. For instance, the pronunciation or the spelling of youth often reappears, to the surprise of friends. Sins, early repented of and forsaken, obtrude themselves painfully on the memory.

From this we see how important it is that the associations and habits of youth are such as shall give only pleasure in old age.

If one would not sink into imbecility when the brain begins to shrink, let him cultivate all of his powers right along through life.

The aged should take special pains to keep up their mental activity.

A Vexed Clergyman.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and indeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial bottles given away at

C. A. Wright & Co's.

Influence of Stimulants.

Dr. Beck, of Leipsic, writes as follows on the moral effect of different articles of food and drink: "The nervousness and peevishness of our times are chiefly attributable to tea and coffee: the digestive organs of confirmed coffee-drinkers are in a state of chronic derangement; which reacts on the brain, producing fretful and lachrymose moods. Fine ladies addicted to strong coffee have a characteristic temper, which I might describe as a mania for acting the persecuted saint. Chocolate is neutral in its psychic effects, and is really the most harmless of our fashionable drinks. The snappish, petulant humor of the Chinese can certainly be ascribed to their immoderate fondness for tea. Beer is vitalizing, wine impassions, whisky incrates, but eventually unmans. Alcoholic drinks, combined with a flesh and diet, totally subjugate the moral man, unless their influence be counteracted by violent exercise.

Living Witnesses.

The hundreds of hearty, and healthy looking men, women and children, that have been rescued from beds of pain, sickness and well nigh death by Parker's Ginger Tonic are the best evidence in the world of its sterling merit and worth. You will find such in almost every community.

A machine for plastering walls has been invented. It consists of a receptacle for the mortar, the segment of a cylinder in form. It is provided with a hinged leaf or press plate that moves rapidly against the morter, and as the receptacle is moved upward against the wall the plaster presses out through a narrow-gauged opening at the bottom.

CHRISTIAN NAMES.—The custom of bearing two Christian names is of recent origin. An author who has made research states that, down to the reign of Queen Anne, he was unable to discover any person bearing more than one Christian name. William I., who was a Dutchman, was the first King of England who bore two Christian names.

Chas. Fayre Hinkle, Jersey City Heights, N. J., reports that his son, a lad of twelve years, was completely cured of a terrible case of Eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. From his head to his feet was one mass of scabs.

—In Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment we furnish you a large bottle for 50 cents.

They All Do It.

There has never been a president of the United States that did not use wine. Washington always had it on his table; John Adams was no alchorite; Jefferson learned to like light wines when he was in France, and had "two hundred bottels of champagne" from the Spanish hidalgo when he was president; Madison and Monroe were Virginians, and though moderate, their habits did not ignore the pleasures of the table; John Quincy Adams was a sufficient judge of wine to quarrel with a southern man on the difference between tokay and sherry; Gen. Jackson was a better judge of whisky toddy than of wine; John Tyler liked his applejack; James K. Polk liked tobacco and old rye better than champagne; president Taylor was temperate but not abstemious; Millard Filmore was very careful in his libations, but took Madeira; Franklin Pierce was very social; equally so James Buchannan; Abraham Lincoln was no teetotaler, but very temperate; Andrew Johnson was a generous drinker; president Grant, a judge of horses, wine and cigars; while R. B. Hayes, the last time I saw him in Philadelphia, joined me in a glass of champagne.

Man's Ingratitude.

This is an ungrateful world to say the least. A man will act like a lunatic when he has the Itching Piles, and declare that he knows he cannot live another day, yet he applies Swayne's Ointment, the intense itching is allayed at once, he gets cured, and goes down to the lodge without one whit of gratitude. When asked why he looks so cheerful, he dodges the question by an indifferent answer. Its just like a man though, is it not?

A Mother's Influence.

It is hard for a young mother, who has not yet overcome the wayward tendencies of her own youthful nature, to realize the influence she exerts over her little ones. She is constantly surrounded by critical imitators who copy her morals and manners. As the mother is, so are her sons and daughters. If a family are blessed with an intelligent mother, who is dainty and refined in her manner, and does not consider it necessary to be one woman in the drawing-room and an entirely different person in every-day life, but who is a true mother and always a tender, charming woman, you will invariably see her habits of speech and perfect manners repeated in her children.

Great, rough men and noisy, busy boys will always tone down their voices, and step lightly, and try to be more mannerly when she stops to give them a kind word or a pleasant smile; for a true mother will never fail to do all the pleasant things that she can that will in any way lift up and cheer those whose lives are shaded with care and toil. The mother of to-day rules the world of to-morrow.

HOW TO KEEP BUTTER.—The essentials in keeping butter in summer consists in making it properly, having a cool place to keep it, and excluding it from the air. No butter can be safely packed in warm weather which is not perfectly made, nor can it then be kept if exposed to the air. Dairy rooms cooled with a cheap refrigerator are coming into use now among butter-makers, both for setting milk and keeping butter, and with ice and salt secure a low temperature at small cost. The best packages for keeping butter a long time in warm weather are made of tin, and wool-lined. When filled, the cover is soldered on and made air-tight. —Cor. New York Tribune.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

A Lyons paper announces the discovery of a method of communicating to the fibers of flax the appearance, the luster, and the durability of silk. The flax, after undergoing several chemical processes, is steeped in a bath of dissolved silk waste, and emerges therefrom in a condition which renders it indistinguishable, save by analysis, from silk itself. The inventor resides in Paris, and has, it is said, offered his discovery to certain manufacturers of Lyons for a lump sum of £120,000, a sum which, it is further stated, has already been subscribed by a combination of fourteen firms of the place.

Catarrhal Poison.

Catarrh poisons the mucous membrane, poisons the blood and vital fluids poisons the lungs, liver and kidneys. From a simple cold to a rotting, sloughing and death of the senses of smell, taste and hearing, Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh is supreme. Complete treatment $1.

The great railroad time-killer is the game of euchre. This is an amusement which four otherwise respectable and considerate citizens see which can yell the loudest and do the most to disturb a car full of passengers. The game consists in handing around a certain number of pieces of pasteboard with pictures on, and then slapping down your fists, stamping your feet, and howling in a discordant chorus every time a trick is taken. Quite appropriately is a "Jack" the best card in the game.

A Physician of Great Prominence

in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

TO KEEP TOMATOES WHOLE FOR WINTER.—Pare nice, ripe tomatoes without scalding; have a wide-mouthed jar, and put enough fruit to fill it in a steamer, and steam them until about milk warm; then place them smugly in the jar; cover with boiling water, and seal up air-tight. They will keep well, and are nice.

A Little Paper Maker.

A wasp uses a kind of blue-gray paper in making her house, and she makes the paper herself. No one taught her; she does not need to learn her trade, or even to see another do it. She carries her tools with her all the time, and when she finds a piece of soft wood she can set to work if she pleases. She cuts off bits of wood about the tenth part of an inch long, and as fine as hair. These she lays into a little bundle, and when she has enough, she works it up with her feet into a soft ball. Then, with the teeth and feet, she spreads this ball out into thin leaves, as thin as the finest paper. But this is not strong, so she puts on layer after layer until there are fifteen or sixteen sheets all in one. Now it is strong enough to use in building the wasp's house, and will last a long time.

Engravings.

Engravers are not sufficiently appreciated; for a fine engraving is, perhaps, more than any other work of fine art, a triumph. What the painter achieves by the use of a thousand tints, and the sculptor or architect by projecting his thought with the substantial attribute of form, the engraver presents with equal effect upon the plain surface of the paper with printer's ink alone. By the alchemy of his art, the black line of the engraver is transmuted to the rosy blush on beauty's cheek, and the soft beaming of her eye. At the touch of his magic wand the almost inspired plate bursts into vistas, long lines stretch away and melt in the distance. Face or figure, landscape or sea-view, city, palace, or cathedral, seems solid as the great globe itself, nor can the reason persuade the sight that the scene before it is only a white plane lined and dotted with black.

Vulgar Language.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved when I was a child never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother without offending her."

His rule and example are worthy of imitation. Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions that are never heard in respectable circles. The utmost care on the part of the parents will scarcely prevent it. Of course, we cannot think of girls being exposed to the peril. We cannot imagine a girl using words she would not give utterance to before her father or mother. Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart;" the "next thing to swearing, and yet, not so wicked." But it is a habit which leads to profanity, and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

THE BEST REMEDY
FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. For Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and the ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it is attended stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the virtues of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

PILES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and THROAT, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, PAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE and KIDNEYS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all diseases attendant with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates every portion of the human frame; every tissue, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its virtues is such that we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures in our possession. We have from all parts of the country simply ask those readers of this notice who have never used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If humanity would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle. Price 25 cents and 40 cents per bottle. A PROCLAMATION.

It has long been the pious custom of our people, with the closing of the year, to look back upon the blessings brought to them in the changing course of seasons, and to return solemn thanks to the All-Giving source from whom they flow, and although at this period, when the falling leaf admonishes us that the time of our sacred duty is at hand, our nation still lies in the shadow of its great bereavement, and the mourning which has filled our hearts still finds sorrowful expression toward the God before whom we but lately bowed in grief and supplication; yet the countless benefits which have showered upon us during the past twelve months call for our fervent gratitude and make it fitting that we should rejoice with thankfulness that the Lord in His infinite mercy has most signally favored our country and our people. Peace without and prosperity within have been vouchsafed to us. No pestilence has visited our shores. The abundant privileges of freedom which our fathers left us in their wisdom are still our increasing heritage, and if in parts of our vast domain some affliction has visited our brethren in their forest homes, yet even this calamity has been tempered, and in a manner sanctified, by the generous compassion for the sufferers which has been called forth throughout our land.

For all those things it is meet that the voice of the nation should go up to God in devout homage.

Wherefore I, Chester A. Arthur, president of the United States do commend that all the people observe Thursday, the 24th day of November instant, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, by ceasing, so far as may be, from their secular labors, and meeting in their several places of worship, there to join in ascribing honor and praise to Almighty God, whose goodness has been so manifest in our history and in our lives, and offering earnest prayers that His bounties may continue to us and to our children.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 4th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and sixth.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

By the President:
JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

THE TARIFF AND FARMERS.

It is astonishing that farmers should under any circumstances favor a protective tariff. They are compelled to pay tribute to a few manufacturing monopolists without securing any returns whatever themselves. Even when a tariff is placed upon an article which the farmer produces, it is generally manipulated in such a manner as to yield him no advantage.—Witness the tariff on wool. Some of the best judges claim that the ultimate effect of this duty is to lessen rather than increase the price by checking the foreign demand for American wools, and thus reducing the aggregate amount sold. If there was a lively foreign demand it would so stimulate the market as to raise the price. Prof. Perry, in the last number of the Agricultural Journal has a few very pertinent words on this subject:

That protective duties are a great burden to all those who are called upon to pay the prices resulting from them, is proved in no way more conclusively than by the reluctance of protectionists themselves to pay these prices. Your protectionist thinks that it is a very good thing for the farmers, and for the people generally, to have to pay protective prices, but he never likes to pay them himself.—He has no scruple in evading the payment of them, if he can do so by any possibility. He denies by his own actions, which speaks louder than words, what he is constantly affirming in words, namely, that protection is a good thing. For example, there is in Hampshire County, Massachusetts, a button factory, whose founders and promoters have always been loud protectionists, proclaiming that they could not carry on their industry nor build up their village, unless the people were compelled by law to pay protective prices. Well; then they should be willing to pay protective prices themselves, for the general good. But alas! they have not been willing.—Their practical opinion of such prices has been precisely the same as the opinion of the detested free traders.—Their raw material is foreign cloth of a high quality. It is subject to a protective duty under the Wool and Woollens tariff of 1867. Instead of paying that duty, and thus proving themselves sincere in their boasted protectionism, they evade it. They have always evaded it. The cloth is punched, or slit, or cut, in such a way as not to harm it a penny for covering buttons, but so as to enable them to pretend at the custom-house that it is damaged cloth, and so may come in without paying the regular duty!—They have had many a controversy with the Government over this point, but somehow or other they have gotten the better of the Government, and continue to avoid the blessed duty.—Here is testimony to the benefits of free trade that is worth having. Not out of their mouths, but out of their hearts and their actions, do we judge them. It seems, that the sauce for the agricultural goose is not good for the protectionist gander. This is not an isolated instance, and these Gallileans are not sinners above all the Gallileans, because they have done such things. The woolen manufacturers previous to 1867, kept persuading the wool-growers not to ask for any protective duty on foreign wools. The former did not wish to pay artificial prices to the latter. But these got their backs up at last, and demanded protection, and got it in 1867, and both classes have been in the slough together for the most part ever since.

SPECULATION.

The Extent to which it is Carried and the Drain the Excitement Brings Upon the System.

A Few Words of Warning and Timely Suggestions to American Business Men.

When Cyrus W. Field returned from his tour around the world he was perfectly amazed at the extent to which stock speculation had run, and the thousand and one "wild cat" schemes which were largely patronized by the too credulous public, even when there was not the remotest probability that they would ever come to a successful completion. He stepped into Delmonico's to dine, and was pained to see the crowds which huddled around the stock indicator, unable even to eat a meal in peace, so disquieted were they under the operations of the fever of speculation. Mr. Field says he bought certain stock for an investment of 1.06 just before he sailed. On his return, finding it quoted at the fancy price of 1.64 he sold. He could see no reason why such an advance should have been made, and fearing a crash in the market he disposed of his stock as soon as possible. This wild speculative mania prevails in London and Paris and Berlin, and in his opinion when the crash comes it will involve the entire commercial world. Conservative men and the press see these things and warn the people, but many will not be stopped so long as they have a penny to spare or can borrow, or until ruin comes irretrievably and awfully.

The supreme effort of our people should be to cultivate moderation.—Two things have united to make the struggle for existence in this country the most exacting and exciting found in the world. 1st. The ease with which successful men appear to amass fortunes. 2d. The impression their success makes on those who immigrate hither. As soon as the intelligent foreigner arrives on our shores, he becomes seized with the desire, not only of a comfortable subsistence, but of a fortune, and every ambition and energy of his being is directed to this one purpose. This explains why our business men give so little time to physical recreation, why they pay so little heed to the essential details of politics—their business and their families exhaust their energies, and they have time, strength and inclination for nothing else, except when an imminent physical or political danger stares them in the very face and eyes. The result of all this is, that twenty years is a limit of a man's business activity and success. It takes him ordinarily ten years to accumulate his first thousand dollars surplus, and in the remaining ten years, if he be prudent and energetic, he may amass more or less of a fortune. But in the majority of cases, when he has gotten his fortune, he has ruined his health, and finds no comfort whatever in that which he had fondly hoped would complete the sum of human happiness for him.

The exhaustion which follows the inordinate pursuit of wealth, we are told by the very best of authorities, proceeds from impaired digestive organs. The brain has drawn upon them for all they were worth so long that they suddenly give way and the whole system falls into a miserable collapse. The organs so susceptible to nervous excitement are the kidneys and liver. The offices of these organs are to discharge poisons which are collected from all parts of the body by the veins, the kidneys eliminating them in liquid form, and the liver transforming part of them by a chemical process into digestive fluids, and utilizing the remainder as a purgative. Both these organs demand a large share of nervous force. If this force is all exhausted by the brain, they become feeble, colds settle in them, congestion follows, the poison cannot get out of the blood, digestion is impaired, the bowels become inactive because the liver fails to furnish the natural cathartic, the bladder becomes fearfully inflamed, dropsy comes on; strange disorders visit the head, heart, lungs, and ere the person is aware of it he is a victim of chronic kidney and liver disease, and a candidate for death by Bright's disease of the kidneys.

And this is the end of all commercial life which is purchased at the sacrifice of every other social, political and physical consideration! "Oh," exclaims the man of active life, who does not feel as well as he used to, "I haven't any Bright's disease! I'm only used up from so much work, worry and excitement!" Precisely! You do not feel as well as formerly. Your head aches oftener and your eyesight suddenly proves faulty. The verdict of a celebrated authority on the subject is: "These symptoms are a sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have had a recent and mysterious attack of asthma,—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have had a hard cold on your lungs which you have been unable to dislodge—you have spit up bloody mucus.—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have felt a new and singular sensation of heaviness in the region of the heart—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have felt great depression of spirits, without any known cause—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." You have found it suddenly impossible to eat whatever and whenever you wish. Your stomach has been very lame, your appetite very feeble, your bowels irregular—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." A mysterious weariness comes upon you; your muscular system seems utterly helpless—"A sure precursor of Bright's disease." Suppose you "have no pains in the region of the kidneys or liver" this is no indication that you have not Bright's disease. Suppose you "have no albumen or caste," that is no indication that your kidneys are all right,—that you have not Bright's disease.

This of course, puts an entirely different phase on one of the most vital questions of the day. We have made a special inquiry and we find high medical authority for these additional conclusions.

First—That more adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption.—[Thompson.]

Second—That deaths from such diseases are increasing at the rate of 250 per cent. a decade.—[Edwards.]

Third—That they have no symptoms of their own and may long exist without the knowledge of patient or practitioner, as no pain will be felt in them or their vicinity.—[Roberts.]

Fourth—That in the fatal cases—and most cases have hitherto been fatal—the symptoms of diseased kidneys will first appear in extremely different organs of the body as stated above.—[Thompson.]

Fifth—That only when the disease has reached its final stages, will the usual symptoms of albumen and casts appear in the water, and great pain will rack the diseased organs.—[Thompson.]

Sixth—That Bright's disease which usually has three stages of development—is a universal disease in this country.—[Roberts and Edwards.]

Seventh—That there is but one remedial agent in the world which has ever cured a pronounced case of Bright's disease and has thus inspired the confidence of the physician, the patient and the public, namely: Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.—[Craig.]

You may search medical works in vain to find any formula for the cure of Bright's disease in any one of its three stages. With some patients the disease runs slowly and for years. With others it comes as a thief in the night, but were it not for the power of the remedy we have mentioned, in whatever form it comes, or however long it afflicts, the human race would be absolutely and pitably a victim of its terrible fangs.

This is a most serious question for any professional man or man of business. It confronts him with the fact that unless care is taken, the vital forces of the body will degenerate and pass from the system before he be aware. It warns him to guard carefully even slight symptoms and check the great evil before it has an opportunity to grow. The remedy above mentioned is the extract of pure tropical plants which acts both as a food and restorative to the wasted kidneys and liver. It is used more extensively to-day than any other known remedy, and thousands of people in all parts of the land owe their present health and happiness to its power. Upon a subject so vital none can afford to hesitate, and especially men of business who realize the evils of delay.

Cuticura

Scrofulous, Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as Iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr. , in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies said that through divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin was as smooth and natural as ever.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pocklington, of Ridgeway, desire to return thanks to the many friends for their kindness in the last sickness of Smith Pocklington.

ANOTHER trespass suit has been commenced on the Tom Boyd dam controversy. The case came up before Justice Keyes, of Clinton, last Monday, and it was taken directly to the Circuit Court on a plea of title.

Adrian Press: Hon. Brackley Shaw, of Dover, Wednesday, accompanied by his wife, started for the city in a wagon, containing some articles for the market. The wagon dropped into one of those mammoth mud holes created by the rain and upset, the wagon box turning squarely over the occupants, imprisoning them in a mud hole. We have not heard what kind of language the state senator made use of on the occasion; but if he was profane, he was excusable from a worldly standpoint. Assistance arrived and the unlucky couple were extricated, but in such mud plastered order as to require a return home and a new start. If Mr. Shaw was not known to be a pronounced temperance man his case would call for inquiry, as he had one or two jugs with him.

WE regret to learn the death of Deacon Mahlon Sherd at the home of his son, at Fenwich, Mich., last Tuesday. His remains will be brought here for burial.

P. V. WOODARD has taken a position in Gainsley & Co's Store. "Put" is an experienced hand in the Dry Goods business and will be a great help to Gainsley's business.

There is a great demand for houses in Adrian, and Ralph Jewell has begun the construction of six neat cottages on Erie street for the accommodation of in-pouring laborers.

QUICK work. One of our business men sustained a loss by fire on Thursday, Nov. 10th. He was insured in the Home of N. Y. Friday noon A. A. Kennedy, the agent, was notified of the loss, reported the same to the company and on the following Monday the loss was paid in full.

ARE the merchants of Tecumseh aware that the nuisance west of the village, occasioned by Tom. Boyd's dam, is driving many Franklin and Cambridge people to Adrian to do their trading? Tom Boyd's dam may be a good dam for Tom Boyd, but it is a very poor dam for the business of Tecumseh.

A COPY of the Brooklyn Eagle received from Mr. Warren C. Dewey shows that the New York Relief Committee is still at work for the Michigan sufferers. $2,612 were received at the Eagle office during the last week in October. Mr. Dewey has been doing some valuable work in stirring this matter up and keeping it before the people.

Adrian Press: Ladd & Clement, of this city, are drying two tons of squashes per day and have thus far made use of 130 tons of winter squashes. Twelve acres of squashes have been shipped from Clinton. Not the acres, but the squashes. A portion of these came from the farm of David Woodward.—Woodward is no squash-head however on that account.

"Bury me near the old home," is the latest song and chorus by Will L. Thompson. Since the death of President Garfield the sentiment expressed in this beautiful song has become universal. The melody is very pretty, and already the piece has become a great favorite. We advise all lovers of popular music to send 35 cents to the publishers and receive a copy by return mail. Published by W. L. Thompson & Co., East Liverpool, O.

REV. W. H. BROWN of Morgan Park, Ill., the distinguished Evangelist, who labored so successfully at Adrian last spring, is expected to occupy the Baptist pulpit in this village next Sunday, both morning and evening.

MR. A. A. KENNEDY and some more good people took hold and gave Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Welling and family a lift of $107.06 in cash last week. Mr. W. has been a hard working man and deserves all the aid we can give him.

MILLARD & BEAN, attorneys of Adrian, dissolved partnership a few days ago and two new firms have resulted. Mr. Bean has united his fortunes with W. A. Underwood and Mr. Millard has joined the firm of Weaver & Weaver.

THE musical entertainment given under the auspices of the Baptist choir at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Fisher was really a grand affair. The spacious parlors brilliantly lighted, the excellent music and literary selections so ably rendered, and the large gathering of delighted guests made the occasion one long to be remembered.

FRANK DUMAN has been head over heels in the poultry business during the past few days. Turkeys, chickens, ducks and geese have been slaughtered and picked at the rate of 800 a day. Last Monday he shipped 27,000 pounds by freight and 5,000 pounds more go by express to-day. The entire lot will arrive in New York on or before Monday next, just in time for the thanksgiving trade.

Hillsdale Standard: H. P. Hitchcock, of Adams, from fifteen trees in his orchard gathered 80 barrels of choice marketable apples, and 75 bushels of cider apples. They were Newtown pippins. This is the best yield of apples we have heard of this year, which is called the off year for apples. Mr. H. has one of the best orchards in the county, and is a very successful fruit grower.

THE habit which has become chronic among the young boys of the village of jumping on and off railroad trains while running through the corporation has become such an unmitigated nuisance that the council have passed an ordinance prohibiting it.—The ordinance will take effect the first day of December next. We advise the boys to cut it out and paste it in their hats, for the first youngster who violates it will be made an example of within fifteen minutes.

THE State relief committee estimate that it will require a quarter million more than has been donated to carry the fire sufferers through the winter. The merchants and other dealers in the burnt district who lost their goods or distributed them among the more destitute, complain that the committee buy their supplies in prosperous cities, while the expenditure of cash subscriptions with local dealers would prove a great boon to many who are nearly ruined in business and credit.

Hudson Post: Applegate, of the Adrian Times, and Schermerhorn, of the Hudson Gazette, are concerned as to who shall be postmaster of Hudson, and appear anxious that we should be a candidate. We confess to having occasionally cast a wistful glance in that direction, but really have no time to work up a "boom" of that kind, but should our esteemed contemporaries take the matter in hand and secure the place for us, we will ever hold them in grateful remembrance, etc.

Clinton News: Some badly disposed persons, boys probably, thought it would be a very cunning thing to change the robes and whips in the buggies standing at the churches Sunday night. Many who had good whips or robes found old ones in their places. Boys, this kind of joking might be made rather expensive fun, if you should happen to get caught at it. It has been suggested that those who were the victims of this trick bring their whips, etc., to some common place, say Randall & Co's store, Saturday night and exchange for their own.

THE FARMERS' CLUB.

The farmers' social club met at J. Fisher's Nov. 4th. There was a good attendance. After music, select reading by Mrs. Fisher and an essay by Mrs. Rector, the subject of securing the corn crop and sowing seed corn was taken up.

John Schreder opened the discussion. He thought the corn crop one of great importance, would begin with deep planting, using the planter, cultivating well until ripe. Would cut early and husk as soon as possible, had come to the conclusion the best economy was to hire it cut rather than to leave it late. He would select his seed when husking, tie it together and hang it up.

The secretary here read a communication from Cyrus Wells.

Mr. Griswold regards it as very important that good seed should be selected as he was convinced that poor seed would grow as shown by Mr. Wells. He has been in the habit of selecting when drawing in, then hanging up to dry.

Mr. Horton saves when husking. Thinks he can select the best ears at that time, would not advise selecting on the hill. After husking hangs it by the husks in the house chamber.

Mr. J. Schreder thought they had lost sight of securing the corn. This has been a very bad season for securing on account of the frequent rains. He would cut high, set it evenly around and tie tight, as it would then stand the weather well, husk early and crib, had been in the habit of selecting seed from the crib but would not risk it this year, would select when husking and hang up to dry.

Mr. F. Rector would agree with Mr. Schreder in cutting high and tying tight. He would husk early and draw as soon as possible, would select seed when husking. Had been in the habit of spreading on boards in the granery at the south window, but this year should tie with wool twine and hang up.

Mr. R. Gillespie selected his seed from the crib when feeding out, as he could not take time at any other time, and had been very successful. When a quantity is selected he shells it and spreads upon the chamber floor. The question was asked if he shells the whole ear for seed or discarded the ends. He discards the ends.

Mr. Kehoe came to learn, as this section was noted for good corn. He would agree with the other gentlemen in cutting early, thought it would do to cut as early as glazed, would be very careful about setting up as many set the stalks too much on one side.—Another fault was putting in too large shocks, thought 64 hills enough for a shock, would cut as high as possible and keep the ears from the ground, but would not husk as early as some; thinks it better to leave it until the husks loosen and then expect the men to do a day's work in ten hours and no fooling. He had saved seed in many ways but had been more successful in only two. 1st, selected when drawing in and put in the chamber. 2d, selected just before cutting, pulling the ears off with the husks on, when had enough, drew them in and stripped all the husks but two, then braided them together and hung in a dry place.

Mr. Goodrich was a visitor but he was very welcome. He would not plant until he was ready, thought many were in too great a hurry and lost much labor in this way. His time is the last week in May. It makes no difference if he is the last man to plant. He cuts high and binds with stalks. He always sows seed in the same way and never fails, selects when drawing and spreads upon chamber floor.

Mr. Fisher thought upon sandy soil early planting might be practiced but not upon clay. He would select the best ears when husking, tie two together and hang, and would also select when drawing in, as he did not meet with good success when getting seed from the crib, but would always dry well by hanging up.

Club adjourned to meet at George Griswold's, Friday evening Nov. 18th.

Program. Singing, Lizzie Henderson, Kitty Griswold, Minnie Rector. Select reading, Fred Griswold; essay, Mrs. Geo. Griswold; Instrumental Music.

Subject for discussion, the best mode of wintering cattle and sheep.

The following from Mr. C. W. Wells will be found interesting.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Nov. 1, '81.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Secretary of Farmers Club:

The HERALD is a very welcome visitor, and finds our home every Monday. Last evening I noticed an invitation for all interested in farm discussions to be present at your next meeting, and I thought that meant me, as I am a strong advocate of good farming, when a man farms for profit. Although I cannot be there in person, I shall be in spirit.

The subject is one of great importance to a successful farmer, which experience will certainly prove, although at great sacrifice, both of time and labor. As to securing the corn crop, I think it is left many times too long on the hill, the husks loosening from the ear allowing the sun to contract the kernel, and at the same time doing much injury to the fodder. Experience has taught me to cut and shock my corn while it was hardening, there being sufficient nutriment in the stalk to mature the ear, leaving the kernel very plump and the ear very firm with a bright and healthy appearance.

Saving seed corn at the proper time is practiced by but few farmers. Many a farmer every year comes far short of a good crop by planting inferior seed. I would always recommend selecting seed corn just before the corn is shocked, then it is easy to find the best ears and those earliest to ripen. But then the work is not complete, the caring for it is of great importance. It should be kept in a dry place and away from frost. Corn secured in this way will always grow and do well. I have taken corn preserved in this way and planted it by the side of corn from the crib and although both would grow, that from the crib would look sickly, while that selected properly was black and healthy. Much will doubtless be said on this subject and I shall hope to see a full report.

Respectfully,

CYRUS W. WELLS.

A GENEROUS BEQUEST.

Capt. E. Davis, of Franklin, was, as his friends are well aware, a very zealous Universalist. He was a decided man in his religious convictions, and in fact in his opinions on all subjects. When his will was proven in Probate Court, it became known that he had left a legacy of $1,000 to the Universalist Parish of this village.—On Sunday, the 6th inst., this welcome news was announced to his congregation by Rev. H. Shepard, in a few eloquent remarks eulogistic of the deceased, and on motion the trustees were instructed to draft suitable resolutions to be presented on the succeeding Sunday.

On Sunday, the 13th, at the close of the morning service, the trustees presented a testimonial, expressing their deep obligation for this noble gift, which was unanimously adopted by a rising vote of the congregation. The bequest will be of great value to the church, not only directly by increasing their ministerial fund, but indirectly by encouraging others who are blessed with an abundance of this world's goods to follow the Captain's worthy example.

THE TESTIMONIAL

Capt. Ebenezer Davis departed this life at his home in the township of Franklin, on the 21st day of September last. His will was proven in the Probate Court for this county on Monday, October 31st, when it was made public that he had given a handsome legacy to the first Universalist Parish of Tecumseh. The bequest is the last payment, amounting to $1,000, of a mortgage, due in October, 1883, and drawing interest at seven per cent.—He directs that "this sum shall be securely invested and shall constitute a permanent fund, the interest to be expended annually in paying a minister of the gospel for preaching; said minister to be a man who shall believe in one true God, and in Jesus Christ as a Divine Being, and the Savior of the whole family of man."

The trustees of this Parish, in behalf of its members, desire to express their profound gratitude for this generous bequest. Bro. Davis had been a member of this Parish for many years and was one of the charter members of the Church. He was a man of strong convictions, great integrity of character and liberal with his friends. He individualized the highest type of an honest man, and in all his business deal he was the personification of uprightness. In his family relations he was a devoted husband, and a strict but kind-hearted father. In his religious belief he was a Bible Universalist. He cherished the cardinal tenet of our faith, not simply because reason and his heart's desire led him to that goal, but because he believed the ultimate salvation of all men to be the unmistakable and emphatic teaching of the Holy Scriptures. He believed the New Testament taught that there is one God who is the Father of all, and one Son of God who is the Savior of the world. So firm was his conviction and so zealous his wish to aid the cause his heart most cherished, that he has bequeathed a legacy to our Parish in his last testament, the income of which shall be used to sustain the preaching of the Gospel as he believed it.

The trustees accept this gift with humility and thankfulness, and pledge themselves to faithfully execute the trust committed to their charge. This fund shall be securely invested, and the income shall be sacredly used to advance the cause which he loved.—Bro. Davis's bequest will be a monument to his memory more enduring than brass and more lasting than marble. It will be a perpetual reminder of his generosity and religious zeal.—His name will henceforth be a beacon light of liberality and faithfulness to illumine the pathway of those who are left behind, and it will be one of the brightest stars in the firmament among the members of our Church who have gone before.

We direct that this humble testimonial be spread at length upon the Parish records, that a copy be transmitted to the widow and family of the deceased, and a copy to the Star and Covenant for publication.

DIED.

CATLIN.—In Tecumseh at the residence of her mother, Mrs R. Catlin, Lucy M. Catlin, on Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1881, of typho-malarial fever, aged 14 years and 7 months.

About three weeks ago she abandoned her studies, and from that time she gradually succumbed to the disease, which with rapid strides finally terminated her life. She was an honest, frank girl, having many friends and beloved by all. Her funeral was attended by her teacher and high school classmates, and by a large number of the young people of the Presbyterian Sunday school of which she was a bright and intelligent member. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Wm. Grandy, whose remarks were tender and appropriate. Her brother Bert came from Detroit and was with her during her last hours, and was present with her father and mother at the funeral.

THOMAS.—In the township of Macon on the 23rd of October, Mrs. Hannah E. Thomas, at the age of 49 years, 10 months and 4 days.

The deceased was born in Saline township, Washtenaw county, on the 19th of December, 1831. In May, 1850, she was united in marriage to Mr. Sylvester Thomas, who together with eight children survives to mourn her loss. During the greater part of her married life she continued to live in her native township, but about 13 years ago the family moved into Macon, where they have since had their home. Uniting with the Baptist Church at Pennington's Corners during the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Maynard, about ten years ago, she has since led a consistent christian life and departed in the assurance of peace and salvation through faith in the Redeemer. The funeral services were held on Oct. 25th, being conducted by Rev. J. A. De Spelder and attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

POCKLINGTON—Died in Ridgeway, Nov. 7, 1881, Smith Pocklington, aged 36 years.

He was a native of England, and at an early age became the foster child of George Pocklington at whose house he died after much suffering caused by his service as a soldier in the war of the rebellion. He became a subject of epilepsy so confirmed and violent a type as to render him nearly helpless and necessitating constant attention which was kindly and faithfully bestowed by his foster parents. He was a member of the M. E. church at Ridgeway where his funeral rites were conducted by Rev. Jesse Kilpatrick. Thus another is added to the patriots whose dust reposes in the Ridgeway cemetery.

KEYSER.—At the family residence, Tecumseh, Nov. 7th, 1881, Hattie Keyser, aged seventeen.

During a wasting illness, protracted through eight months, her realization, her comprehension of her condition was something quite unusual. God, Immortality, Heaven, were words of deepest signification to Hattie.

She had been very happy in her life here, was now passing away from earth, and made daily preparation for long absence—a preparation having wise regard alike for those she was leaving and for herself.

The missionary page of the family paper (The Interior,) gave her delight; from her readings there she thought she saw that illuminated scripture text cards could do good in Indian Mission Sabbath Schools. She had a choice collection sent for and with strong desire awaited their coming.—They reached her one day before death; she opened them, assorted them, baptized them with her prayers and tears and so sent them on their mission of love.

She looked over her little treasures, wrote the names of dear companions on them, and designated Christmas morning as the time to deliver them.

Time and again she expressed her gladness that she had studied physiology. It threw a light upon her physical condition which comforted her; so too knowledge drawn from God's word illumined her pathway out into the future—her mind was at rest—her soul was satisfied.

The presence of dearest friends was not more actual or real to Hattie, in those last days, than was the presence of her divine Savior. There could be no more unwavering trust in Jesus than was hers. Looking back over her life, one day, she said, "Mine has been a short but happy life," and it was her dutiful spirit that had infused it with happiness, for outward surroundings cannot constitute happiness for child or man. Happy in life, happy in death, happy forever.

Hattie Keyser's beautiful "falling asleep in Jesus" most fully realized William Cullen Bryant's ideal close of a good life:—

"Sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Fruit Cellars.

In order to keep fruit, several conditions are important. In the first place, the atmosphere of a fruit room should be dry; there should be no more dampness than ordinarily exists in the cold outside air. The room should be susceptible of ventilation in proper weather, not by direct currents of air, but by air modified before it reaches the fruit. A fruit room must be frost-proof; it must be cleanly and accessible. As regards location, it may be placed on a side hill, the excavation opening to the south; or it may be placed under a barn or stable, or other convenient out-building.

Ten years ago we constructed a fruit cellar under our stable, and it has proved so satisfactory that we venture to give a brief description of it. The division walls are constructed of brick, and the apartments are two in number, an outer and an inner room. The outer room is but partly under ground, and is 10 by 12 feet in area, and 8 feet high. The inner room is wholly underground, and frost-proof; it has four brick walls and a cemented floor. In this room the fruit is stored early in December, when the weather becomes cold. The outer room holds the fruit during the autumn months after it is gathered, and it is cool, well lighted, and dry. The windows are left open and a free circulation of air allowed so long as no danger from frost exists. When the fruit is taken to the inner room, the door is closed, and no light admitted. Ventilation is secured in moderate weather by opening the inner door and throwing down a window in the outer room. In this cellar we kept apples of last season's growth until the present winter in perfect condition. Some of these apples, exhibited at the autumn agricultural fairs, were pronounced as fresh as those of the past season's growth.

Chinese Farmers.

We doubt if a happier race exists than the Chinese farmers and peasantry. The farms are small, and so the farmers are not wealthy, but they are very respectable. Each farm-house is a little colony, consisting of some three generations—namely, the grandfather, his children and his children's children. There they live in peace and harmony together; all those that are able to, work on the farm, and if more labor is required the stranger is hired to assist them. They live well, dress plainly, and are industrious, without being in any way oppressed.

The female members of a farmer's household have much more liberty than those of higher rank. They have small feet, as usual, but they are not so confined to the house, or prevented from looking on and speaking to strangers, as are the higher classes. If a stranger enters the court of the house unexpectedly, he will see a number of ladies, both old and young, sitting in the verandah, all industriously employed on some work—spinning, sewing or embroidering, and one probably engaged in culinary operations; and if the stranger be an unknown foreigner, the whole will rise suddenly and disappear like a covey of partridges, overturning wheels, stools, and any thing that may be in their way.

"This" says a writer on Chinese customs, "was a frequent scene in my earlier visits, but it gradually wore off when it was found that I was a civilized being like themselves. These same ladies, afterwards, would often ask me to sit down, and even set a chair for me and bring me a cup of tea with their own fair hands; and while I drank my tea they would go on with their work, laughing and talking as freely as if I had been a thousand miles away."

American Ladies.

The first impression Sara Bernhardt received of the American ladies manifested itself thusly:—"Oh! ze ladies, za are so beautiful, such clear complexion I never see before," all of which is due to the universal use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases, which insures a clear and clean complexion, and a healthy color. This reminds us of the divine precept "clear-ness is next to God-liness."

A Square Back-Down.

A day or two ago a lady living on Dublin street was summoned to the door to see a boy about twelve years of age, who had a cheap hat-rack to sell. When she appeared he said:

"Madam, my father is dead, and won't you please to buy this hat-rack for twenty-five cents?"

She was sorry that his father was dead, but she didn't want the hat-rack. The next day the same boy with the same hat-rack returned, and the boy said:

"Madam, won't you please buy this hat-rack, for my mother is dead, too."

She was sorry his mother was also dead, but did not want to buy the hat-rack, and giving him a slice of bread and butter, sent him away. Two days later the boy called again, having the same identical rack under his arm, and he looked the lady straight in the eyes and said:

"Madam, won't you please buy this hat-rack, for my sister is also dead."

"My goodness! is it possible that you have lost father, mother and sister in one week?" exclaimed the lady.

"Yes, mum."

"And what ailed them?" she asked.

"I dunno, mum, but I kinder feel it in my bones that unless I sell this ere hat-rack afore Saturday night, death will use up the rest of our family and be going for other folks."

"If I buy this rack of you will you tell me the truth?"

She handed him a quarter and asked: did your father, mother and sister die this week?"

The boy looked at her, hesitated, and then laid the quarter on the railing picked up his hat-rack, and said as he went down the steps:

"I only get five cents commish for selling these racks, and I can't afford to kill off three of the family and resurrect 'em again for any such figure! Good-bye, mum—it's a square back-down on me!"

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsoit, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. Ultimately consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Roundout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsoit's recovery was rapid and perfect.

With "Favorite Remedy" as a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Bilious disorders, Constipation of the bowels, and all the classes of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y. The doctor would have it understood that while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

At latest accounts three miles of grading and twelve miles of iron remained to be finished.

How Deeply Does the Earth Quake.

The recent earthquake at Virginia City was not noticed at all in the mining depths, but only by people on the surface. Their famous earthquake of some time ago, which shook down chimneys and fire-walls, cracked brick buildings and did other damage, was merely noticed by some of the miners working in the upper levels, but if did no damage, not even shaking down loose stones and earth. The station-men in the various shafts felt it the strongest, and the deepest point where it was noticed was by the station-tender at the 900-foot level of the Imperial-Empire shaft—900 feet below the surface. He said it felt like a sudden faint throb or pulsation of the air, as though a blast had been let off at a distance above, below, or in some indefinite direction. In some of the mines the shock was not noticed at all, even by station-men. Commenting on this peculiar fact at the time, the Gold Hill News remarked that the earthquake seemed to be an electrical disturbance, proceeding from the atmosphere and not from the depths of the earth.

Large Bells.

In making bells, loudness rather than pitch is the object, as the sound can be conveyed to a much further extent. This accounts for the enormous weight of some of the largest bells. St. Paul's, London, weighs 13,000 pounds, and the bell at Antwerp 16,000 pounds; Oxford, 17,000 pounds; the bell at Rome, 19,000 pounds; Mechlin, 20,000; Bruges, 23,000 pounds; York, 24,000 pounds; Cologne, 25,000 pounds; Montreal, 29,000 pounds; Erfurt, 30,000 pounds; "Big Ben," at the house of parliament, 31,000 pounds; Sens, 34,000 pounds; Vienna, 40,000 pounds; Novgorod, 69,000 pounds; Pekin, 139,000 pounds; Moscow, 141,000 pounds. But as yet, the greatest bell ever known is another famous Moscow bell, which was never hung. It was cast by the order of Empress Anne in 1653. It lies broken on the ground, and is estimated to weigh 443,872 pounds. It is nineteen feet high and measures around the margin sixty-four feet. There are few bells of interest in the United States.

About Nutmegs.

Nutmegs grow on trees which look like pear trees, and are generally over twenty feet high. The flowers are very much like those of the lilly of the valley. They are pale yellow and very fragrant. The nutmeg is the seed of the fruit, and the mace is the thin covering over the seed. The fruit is about as large as a peach. When ripe it breaks open and shows the little nut inside. The trees grow on the islands of Asia, and in tropical America. They bear fruit for seventy or eighty years, having ripe fruit at all seasons. A fine tree in Jamaca has over a thousand nutmegs on it yearly. The Dutch used to have all the nutmeg trade, as they owned the Banda Islands, and conquered all other traders, and destroyed the trees. To keep the price up, they once burned three piles of nutmegs, each of which was as large as a church. Nature did not sympathize with such meanness. The nutmeg pigeon, found in all Indian islands, did for the world what the Dutch had determined should not be done, carried those nuts, which are her food, into all surrounding countries, trees grew, and again the world has the benefit.

Keep the Body Erect.

An erect bodily atitude is of vastly more importance to health than most people generally imagine. Crooked bodily positions, maintained for any length of time, are always injurious, whether in the sitting, standing or lying posture, whether sleeping or walking. To sit with the body leaning forward on the stomach, or to one side, with the heels elevated on a level with the head, is not only in bad taste, but detrimental to health. It cramps the stomach, presses the vital organs, interrupts the free motions of the chest, and enfeebles the functions of the abdominal and thoracic organs, and, in fact, unbalances the whole muscular system. Many children have become hunped-backed or severely round-shouldered by sleeping with the head raised on a high pillow. When any person finds it easier to sit or stand or walk or sleep in a crooked position than a straight one, such person may be sure his muscular system is badly deranged, and the more careful he is to preserve a straight or upright position and get back to nature again, the better.

Annoyance Avoided.

Let right doing for the sake of right be your daily work. Scatter your kindness like seeds in the furrows of the earth to fructify and to blossom, to exhale the sweet perfume for all. The blessing will be yours; after many days wilt thou find it.

THE PALMYRA GRANGE.

The elegant new hall of the Palmyra Grange has been completed and was dedicated on the 10th inst. The Times gives an account of the dedication from which we extract the following:

The hall is a two-story frame structure, with all the conveniences of kitchen, dining room, ante rooms and auditorium, is well ventilated, and finished with all the modern improvements. The walls are papered, and the finishing of wood is finely painted and grained. The floor is covered with beautiful carpeting, and the walls are hung with fine paintings and mottoes. The flowers were of the choicest varieties, arranged in artistic beauty, the work of Mrs. Spaulding, of Tecumseh. The fruit used emblematically for the ceremonies was furnished by Mr. A. Sigler, of this city, and needs no further comment. The dedication ceremonies of the order are indeed very impressive and beautiful, and were conducted by the Master of the state grange, Hon. C. G. Luce, of Coldwater.

The house was packed to its utmost capacity, many being unable to get even standing room. After the dedication exercises came dinner, the furnishing of which was one of those able efforts for which the generous housekeepers of the order are celebrated. The repast was the praise of every one present, and why not, for who can better appreciate a good dinner than the active farmer whose powers are always ample for such an occasion? Upwards of three hundred were fed at dinner, and a very large number remained for supper, and yet there was no lack. After the banquet the audience was addressed by Mr. Luce, who held his hearers for over an hour. He was followed by the Hon. Chas. E. Mickley, of Madison, so well known by most citizens of old Lenawee. He never did better, which is all we need say.

Six to Fifteen.

"Having been an invalid for a number of years, I have received more benefit during the last six months from the use of your "Favorite Remedy" than from the preceeding 15 years of treatment from the best physicians of New York and surrounding country." Thus writes Mrs. Mariam Reeve, in a letter dated at Cornwall, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. Is any extended comment needed on this? One Dollar a bottle. All Druggists sell it.

A daily newspaper should, above all things, furnish correct information on the subjects uppermost in the popular mind, as concisely as possible and without regard to political, sectarian or personal relations. It should be intelligible as well as intelligent, and even its original comments should be more in the way of explaining its news than in enforcing favorite doctrines. This is the aim of the Detroit Evening News, and it seems to hit the bull's-eye most of the time.

THE Commercial Advertiser and Michigan Home Journal, published by Wm. H. Burk, Detroit, Michigan, is one of the best family weeklies in the Northwest. This paper, established in 1861, has steadily increased its circulation during the past twenty years, and now ranks as the most prominent weekly family paper in Michigan. Its circulation extends to every State and Territory in the Union, and every Province of Canada and is constantly increasing. Under the editorial management of a rising young journalist, it is fast gaining prominence for its fearlessly outspoken criticisms on the evils of social life and of the neglect and abuses in the family circle, while judicious selections from its many exchanges renders it entertaining, cheerful and lively. The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN's light is for mankind and womankind of every sort, but its genial warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfiture on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of THE SUN. It affected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN's example.

THE SUN for 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House Square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN's political course.

The WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete The WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and indefinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

There has nothing happened worth talking about but I am afraid of getting to the foot of the class if I don't spell something. The fact is the women of Brooklyn are in a crisis, not mentioned in Harper's Bazar of Oct. 8th. Ours is different because the coal is delayed on its way hither, and wood-cutters are waiting for Star route difficulties to be settled before they travel to town with promised hickory, and gust and sleet, and leaden gray color the ills of November days, making the sunshine of the heart ones chief dependence.

Our position is not awarded us by gallantry any more than those cabinet ladies spoken of in the Bazar, and all analogy between us stops at the first period. We cannot lay claim to the self-forgetfulness displayed by Mrs. Dr. Edson, for we remember ourselves and some other folks most all the time. The gentleman who wrote the eulogy on Mrs. Edson's conduct during the President's illness, did not bestow flattery, but I guess the ways of women in the aggregate are new to him, if he thinks that a few senators' wives sharing the troubles of a sick room is an indication that the feminine fraternity are in the midst of an era, marked by a fuller appreciation of the peculiar worth of womanliness in that direction.

I thank him, however, for speaking on a subject that has so long been a matter of course that it seldom gets into print. Sympathy, whether bestowed in words, acts or gifts of gold, cannot cancel grief, but it alleviates care and helps one to bear sorrow, some say, bravely. With such a support very few could estimate their own self-reliance. It is one thing to sit by an invalid an hour or two during the day, with a servant to bring even a glass of water, or to keep the vigil night or day, and perform every menial office, whim or necessity requires. In the latter case the era of the peculiar worth of womanlies wears date of year 1, and there was little sympathy expressed in her day of exile.

If I did not dread a like fate I would call the attention of the writer of that article to the fact that women often take care of dying or worse than dead husband, and a baby, engineer half a dozen more through measles and whooping cough, split their own fire wood, and wash or sew to earn food, clothing, and rent, and nobody thinks of infringing their talent with so much as a word of encouragement. If that is what is meant by women assuming their true position, we have never been far enough out of plumb to retard the millenium.

PEARLIE.

ADDISON.

We are somewhat amused by the candid expression of admiration looming up from "Way down in Dixie," and resting like a halo of glory over the gifted brow of Brooklyn's fair scribe. And while we are left to presume the good Texan is minus "pard" something like a Pearlie-queened wedding party, made convivial by a corps of HERALD pencil-pushers is presented to our expectant vision. Is Pearlie consigned?

The M. E. parsonage was the scene of a pleasant gathering last Wednesday evening, a goodly number of our village people availing themselves of the hour—partly to acquaint themselves with the Elder's estimable family, and partly to contribute to their material necessities. We believe that like informal gatherings for social intercourse furnish the best medium by which society can be harmonized and a feeling of mutual confidence and esteem established among neighbors and kinsfolk.

The recent coming of Jack Frost is suggestive of an almost endless catalogue of mingled blessings and curses prominent among which are turkey dinners, wedding parties, skating races, snow ball skirmishes, etc. Let men matrons, lads, lasses, turkeys, geese, and in fact all parties concerned, take in the situation and govern themselves accordingly.

Nov. 18th the Farmers' Club was to have been held at Geo. Griswold's, but the night being so stormy only a few members were present. On motion, the meeting was adjourned to meet Thursday evening, Dec. 1st, at the same place, where the program that was arranged for Nov. 18th will be given. This will be the annual meeting for the election of officers, and a full attendance is desired.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

HOLLOWAY.

A. L. Arner came home from Ann Arbor last Thursday to spend Thanksgiving.

Grant Hanford, of Tecumseh, drove down to Mr. D. P. Anthony's one day last week. He was driving rather fast and as he came through the gate and turned down the road the buggy overturned, leaving Grant and the young lady who was with him on the ground. The team ran as far as Alexander Richard's where it was stopped. No one hurt.

Since the game law expired the report of the shot-gun is heard through the land on all days of the week, Sundays not excepted.

Last Friday morning a young German boy living with Benjamin Kelly was kicked in the face by a horse and dangerously injured. He was sent to the pasture to drive the horses to the barn. The horses came, but no boy appearing, he was searched for and found in the field lying on his back with his face badly crushed. He remained insensible until nearly noon. Dr. Catlin was called to dress the wound.

The Rev. Mr. Grandy occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church last Sabbath, our pastor taking his place at Tecumseh.

Mr. Frank Rogers came home from the agricultural college last Saturday and began teaching at Lenawee Junction Monday.

The literary society was a failure last week on account of bad weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Richard have gone to New York on a visit.

Spencer Morgan has lately returned from a hunting expedition to the north woods. We are not informed as to his success in that region.

A Sunday school concert will be held Sunday evening, Nov. 27. A program of sacred music, class exercises, select readings, and essays will be presented.

Work on the new dwelling house of Mrs. Libbie Augustus is rapidly progressing under the supervision of Martin Hendershot. It will soon be ready for occupancy.

Capt. J. C. Bontecou, of Jackson, agent of the Mich. State Tem. Alliance, addressed the people of this place at the Pres. church on the evening of Nov. 15th. Notwithstanding the bad condition of the roads, and the disobliging spirit manifested by the moon, he was greeted as usual with a crowded house. After an excellent address Mr. Bontecou organized a branch Alliance, with 22 stockholders which we are informed has since been increased by three more.—The following officers were elected:

President—Dr. Geo. Howell.
Secretary—Zoe Pennington.
Treasurer—Wm. Morgan.
Vice Pres. School Dist.
No. 1—Hilda Pennington.
No. 2—Mrs. Wm. Osgood.
No. 3—Isaiah Hendershot.

It is hoped that the Alliance will be strengthened during the winter by the addition of many new members. A meeting will be held Tuesday evening, Nov, 29, to perfect the organization.

Elfie and Alta Thomas, who five weeks ago were stricken down with typhoid fever are still very sick, although it is thought they are improving. It is doubly sad to know that while the two young girls have been struggling for life with the dread destroyer their mother has passed away a victim to the same disease. The sympathy of the people is enlisted in behalf of the afflicted family and sympathy of a substantial sort has been shown by friends and neighbors, who with willing hearts and ready hands have assisted in the care of the sick.

School in the higher departments closed last Friday for a vacation of three weeks. The primary department will continue in session two weeks longer.

The Freewill Baptist society of this place has sustained a great loss in the death of Deacon Sherd of Tecumseh who for 30 years has been one of its most active members and firm supporters. He will be missed, not only in the church but in many a home where he has ever been an honored and welcome guest, and by the entire community, where his strict unwavering principles of honor and integrity have won for him love and respect. Although the swift flying years silvered his head, and bowed his once stalwart form, they were powerless to quench the kindly light of his eyes, or banish the cheery smile from his lips, for through all was shining the fadeless light of a perfect trust in the Master. Down deep in his heart was a wellspring of love for humanity overflowing with generous deeds, unassuming acts of charity, words of admonition and warning for the erring, of encouragement and cheer for the weary ones of earth. Surely he has fought the good fight and has come off more than conquerer. We feel that in paying this slight tribute to his memory we express the sentiments of all who knew him best.

Adrian Times: During the early fall Mrs. Dr. Dougan, of Vandalia, Cass county, this state, was the guest of Mrs. James Cook, of Raisin. While at Mrs. Cook's the visitor lost a valuable diamond, worth about $200 from a set given her by her husband and highly prized. Vigilant search was made for it, but without success, and the visitor went home mourning her loss. Now she writes to Mrs. Cook that the other day, while wearing a dress she has frequently worn since her visit she saw, in a puff on one of the sleeves, what looked like the end of a basting thread. She picked at it, found it hard, investigated and found her lost diamond.

A Sure Sign.

When the great public of so large a portion of the civilized world as is comprehended by America and Great Britain, and her colonies, give the choice to any particular newspaper, it is a sure sign that it is a good one.—There are many newspapers in the world, but none that have a wider reaching popularity than The Detroit Free Press. Its pure and elevated tone, full, correct and timely news reports, and interesting general information, seem to be exactly what the public want. Unquestionably, the Free Press will suit every one at all particular in their choice of family newspapers. It is $1,50 a year, and we will send it and the Tecumseh HERALD together for $2,60, to one or to different addresses, but the money for the two papers must come together.

Hudson Post: Mr. W. W. Champlin arrived home from Dakota Saturday. He is on the celebrated Dalrymple farm, or rather two farms, for there are two of them, a stock farm of 40,000 acres, and a grain farm of some 38,000 acres, of which 9,000 acres are under cultivation of wheat. 400 men are employed three weeks in the harvest, using 63 Walter A. Wood self binder reapers, and nine steam threshers turn out the product in 20 days, threshed in the fields. A busy scene is the cutting, reaping and hauling away of the golden grain. Mr. C. is employed as an overseer. He has 160 acres of his own, on which, although he has not put his hands to the plow, he has had raised 600 bushels of wheat the past season.

THE latest dodge in the mutilation of silver coins is to cut the money into three parts, file off a portion of the silver and then fasten the curtailed parts together with solder. Coins manipulated in this way are not so much smaller than the original that they can be distinguished by other than actual comparison. In addition to this cutting off holes are drilled into the coin from the edges and silver taken therefrom, replaced by a base metal, and the edges polished so as to make detection almost impossible.—Several specimens "doctored" in this way have been received at the treasury department in Washington.

Hudson Gazette: They got out of of hay at Weaver's the other day. So "Norm" attached a card to the neck of his learned mule, directed to Ed. Hyatt the overseer of his estates in the town of Wright, telling him to bring in a load of hay and also bring back the mule. The faithful and hungr animal went straight to the farm, delivered his charge, and next day came back with Ed. and the farm team, and fodder. Talk about your telephones!

Deerfield Record: A new manufacturing enterprise is to be added to Deerfield's list. We understand that Messrs. Jason Hemenway, Senior and Junior, are perfecting arrangements for the opening of a first class tile and brick yard in this village. The yard will be located on Keegan street, east of Park. The real work of manufacturing will probably not be commenced until next spring.

Norristown Herald: The Kalamazoo postoffice was recently robbed of 50,000 three-cent stamps. It is supposed the thief's name was Smith and he intends to write to each of his relations.

THE WORLD AS I FIND IT.

They say the world is a weary place,
Where tears are never dried,
Where pleasures pass like breath on glass,
And only woes abide.
It may be so—I cannot know—
Yet this I dare not say,
My lot has had more glad than sad,
And so it has to-day.

They say that love's a cruel jest;
They tell of women's wiles—
That poison lurks in pouting lips,
And death in dimpled smiles.
It may be so—I cannot know—
Yet sure of this I am,
One heart is found above the ground
Whose love is not a sham.

They say that life's a bitter curse—
That hearts are made to ache,
That jest and song are gravely wrong,
And health a vast mistake.
It may be so—I cannot know—
But let them talk their fill;
I like my life and love my wife
And mean to do so still.

THE NEW SCHOOLMA'AM.

"The schoolma'am's coming—the schoolma'am's coming!" shouted a dozen voices at the close of a half hour's faithful watch to catch a glimpse of our new teacher. Every eye was turned toward her with the most scrutinizing glance for the children as well as others, always form an opinion of a person, particularly of their teacher, at first sight.

"How tall she is!" exclaimed one.

"Ho, I ain't afraid of her, nor a dozen like her," cried the big boy of the school.

"Nor I either," cried the big boy's little ally, "I could lick her easy enough; couldn't you, Tom?"

"Yes, and I will, too, if she goes to touch me."

"Hush!" cried one of the girls, "she will hear you."

By this time she had nearly reached the door, round which we clustered, and every eye was fixed upon her face with an eager yet bashful gaze, uncertain, as yet, what verdict to pass upon her.

"Good morning, children," she said, in the kindest voice in the world, while her face was lighted by the sweetest smile imaginable. "This is a beautiful morning to commence school, is it not?"

"I know I shall love her," whispered a little pet in my ear.

We all followed her into the school-room, except Tom Jones and his ally, who watched until the rest were seated, and then came in with a swaggering, noisy gait, and a sort of dare-devil saucy look, as much as to say, "Who cares for you?"

Miss Westcott looked at them kindly, but appeared not to notice them further. After a short prayer, and reading a chapter in the Bible, she passed round the room and made some inquiry of each one in regard to themselves and their studies.

"And what is your name?" she asked, laying her hand upon Tom's head, while he sat with his hands in his pockets, swinging his body forwards and backwards.

"Tom Jones," shouted he, at the top of his voice.

"How old are you, Thomas?" she asked.

"Just as old agin as half," answered Tom, wit a saucy laugh.

"What do you study, Thomas?"

"Nothing."

"What books have you?"

"None."

Without appearing to be at all disturbed by his replies, Miss Wescott said, "I am glad that I am to have one or two large boys in my school; you can be of great assistance to me. Thomas, if you will stop a few moments after school this afternoon, we will talk over a little plan I have formed."

This was a mystery to all, and particularly to Tom, who could not comprehend how he could be useful to anybody, and for the first time in his life he felt as if he was of some importance in the world. He had always been called the "bad boy" at school, and he took a sort of pride in being feared by the children, and dreaded by the teacher.

Miss Wescott at once comprehended his whole character, and began to shape her plans accordingly. She maintained that a boy, who at twelve years of age made himself feared among his school fellows, was capable of being made something of. Heretofore all influence had conspired to make him bad, and perhaps a desperate character; she was determined to transform his character by bringing an opposite influence to work upon him; and to effect this, she must first gain his confidence, which could not be done in a better way than by letting him feel that she placed confidence in him.

When school was out, more than half the scholars lingered about the door, wondering what Miss Wescott had to say to Tom Jones. He had often been bidden to remain after school, but it was always to receive punishment or a severe lecture, and nine times out of ten he would jump out of the window before half the school were out of the room; but it was evidently for a different purpose that he was to remain now, and no one wondered what it could be more than Tom Jones.

"Don't you think, Thomas, that our school-room would be a great deal pleasanter if we had some evergreens to hang around it; something to make it cheerful?" inquired Miss Wescott.

"Yes'm, and I know where I can get plenty of them."

"Well, Thomas, if you will have some here by eight o'clock to-morrow morning, I will be here to help you put them up, and we will give the children a pleasant surprise. Here are some books I will give you, Thomas; you may put them in your drawer; they are what I want you to study."

"But I can't study geography and history," exclaimed Tom, confused, "I never did."

"That is the reason why you think you cannot," replied Miss Wescott. "I am sure you can, and you will love them, I know."

"Nobody ever cared whether I learned any thing or not before," said Tom, with some emotion.

"Well, I care, said Miss Wescott, with earnestness; you are capable of becoming a great and good man; you are now forming your character for life, and it depends upon yourself what you become. The poorest boy in the country has an equal chance with the wealthiest, and his circumstances are more favorable for becoming eminent, for he learns to depend upon himself. I will assist you all I can in your studies, Thomas, and I know you will succeed; remember that I am your friend, and come to me in every difficulty."

Tom Jones had not been brought up; he had come up, because he had been born into the world and could not help it; but as for any mental or moral training, he was as ignorant of it as a wild bramble of a pruning knife. His father was an intemperate, bad man, and his mother a totally inefficient woman. At home he received nothing but blows, and abroad nothing but abuse. His bad passions were therefore all excited and fostered, and his good ones were never called out. He always expected that his teachers would hate him, so he aroused anew his combative powers to oppose them, and he had made up his mind to "turn the new schoolma'am out of doors." When, therefore, Miss Wescott said she was glad to have him in her school, he was amazed; and that she should manifest such an interest for him and give him a set of books, was perfectly incomprehensible to him. Miss Wescott understood his position and character, and determined to modify them. She felt that he was equally capable of good and bad actions, though the bad now predominated. She knew that his active mind must be busy; one might as well think of chaining the lightning as bending down by force that wild spirit to books. She would give him employment; but such as would call out a new train of ideas and thoughts. He must feel that he was doing good for others' sake, and that he was not guided along by his own wayward will, and yet there must be no appearance of restraint upon him; he must choose to do good.

Tom Jones went home that night with a new feeling in his breast; for the first time in his life he felt that he was capable of rising above his present condition, and becoming somewhat greater and better than he was. His mind became inundated with new and strange emotions, and like a mighty river turned from its course—his thoughts and energies from that hour sought a new direction.

The next morning he was up with the dawn, and when Miss Wescott arrived at the school house, she found Tom Jones there with his evergreens.

"Good morning, Thomas," she said kindly—"so you are here before me; you must have risen early, and I see you have found some beautiful evergreens. Now, if you will help me hang them, we will have the room all arranged by 9 o'clock."

"I have brought a hammer and some nails, said Tom. "I thought we should need some."

"Yes, so we shall; I am glad you thought of it," replied Miss Wescott.

That day every scholar looked amazed to see Tom Jones actually studying his book, and hear him answer several questions correctly; and they were still more confounded when at recess Miss Wescott said:

"You will take care of these little children, will you not, and see that they do not get hurt? You must be their protector."

One would as soon have thought of setting a wolf to guard a flock of lambs, as Tom Jones to take good care of little children.

"Well," exclaimed Sam Evans, "I never saw such a schoolma'am in all my life; did you, Tom?

"No," replied Tom, "but I wish I had, and I would have been a different boy from what I am now; but I am going to study now, and learn something. Miss Wescott says I can, and I am determined to try."

It was astonishing to observe the effect Miss Wescott's treatment of Tom had up on the scholars. They began to consider him of some importance, and to feel a sort of respect for him which they manifested, first by dropping the nickname Tom, and substituting Tommy, which certainly revealed a more kindly feeling toward him.

In less than a week Miss Wescott had the school completely under her control, yet it was by love and respect that she governed, and not by any iron rule; she moved among her scholars a very queen, and yet so gained their confidence and esteem that it did not seem to them submissive to another's will, but the promptings of their own desire to please. One glance of her dark eye would have quelled an insurrection, and one smile made them happy for a day.

Julia Wescott understood human nature. She made it a study, as every teacher ought to do. She rooted out error and prejudice from the minds of her pupils, showed them the evil of sin and beauty of virtue, the advantages of education, and the consequence of ignorance; taught them their own capabilities and responsibilities, and she adapted her instructions to capacities and necessities. And thus she went on year after year, scattering good seed into good ground, and she reaped an abundant harvest. From many a happy home and high place came a blessing upon her; and there is no one that breathes her name with greater reverence, or remembers her with more grateful affection, than Tom Jones, who has filled with ability one of the highest judicial offices in the Union, and freely acknowledges that he owes his present character and position, under God's providence, to her treatment and instructions.

Six to Fifteen.

"Having been an invalid for a number of years, I have received more benefit during the last six months from the use of your "Favorite Remedy" than from the preceeding 15 years of treatment from the best physicians of New York and surrounding country." Thus writes Mrs. Mariam Reeve, in a letter dated at Cornwall, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. Is any extended comment needed on this? One Dollar a bottle. All Druggists sell it.

Legal Defination of a "Newspaper."

Newspapers.—says the Supreme Court of Minnesota in a recent case—are of so many varieties that it would be next to impossible to give any brief definition which would include and describe all kinds of newspapers. We are not called upon to incur the risk of giving any such definition at this time. It will be sufficient for all the purpose of this case to say that, in the ordinary understanding of the word, a newspaper is a publication which usually contains, among other things, what is called the general news, the current news, or the news of the day; and nothing which does not usually contain such news, and is intended for general circulation, is a newspaper in the ordinary sense of the word. Such a newspaper is a publication adapted to the general reader. Now, in the absence of some controlling consideration to the contrary, the statute is to be taken to have used the word newspaper in this, its ordinary sense, or "according to the common or approved usage of the language;" and when the object of the publication of a summons is considered, the reasonableness of such a construction of the word newspaper as requires the publication to be made where it will be likely to meet the eye of the general reader is quite apparent.

Some Instances of Impromptu Ingenuity.

A Spanish steamer while crossing the Bay of Biscay in a severe storm gave such indications, by an unusual noise at the stern, as led the English engineer to suspect that there was something wrong with the screw propeller or its shaft outside of the ship—that is, in the open space between the stern and rudder post where the screw revolves. There was no dry-dock in any of the ports on the coast where the ship could go to be examined; and on arrival at Vigo, it appeared as if there was no alternative but to remove the cargo from the stern, and, by placing it forward, thus lift the screw propeller and shaft to the surface of the water. The alternative, simple as it was, meant a serious delay and great expense. Before commencing to remove the cargo another consultation was held. It was then decided to put the stern of the ship over a bed of light-colored sand, and as the water was very clear there might be a possibility of ascertaining the extent or cause of the mishap. For two days after the the vessel was so placed, the wind caused a ripple on the water, which effectually prevented anything being seen. It was then suggested by some on board to try the use of oil on the surface of the water around the stern of the ship. The effect was most satisfactory. The water was becalmed as if by magic, and it was then seen that the wedge or [illegible] which keeps the propeller in its place on the shaft had come partly out, and thus left the screw loose on the shaft, which caused the noise. By continuing the use of oil for a few hours, the wedge was ultimately driven into its place and secured. In this instance, many days of detention and the use of costly appliances and labor were thus saved

Instances of a more complex character frequently occur where a knowledge of natural laws or forces may be brought in to operation to assist in surmounting difficulties. Thus, a few years ago, an iron bridge of considerable length, the weight being about 200 tons, was constructed in England and erected in a remote part of Germany. By some mishap, the bridge, when finished, was found to be some distance "out" to one side, an error which the proprietors insisted should be rectified. To take down and re-erect the bridge would be simply ruin to the contractor. But necessity is the mother of invention, and so it proved in this case. It was summer time, and the contractor proceeded to find the amount of expansion which was caused by the heat of the whole length of the bridge. He next ascertained what contraction took place in the night by cooling.

Armed with these data, he thought it might be possible to bring the bridge to its proper position in a few days. The bridge, of course, in its ordinary condition expanded from the center, pushing its two ends outward, or farther apart, and again contracting towards the center. Taking advantage of these conditions, one end was made fast in the morning, and the bridge was forced to expand from that immovable point, instead of from the middle, as formerly. When the iron composing the bridge had expanded to its full extent in the direction intended, that end was released, and the opposite end made fast. The bridge then contracted toward its true position. Thus, whatever was gained by the day's expansion was secured by the subsequent contraction when the metal was cooling at night; and the process being renewed day by day, the work was successfully accomplished.

A knowledge of the laws and extent of the expansion and contraction of metals opens up a wide field of usefulness in this connection, and is capable of very extensive application. We see large guns built up in this manner, which could not possibly be made in any other way by the appliances that we possess at present. The tires of wheels, as every one knows, are also fixed in their places by being first heated and then left to shrink. An ingenious application of this quality in metals was made use of in France, and has frequently been taken advantage of since. The walls of a large building in Paris were observed to be giving way by bulging outwards, and the problem was to bring them back to their vertical position. For this purpose a number of bars of iron having screws and nuts on each end were let through the opposite walls, and across the intervening space between them. The nuts and screwed portion of the bars were outside. The bars were now heated by a number of lamps suspended below them, until they had expanded as much as possible, and the nuts screwed up against the outsides of the two opposite walls. The lamps were next removed; when the heated bars, in cooling, gradually contracted in their length, bringing the walls very gently, but with irresistible force, into their normal position.

Still further, in relation to this subject, we are indebted to Captain Saxby of the Royal Naval College, of Woolwich, for a remarkably simple and ingenious application of a very common instrument to the solving of a difficult but important problem. It is well known that in working iron, such as welding two pieces together, and even in its manufacture, hollow places occur, with merely an outside skin over the defective parts, which any test but a destructive one would fail to discover. Nor would it be difficult to point out numerous examples of disaster thus occurring. To test the homogenity of the metal, Captain Saxby takes a bar of iron and places it on the equatorial line. He next passes a compass with a very sensitive needle along in front of the bar of iron, the needle of course pointing at a right angle to it. If the bar is perfectly solid through its whole length, the needle will remain steady. If, however, there should be a flaw or hollow place in the bar, the needle will be deflected as it passes from the solid to the hollow place, backwards towards the solid iron; passing on over the hollow place, the needle will come within the range of the solid iron at the other end of the flaw, and will again be deflected forward. If the bar be cut through anywhere between these two points of deflection, a flaw will invariably be found. Many thousands of pieces of iron—some prepared for the purpose of testing this method of trial, others in the ordinary course of business—have been operated upon with the same unvarying result. Captain Saxby has called to his assistance Nature, who never makes mistakes in her operations.

Hon. Wm. Taylor, Boston, is well again. Completely cured of a scrofulous humor which poisoned his blood, covering his face and head with sores, by Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally.

Why do Fish Return to Rivers?

The long-held and only recently rejected theory, that the shoals of fishes moved in a vast mass along the coast, sending off detachments into each river as they passed its mouth, is to be attributed to John Gilpin and some other authors, who have written flowingly on the subject. Recent careful investigations of naturalists indicate that the anadromous fishes, those entering the rivers and bodies of fresh water from the sea, do not have an extended range in the ocean, and that each river's colony remains, after returning, in the deep water opposite their river.

The motive for the movement of these shoals of anadromous fishes, or rather how it is incited, has scarcely been explained. The life of the fishes has always been a mystery. It is not a search for food, as they do not eat while they are in fresh water; the opening of hundreds of stomachs will fail to find food present. It is an easy disposal of the question as to how each colony recognizes its native river, to say that it is instinctive; so it is also, when the butcher's horse recognizes the familiar gates; but we have some evidence as to what sense he uses. The fishes, probably prompted by functional disturbances, from the tumid ovaries and spermaries, are incited to movement. The courses of the sea, unmarked as they are, are, within each colony's limit, their habitual pathways. An unerring capacity in the fish for finding its own river may be no more than that which guides the hermit-crab to the shell of the natica. The latter goes to hide its sensitive body, with an apparent nervous trepidation at its unprotected condition. The former, with an uneasiness of body from the functional changes it is undergoing, is impelled to activity. The transmitted habit of ascending the stream, is, as it were, blended and alloyed with the substance of its nerves, and roused by its condition, carries it, without concious purpose, into the river of its progenitors and its own. The impulses of the fish are only in a slightly more complicated series than those of the crab. That it should be the instinct for a specific stream, established through inheritance of many generations, is easier to understand than that it is a sort of memory of the place of its immature life, as the theory of fish-culture makes it, and as observation seems to sustain. In the waters of the Delaware, where there were no salmon originally, the young salmon placed in Bushkill creek returned after five years, and were taken, not only in the Delaware river, but the larger number near the Bushkill creek. It is not essential that all the fishes should have this impelling influence, whatever it may be, as like gregarious mammals and birds they flock together, following the leadership of whichever for the time takes it. The idea is suggested that the senses may be the guiding agent, that a fish goes nosing along the coast, or tasting the streams, until it recognizes its own. The convexity of the cornea must afford the fishes a very limited range of vision. The supposed dullness of the sense of smell and of taste in fishes might alone dispose of the suggestion that these are employed. The following occurrence, however, would seem to decide to the contrary. The Russian river, emptying into the Pacific, north of San Francisco, had its mouth entirely closed by the waves during a storm. The colony of salmon made their yearly migration from the deep waters toward the mouth of the river, and many raced through the surf, and landed high and dry on the sand that walled them out of their native river.

The migration of the salmon into some of the Pacific rivers is a frenzied advance over shoals, rapids, and cascades, far into thin streams and brooks, where they arrive battered and weary, to accomplish their exhausive reproductive labors, and drop back, the sport of the current, dead and dying, toward the sea.

Man's Ingratitude.

This is an ungrateful world to say the least. A man will act like a lunatic when he has the Itching Piles, and declare that he knows he cannot live another day, yet he applies Swayne's Ointment, the intense itching is allayed at once, he gets cured, and goes down to the lodge without one whit of gratitude. When asked why he looks so cheerful, he dodges the question by an indifferent answer. Its just like a man though, is it not?

How a Career Began.

The late Lydia Maria Child's danger of literature as a profession was just as accidental. She had been living in the wilds of Maine, and was on a visit to her brother, a Unitarian clergyman at Watertown, Mass. One Sunday noon she [illegible] a copy of the North American, and read a paper by Dr. Palfrey, showing the [illegible] of the early history of New England for the employment of fiction. She had never written, or dreamed of writing for print, but the spell being upon her she immediately began what was afterward the first chapter of her first novel, ("Hobomok,") and by the time of afternoon service the chapter was complete. Showing the MS. to her brother that evening, he was surprised; he could scarcely believe she had done it. His doubt was the best of encouragement. She continued, and her story was finished in six weeks. Its publication sealed her fate; she was never fairly out of ink afterward.

Chas. Eayre Hinkle, Jersey City Heights, N. J., reports that his son, a lad of twelve years, was completely cured of a terrible case of Eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. From his head to his feet was one mass of scabs.

Passengers on the Pennsylvania railroad, between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, have been puzzled to know what occasions the green carpet along one track the greater portion of the distance, while along the other track there is scarcely a vestige of vegetation. The eastward bound freight trains, laden with grain, scatter it more or less along the track, and it soon takes root, and being enabled to grow but a few inches high, the road-bed presents a verdant appearance, while along the other track used by the westward-bound trains, which carry no grain, this feature is wanting.

—When a cough sounds like Croup—that is, dry and hard—do not delay an instant! Give Downs' Elixir often enough to keep the cough loose, and the danger will soon be over.

A young lady received the following note, accompanied by a boquet of flowers: "Dear ——: I send you, by the boy a bocket of flours. This iz like my luv for u. The nite shade menes kepe dark. Rosis red and posis pail, my luv fur u shal never fale."

A Saving of Time.

It is narrated in the "Works of Dr. Franklin," by W. Temple Franklin, that at one time the youth Benjamin, having found that his father was very long in his graces before and after meals, one day after the winter's provisions had been salted, advised him that "he thought if he would say grace over the whole cask once for all, it would be a great saving of time," a suggestion that poor Richard had an eye to business and time as the basis of wealth even as pertaining to spiritual matters, the practice of which, we think, would be of great benefit in the present day; and could the return of our philosophical friend be heralded, we must needs expect to hear of him in his practical manner greet the old apple woman, who so eager to follow the examples of the printer boy, and that in old age her failing memory to be prompted by them has been pleased to attempt her daily vocation seated at the head of the grave of this venerable seer in Christ's Churchyard, Philadelphia.

A Public Duty.

We are not in the habit of puffing any sort of patent medicines in our columns, for the business of a newspaper is to let people know what is going on in the world, and not to lend aid to what may be an imposition. But we happen to know Dr. David Kennedy, of Roundout, N. Y., and can personally testify to the excellence of the medicine which the Doctor calls "Favorite Remedy." For diseases of the blood, kidneys, and bowels it has no equal. We would not be without it for five times the dollar that it costs.—Daily Times.

'TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS,'—Who of our readers has not read that stirring old children's poem? On the 16th of July, 1777, Clement C. Moore was born. He became a thorough scholar, and though he did not enter the ministry, he pursued cognate studies and became a master of the Hebrew. In his thirtieth year he published a grammar of that language, also a complete vocabulary of the psalms, and a Hebrew and English lexicon, with notes. He was appointed a professor of Hebrew and Greek literature in the general theological seminary, and became one of its most distinguished ornaments. How strange to think that a venerable professor of Hebrew should now only be remembered by the rhymes indited for children! Such, however, is frequently the case. Cowper, for instance, is better known as the author of "John Gilpin's Ride" than as the translator of Homer. Professor Moore's sole chance of fame is due to his Christmas effort.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

To relieve burning feet, first discard tight boots; then take one pint bran and one ounce bicarbonate of soda; put in a foot bath; add one gallon of hot water; when cool enough, soak your feet in this mixture for fifteen minutes. The relief is instantaneous. This must be repeated every night for a week, or perhaps more. The bran and carbonate should be made fresh after a week's use. Bicarbonate of soda can be purchased for a small price per pound from wholesale druggists. The burning sensation is produced by the pores of the skin being closed, so that the feet do not perspire.

Catarrhal Poison.

Catarrh poisons the mucous membrane, poisons the blood and vital fluids, poisons the lungs, liver and kidneys. From a simple cold to a rotting, sloughing and death of the senses of smell, taste and hearing, Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh is supreme. Complete treatment $1.

A SENSIBLE GIRL.—If the world possessed more such young ladies as the one described by a Georgia paper, there would be fewer unhappy marriages. A young man and woman were to be married; the guests had assembled, and all were waiting for the bridegroom. At a late hour he came, much intoxicated, and though the bride was in her bridal array, she declared, with firm resolution, "I'll never marry you!" In spite of his pleadings she kept her word, and made what was to be her bridal tour alone. Who can tell the years of misery and degradation saved her by such a course?

GOING ON.—"How old are you, my boy" asked a new England lady of a little fellow whose expression, and every movement, showed that he was intent on getting on in the world. "Five years old and going on ten," was the quick reply. That's it, boys! When you are five, remember you are going on ten; when you are ten, remember you are going on twenty. It is said of Isaac, that "he went forward and grew;" or as the margin gives it, "he went growing." Every child of promise goes in that way. He goes going; he doesn't go standing still. "Be sure you're right, then go ahead.

—As a remedy to purify the blood, nothing can be found equal to Dr. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. Price 25 cents per bottle.

A bright story is told of the accomplished wife—now dead—of General Hooker. When she was the admired Miss Groesbeck, of Cincinnati, she was once at an evening party when a fashionable young dandy was asked if he would like to be presented to her. "Oh! yes," said he, laughingly, "trot her out." The lady overheard the remark, and when she was presented she adjusted her eye-glasses deliberately, and slowly scanned his clothing from boot to collar. The survey finished, she waved her hand and carelessly said: "Trot him back; I have seen all there is of him."

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

Is it not singular that the name of God should be spelled with four letters in so many different languages? In Latin it is Deus; French, Dieu; Old Greek, Zeus; German, Gott; Old German, Odin; Swedish, Gode; Hebrew, Aden; Dutch, Herr; Syrian, Adan; Persian, Syra; Tartarian, Edga; Sclavonian, Belgor or Boog; Spanish, Dias; Hindoo, Dagi or Zeni; Turkish, Abdi; Egyptian, Anun or Zent; Japanese, Zain; Peruvian, Liau; Wallachian, Zene; Etrurian, Ghur; Tyrrhenion, Eber; Irish, Dieh; Croatian, Doha; Margarian, Oesc; Arabian, Alla; Dulaltaam, Bogt. There are several other languages in which the word is marked with the same peculiarity.

Living Witnesses.

The hundreds of hearty, and healthy looking men, women and children, that have been rescued from beds of pain, sickness and well nigh death by Parker's Ginger Tonic are the best evidence in the world of its sterling merit and worth. You will find such in almost every community.

A German newspaper gives the following simple method for exterminating rats and mice, which, it states, has been successfully tried by Baron Von Backlofen and others for some time past: "A mixture of two parts of well-bruised common squills and three parts of finely chopped bacon is made in a stiff mass, with as much meal as may be required, and then baked into small cakes, which are put around for rats to eat." Several correspondents of the paper write to confirm the experience of the noble Baron and his neighbors in the extirpation of rats and mice by this remedy.

A new discovered remedy for worms differing from all others—it removes the worm nest. Rinehart's Worm Lozenges. For sale at Wright's.

Society Belles.

On account of its remarkably delicate and lasting fragrance society belles are loud in their praises of Floreston's Cologne.

The extent to which our smaller species of birds enter into market consumption during the Fall, when they are fattest, is shown by the statement that 50,000 reed-birds (alias bobolink and rice-bird) and black-birds, mainly the red-wings, no doubt, have been shipped in one season from the town of Salem, N. J., alone. The greatest slaughter is along the rice-fields and broad marshes that line the western shores of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays. It should not be long before we begin to utilize the plump English sparrows in the same wholesome manner.

Sarsaparilla

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 24, 1881.

We can second the motion heartily to these remarks clipped from an exchange:

Gladstone shakes his fist over the Irish Channel and looks westward for American approval. He may get it of the class that bill and coo by cable with British royalty and aristocracy, but the true Democrats and Republicans of this land sympathize with the poor people of Ireland. Time was when American statesmen and the powers that be could encourage the humbled to be free.

The trial of the assassin, Guiteau, proceeds at Washington. The foolishness of the prisoner, and the incompetency of court and counsel seem to render it more of a farce than a trial. The attempted shooting of Guiteau is certainly to be deplored. He should have a fair, speedy and dignified trial, be convicted by a jury of his countrymen and then be hung. A noose will give him his deserts as effectually as cold lead, and in this way the majesty of the law will be properly vindicated.

Mr. Elihu Vedder, the well-known American artist, lately returned from Rome, has been working since last summer upon a permanent cover for The Century Magazine. The new cover, which is just completed, is to consist, not of one design, but really of five—four of them for the different seasons of the year. Surrounding each are appropriate emblems for each month in the year, and in each will appear an emblematical female figure of great dignity. The midwinter cover will, perhaps, be the most striking of all, as in the background is seen the Aurora Borealis. The general color of the paper of the present cover will be preserved, whilst the ink will be of a somewhat deeper tint, and the general massing of the letters will also be retained; otherwise, the design is entirely fresh and original.

THE ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

It is gratifying to know that the great Southern Fair now holding in Atlanta is succeeding so well. It will be of immense benefit in stimulating Southern industry and by its reflex influence will also aid the North. Edward Atkinson, the distinguished economist of Boston, first suggested the Cotton Exposition, from which the present Atlanta fair has been developed. Mr. Atkinson is now attending the fair as a witness of the outgrowth of his suggestion. In a letter to the New York Herald he waxes eloquent on the subject, giving his views of the exposition in these glowing words:

The exhibition exceeds in its scope, its influence and in its completeness anything that I ever dared to dream, and it gives me a painful sense of responsibility even to have suggested the idea. Few can conceive the magnitude, the variety and the representative character of what there is here. My friends concur with me in the judgment that these are but the beginnings of great improvements, and that results more profoundly affecting the whole industry of this country, in this exhibition, than in any great exhibition ever held anywhere, and several of my friends are familiar with most exhibitions which have been held. The industrial revolution now proceeding and far advanced in this Southern land must be seen to be appreciated, and its visible and tangible results are here. No one who has any private interest in connection with this section of our common country, no one who has any public interest in the welfare of our nation, can afford to stay away from here who can possibly spare the time to come. If I may use the expression, the potentialities of the future are to be found here—in the ores, in the timber, in the coal, in the productions of agriculture, in new apparatus, new machinery and absolutely new inventions for the treatment of cotton—all in wonderful variety. The one thing wanting, and the only thing wanting to-day, is the hearty co-operation of the railroad corporations, even in far distant places. If they could understand their own interests as fully as we can see it, they would do the work of bringing great crowds at absolute cost or even less for the sake of the influence upon the future traffic which will come out of this grand undertaking. I am authorized and warranted by my associates, who represent the active management and control of one-eighth of the cotton spindles of the United States, in those who are now present, in all that I say and one of them has just said that if he could find stronger language to put the statement in he would do so. Other members of the committee will presently join us who will bring our representation up to one-fifth the cotton spindles of the United States. The hotel accomodations here are first-class and ample at low rates.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

CORN.

The November returns of corn show an average yield of 29¼ bushels per acre, indicating a falling off of about 25 per cent. from the crop of 1880 caused chiefly by the general and protracted drought during the growing season, and by excessive rains since the crop was harvested. The quality of the crop is somewhat below the average.

DR. BLISS AND HIS CRITICS.

Dr. Bliss considers the statements recently published as coming from Drs. Hammond, Boynton, J. Marion Sims, etc., to the effect that the president died from malpractice, to be in accordance with the dictates of their malicious hatred of him. He pronounces them false, and says that the full medical and surgical history of the case will prove them so.

CAPITAL NOTES.

The post-office department has been asked to increase the mail facilities between the Pacific coast and the east, and also between the west and New England.

Gen. Hazen, of the signal service department, denies that any bad feeling exists between him and the war department. Hazen insists that the signal service is an integral part of the army.

The president made an inspection of the repairs going on at the white house, and gave directions to have the work pushed forward as rapidly as possible, as he desired to take up his residence there by the end of the month.

IMPORTANT POSTAL DECISION.

The following decisions were made by Postmaster-General James and First Assistant Hatton:

"The postmaster-general has, after careful consideration, advised that the ancient rule of the department to the effect that matter of a lower grade may be inclosed in that of a higher, and authorizing printed matter to be inclosed with merchandise, and that to make a distinction between the printed matter inclosed with merchandise and the printing upon the tag attached to a sample, or upon the sample itself, when the latter consists of paper, is not within the reasonable intendment of the law. It is, therefore, decided that upon all paper sent as merchandise there may be printed any matter not having the character of an actual or personal correspondence, and with such merchandise, and merchandise if other material, there may be inclosed such printed matter, or the same may be attached to such matter. All former rulings in conflict herewith are revoked.

"First Assistant Postmaster-General Hatton decides that publishers of matter admitted to the mails as second class, may print upon the side of the postal card intended for communication, bills, receipts, and orders for subscriptions to their publication or publications, and may also print the address of such publisher upon the address side of the card and inclose the same in the second-class matter."

THE ASSASSIN'S PERIL.

It is no mistake to say that not much will depend on the jury. Some feel sure a scene will result from Guiteau's vehemence in court some day, which will result in his being shot. At any rate, one out of every ten men seems to think the gallows will be rendered useless, not so likely by the prisoner's insanity, as by some revengeful hand. The assassin himself has fears of a personal assault whenever he moves from one place to another. When he passed out of court the crowd on the street jeered and derided him on every side. He quailed before the crowd, and slunk along between his guards as though his limbs would not carry him, until the driver whipped up the horses. A crowd surrounded the van and saluted the trembling prisoner with derisive shouts. One from whom violence is not impossible is Bethard, the tramp who once wanted to borrow a pistol to shoot Guiteau with, in the Criminal court-room. This person hung around the east portico of the building until after Guiteau's departure, and, although he attempted no repetition of his former conduct, lynx eyes, several of which were on him, shadowed his every movement. A reporter asked Bethard if he was waiting for him again. "They are watching me; I'm afraid," said Bethard. "I wish I stood set behind him with a pistol, just as he did the president; I'd fix him then, d—n quick."

When Guiteau was brought along through the hall, Bethard, who had moved outside on the portico, said: "Oh! how I wish I had a six-shooter."

EXCITEMENT AGAINST GUITEAU.

Soon after the adjournment of court Saturday, the sensation of the day occurred. A second attempt to kill the assassin was then made. As the prison van in which Guiteau was did not turn into East Capitol street, a man rode up on horseback, and dropping behind the van he peered through the grating, and, evidently satisfying himself as to the position of the prisoner, pushed his horse quickly to the left of the van. From this point, and before officer Edelin, in charge of the conveyance, could discover that he had a pistol, he fired a shot through the grating and then wheeled suddenly back toward 1st street. The officer fired at him as he turned, but the bold rider continued his flight and escaped the pursuing van, which chased him to K street, where he turned a corner and disappeared.

When the van door was opened at the jail Guiteau was crouching in the further corner, pale and trembling. "Come on out," said Edelin; but the fellow was too frightened to move. Presently he walked toward the door, but shrank back again. The officers repeated their assurances that there was no one else there, and Guiteau came out. His face was livid and bathed in a cold sweat. His teeth were chattering as if in some deadly fear, and his terror had produced a spontaneous movement in his bowels so that, he presented a disgusting appearance.

"The Lord is on my side, sure enough," said he, "but I think He had better have some policemen take care of me after this." Then turning to Edelin, he said: "Tell them I want a double guard up here Monday morning to take me down to court." When asked if he was hurt he only caught hold of his left hand, and was thus taken to his cell. There a reporter found him changing his shirt. There were two holes in the left sleeve of his coat below the elbow, but neither the sleeve of the outside shirt nor of the undershirt was injured. Cutting away the sleeve it was found that the concussion from the ball, as it passed through his coat-sleeve, had brought blood to the surface of his arm, just above the wrist, but there was no rupture of the skin. Dr. McWilliams, the jail physician, directed the application of ice, and in a few minutes the injury was imperceptible. The doctor also recommended that a narcotic be given at bed time. Guiteau was extremely nervous, and continually upbraided Maj. Brock, chief of police, for not furnishing an adequate guard.

Later the assassin said: "I started from the court-room in excellent spirits, stood up in the forward part of the van, took hold of the grating with both hands, and was looking out. I was thinking that my first week in court had been a good one for me. I had a good jury, and no one had said anything hard against me. I noticed nothing out of the way till I heard a shot, then another, and I felt something in my arm. I dropped to the floor, thinking that my arm was broken, but didn't move much until the van stopped at the jail. Who was it shot at me?" he asked. Upon being told that the man escaped, he asked if he fired two shots at him. Edelin told him he had fired but one. "I wish you had killed him," Guiteau exclaimed.

Within an hour after the shooting the would-be avenger was captured in a tavern near the famous Blandensburg dueling ground. He is a dissipated farmer of means named Bill Jones, about 25 years of age. He lives on his farm, which adjoins the Sprague estate in Edgewood. He was very drunk when he was arrested, and he was not sober when he made the attempt on Guiteau's life.

GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

The proceedings on Tuesday were rather tame compared with those of the previous day. Four additional jurors were accepted making nine in all. An order was issued for seventy-five talesmen, and the court then adjourned.

The remaining jurors were impanneled on Wednesday. Guiteau had a relapse, assuming a wilder style, entered the court-room in an excited manner carrying on one of his violent altercations with Mr. Scoville and finally writing and sending to the papers an appeal to the legal profession for volunteers and means to aid in his defense and promising any member of the bar who should come to his aid that in a short time he would have plenty of money to compensate him.

He said there was what Mr. Scoville had said. When Guiteau jumped up and took exception to this, Scoville concluded he would be pleased. When Mr. Scoville concluded Guiteau jumped up and took exception to what Mr. Scoville had said. He said there was a book sent, and let Scoville run the case as he pleased. When Mr. Scoville concluded he rose and said that Mr. Robinson had agreed to take a book sent, and let Scoville run the case gentlemanly said that Mr. Robinson had agreed to friendly terms. The assassin's brother counsel the counsel of the accused. He and Mr. Robinson, he said, were on perfectly friendly terms. The assassin's brother counsel to deny the report that ill-feeling existed between the counsel of the accused. He and Scoville had made up his mind to watch and prevent any previous day. Guiteau looked calmer, or if he had made up his mind to watch and wait. There was some delay in the opening of the court. In the interval, Mr. Scoville arose and said: "I want it understood that I am here representing the Deity." Then he settled himself in his chair and took up a paper.

Presently Col. Corkhill entered with Secretary Blaine, followed by Mr. Walker Blaine and his younger brother. The secretary was given a seat with counsel, and Col. Corkhill began his address in the presentment of the case to the jury. While Col. Corkhill was reading his address the prisoner eagerly watched him, part of the time trying to read a letter now and then. When his letters to the president and Secretary Blaine were being read he nodded approval and disapproval to the district attorney's accent and emphasis. He seemed particularly anxious when his letter warning Garfield to get rid of Blaine was read, and when it was followed by that to Blaine approving Garfield's choice of him as president, in turn to his brother smiled and said, "That's right." When Col. Corkhill emphasized to the jury the implied threat to Garfield, that, if he did not get rid of Blaine, "ruin would come to him," the prisoner interrupted, "Political ruin, if, you please, sir."

Upon this Judge Porter arose and addressed the court for the first time, speaking plainly and slowly. He said: "The administration of justice—of criminal justice—should never be obstructed by the clamoring of the prisoner." Judge Cox remarked: "I think it is my power to order the prisoner to be removed, and have the trial proceed without him." Then Guiteau said: "I'll not do it again, your honor, I'll try to control myself. I feel very deeply interested in this matter." He sat quiet during the conclusion of the address. As Col. Corkhill drew near the end, tears came to the eyes of Mrs. Scoville, and when he closed she was overcome with weeping. The assassin was unmoved. As the district attorney sat down there was a full round of applause. The defense reserved their opening until the prosecution closed their case.

Secretary Blaine's case was concluded by 12:30 p. m., when a recess was taken. In the afternoon Mr. Comecho, minister from Venezuela, was the first witness followed by Mrs. Sarah V. White, matron of the ladies waiting room at the depot; Parks, the ticket agent, Judson W. Wheeler, George W. Adams, and Jacob P. Smith.

At least 500 people gathered to see Guiteau removed to prison. Walking nervously and cringingly between two marshals he daily runs the gauntlet of hoots and hisses, livid with fear.

The audience Friday was of a somewhat better quality than it has hitherto been, and the majority of it were ladies, who were mostly content to secure standing-room or resting-places on the backs and arms of chairs occupied by their more fortunate sisters. Before the prisoner was brought in, Mr. Scoville arose and asked the court to adopt some effective means to keep his client quiet during the proceedings. When the lawyer had spoken that far, Guiteau was noticed by him entering the room, and he hesitated. A moment afterward he asked the judge to issue an order forbidding the acceptance by any one from Guiteau, whether in the court or in the jail, of any documents, as the defense did not desire to try the case in the newspapers. "I visited the prisoner last night in his cell," said Scoville, "and I talked with him in vain upon this subject."

"Your honor," interrupted Guiteau. "Mr. Scoville talks one thing to me in private and another in public. I'm sick of the way he has been playing double with me all the way through, and I don't want him in the case." Mr. Scoville tried to reason with him, but it was of no use. The prisoner continued: "Mr. Scoville is no criminal lawyer, and I don't want to trust my case in his hands. I want three or four of the best lawyers in the country, and I am going to have them, or I'll make trouble all the way through."

Mr. Scoville attempted to proceed, saying that he had had a hard time last night keeping Guiteau from giving out something he had written. "I surrendered it to you," said Guiteau, "and told you to do as you pleased with it. I care nothing about having it go out."

"Well, then," said Scoville, "all right, if you promise you won't give anything else."

"I'm my own lawyer, and I'll do as I please," broke in the assassin.

Here the court undertook to tell the prisoner that if he didn't keep still he would order him out of court.

"If you do," said Guiteau, "I'll get a new trial on that ground. I'll let it go up to the court in banc."

Judge Cox said the proceeding he referred to was not without precedent, and if necessary he would follow the precedent. He hoped he should not have to give such order.

"If you do," persisted Guiteau, "it will be illegal."

It took four or five marshals to keep the prisoner within bounds, and to one of them he said: "Mind your own business, you old fool."

Judge Cox told the prisoner that he should be heard in his own defense at the close of the evidence. Until then he must keep still or he would be expelled. Guiteau replied that it would be illegal to expel him, but that he should submit to the ruling of the court and let the matter go up to a court in banc. With this he settled down and his brother remonstrated with him, but he turned fiercely on him and said in an undertone: "Scoville is no criminal lawyer and no politician, and I don't want him in this case. He is a good man, and is doing all he can, but I don't want to trust my case in his hands." With this he took up a paper and kept quiet.

Evidence was introduced to further establish the shooting. In the afternoon Guiteau announced that Judge Magruder, of Maryland, would be here Monday to assist in the trial. Scoville announced that the defense would be insanity.

On Saturday the assassin was brought into the court a few minutes after 10 o'clock. On the way to his seat he had to pass Gen. Swaim and Col. Rockwell. There was an expression of fear in his face as he passed by them. John O'Meara, who keeps a gun-store at the corner of 8th and F streets, swore that he sold Guiteau the pistol with which he shot the president. The assassin was particularly careful to select a strong-shooting revolver of the largest caliber. He evinced particular care in selecting a weapon whose accuracy could be depended upon. Col. Rockwell and Gen. Swaim were sworn, and each repeated the story of the assassination as he knew it. Gen. Swaim testified that the last words of the dead president were "Oh, Swaim."

Dr. D. W. Bliss narrated the circumstances of the case from the time he was called to the president's side, fifteen or twenty minutes after he was shot, until his death. The immediate cause of death was hemorrhage, he said. The exhibition of a portion of the vertebræ of the late president created a sensation in court. While the vertebræ was on the district attorney's table, Scoville took it and began an examination of it. Guiteau, who sat immediately on the right, examined it closely as Scoville turned it over and from side to side. He made no move to touch it, however, and gave not the slightest indication of any feeling other than casual curiosity. The cross-examination of Dr. Bliss occupied the balance of the session. During the day the assassin was at times very troublesome to the court, by reason of his repeated excited interruptions of counsel. A threat to remove him and proceed with the case in his absence, finally quieted him.

Cuticura

Scrofulous, Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin was as smooth and natural as ever.

When the Territorial Council passed act in the Spring of 1833, for the organization of the township of Franklin, they intended to have called the meeting at his house, but by a mistake of Gen. Brown it was called at the house of Hiram Reynolds.

SUPT. FAIRFIELD, Miss Louise Kahler, and about twenty-five of the High School pupils attended the funeral of Martin Wilson, at the Raisin Valley church, last Monday afternoon. DR. O'LEARY closed his course of lectures last evening. The attendance has been good throughout and the lectures themselves have been both entertaining and instructive.—The Doctor is well versed on the subjects of which he treats, and is certainly one of the best lecturers on Phrenology and kindred topics, who has visited Tecumseh within our recollection.

THE LYRIC COMBINATION.

Next Monday evening, Nov. 28th, the Lyric Combination, which comes to our town well recommended, will give an entertainment at the Opera House, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, dramatic readings, humorous personifications, etc. With the exception of the entertainment to-night this will be the first A No. 1 entertainment at the Opera House this season, and we have reason to believe that this company is first-class in every respect. Their entertainment is of the highest moral character as will be seen from testimonials given by several church organizations within our state. Our people should turn out and give them a rousing house to open the season, and see if we cannot give the Opera House some business during the winter, and in so doing make our town lively and prosperous. Below we give a few testimonials:

Miss Hewitt is a pure soprano. Her voice is sweet, of great compass and highly cultivated. In short she is as charming a vocalist as has appeared before an Oswego audience in a long time.—Times, Oswego, New York.

Ionia, Mich., Sept. 10th, 1881.

To whom it may concern:—This is to certify that the ladies and gentlemen composing the Lyric Combination are well known to me and are ladies and gentlemen in every sense of the word, and in their several parts have but few equals, and they give a concert that both please and instruct the audience. Miss Kendrick is an accomplished player upon the harp and violin. Miss Hewitt is a vocalist, with a pure, sweet voice, and perfect articulation. To hear her sing is worth the fee charged for any concert. Mr. Mason is an excellent elocutionist and a good singer. Ionia people unite in pronouncing it a very fine concert, and will greet the combination with a crowded house whenever they choose to appear here.

Very Truly Yours,
H. C. SESSIONS,
G. M. Workman of Ancient Order of United Workmen of the State of Michigan.

Charlotte, Mich., Nov. 11, 1881.

Mr. Mason, Manager Lyric Combination:—We were very much pleased with the entertainment and also with each member of the company. They are a troupe of high culture and we would not hesitate to recommend them to any people.

MRS. A. K. MOORE,
President Ladies' Benevolent Society Congregational Church.

THE MINISTERIAL INSTITUTE.

Proceedings of the Annual Session Held at the M. E. Church in Tecumseh last Week.

The Adrian District Ministerial Institute of the Methodist Episcopal church convened at Tecumseh, Nov. 15, and was called to order by the President, Rev. Wm. J. Campbell, P. E. at 2 P. M.

After usual religious services, the Institute perfected its organization by the election of Revs. R. S. Pardington and J. A. McIlwain vice presidents, and A. W. Wilson, sec'y. Rev. R. S. Pardington, resident pastor, welcomed the Institute in a brief, spicy and appropriate address, responded to by the president, emphasizing especially the importance of making the sessions occasions of spiritual improvement. Rev. Jesse Kilpatrick presented a paper on "The Missionary Spirit—Is it commensurate with the growth of the church?" It was an ingenious product, attempting to exonerate the church, so often charged with decline in missionary zeal. Objection was made to the manner in which our missionary secretaries compare the contributions of our people per capita, with other denominations, and by the exclusion from their reports of certain items, i. e., salaries of P. E., cost of publishing houses, theological schools, etc., which should be admitted.

Rev. D. Shier thought expenses of Presiding Eldership, etc. were rightly excluded, being a local matter, and do not as a whole make our local expenses greater than other denominations, and that we should have been compared, not with others, but ourselves, in the beginning of our history.

Rev. John Alabaster believed we had greatly declined in true missionary zeal even within the last decade; that a sort of school-girl sentimentalism is obtaining, imparting a charm to distant mission work, which tempts some to enter foreign fields, who could not be induced to face the privations of northern Michigan, and without the ability to succeed if they were sent.

Rev. John Atkinson believed in separation of the home from the foreign work; that home is suffering from neglect and that the conversion of our own land would insure the speedy conversion of the world.

A paper of rare merit was read by Rev. J. E. Jacklin on "The Nature of the Atonement." On motion of Rev. John Atkinson, D.D., the author was requested to forward same to the Methodist Quarterly Review for publication, under endorsement of Rev. John Alabaster, D.D., of Ann Arbor.

"The relation of Prayer to Divine Providence" was well treated by Rev. Franklin Bradley. "Our Northern Work—are we doing all for it that is possible?" received its share of attention in a well written and inspiring article by Rev. J. M. Kerridge. Owing to its great prominence just now, the question, "Resolved that the Methodist Episcopal church has Definitive standards of doctrine that may be easily defined" elicited the sharpest and most prolonged debate of the entire session. In a paper of eminent ability Rev. H. C. Northrop maintained the affirmative. The negative being led by Rev. J. A. McIlwain.

The Institute apparently felt that while the church has Definitive standards of doctrine, "a way-faring man" would have difficulty in defining some of them.

On the first evening Rev. John Atkinson, D.D., of Adrian delivered his famous lecture on "Men and Things." followed on the next evening by Rev. John Alabaster, D.D., of Ann Arbor, in an inimitable lecture on "Leonardo da Vinci, the Christian Artist."

As boasting is indicative of weakness or failure, I forbear. Yet in justice, would say no more pleasant and profitable gathering could have been anticipated by the most deeply interested. The program speaks for itself. Every essayist was present and ready. The paper on "The relation of the Higher Culture to the Diffusion of Christianity" by Rev. J. C. Wortley was courteously withdrawn to accommodate others.

The district was largely represented by its pastors and the sessions throughout were greeted with uniformly good and intelligent looking audiences with full house during evenings. The Institute was sweetened by the easy, graceful manner in which the president directed its deliberations. With pleasant memories of the genial gentlemanly, energetic pastor of the church, and his loved and loving people who so royally entertained the Institute, the delegates returned to their various posts of duty rejoicing, not so much that the devils are subject unto them through the name of their Master, but that their names are written in Heaven.

A. W. WILSON, Sec'y.

NOTICE the "ad." of the Lyric Combination in this issue.

THE Philadelphia Press speaking of local advertising, says: "If you wish to do a losing business, advertise on a fence. If you wish to get rich, advertise in a respectable newspaper that has a good circulation among people who buy your goods." The Springfield, Mass., Republican, pointedly reiterates this sentiment as follows:—"The multiplicity of advertising dodges is becoming irksome to advertisers, and they are settling down to the conviction that newspapers are after all the cheapest and best mediums."

WE have received from the author and publisher, Will L. Thompson, East Liverpool, Ohio, a splendid comic song, entitled, "My First Music Lesson." It is a very laughable description of the music pupil's first lesson. Everybody enjoys a good comic song. This one will certainly be very popular. We advise all lovers of music and mirth to send 40 cents to the author and receive a copy by return mail.

DIED.

SHERD—Deacon Mahlon Sherd died on the 15th inst., at the residence of his son, William, at Fenwick, Montcalm co., Mich., whither he had gone to make his annual visit.

His health had been failing since last spring. His last illness was of about five weeks duration. The remains were brought to Tecumseh, and on Friday last were deposited by the side of those of his wife in our beautiful cemetery. The funeral services occurred at the Baptist church, conducted by his former pastor, Rev. J. H. Maynard of Sparta, Mich., assisted by Rev. C. E. Conley. The text upon which the discourse was founded was 1 Cor. 15:19. His wife died five years ago the 17th of last March. He was born in N. J. June 10th, 1805, hence at the time of his death was 76 yrs., 5 months and 5 days old. In 1836 he and his wife were "born again" unto the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ and together with her he was baptized into the fellowship of a Free Baptist church by Rev. David Marks. From that day until the day of his death his life was characterized by an integrity and christian faithfulness which were exceptional. His voice, his purse, his hand were ever ready to help forward every good work. In all departments of life, and in all currents of thought he seemed to discriminate between the right and the wrong instinctively. As a living epistle of our Lord he was read by all men, and known to be genuine. The close of his life was like the setting sun, full-orbed and glorious. Four children survive him. They believe he has gone to be with Christ.

COMFORT—At her home in Raisin, on the 10th inst., of Bronchial Pneumonia, Elizabeth R. Comfort, wife of Elwood Comfort, and daughter of the late Samuel Satterthwaite. She suffered much during the latter part of her sickness of not quite one week's duration, thus suddenly closing a life of remarkable devotion and usefulness to her family and surrounding community. She was an earnest christian, and it may be truly said of her that whilst she loved the Lord her God supremely, she has left ample evidence that she loved her neighbors as herself in the full sense of the text, and her many friends have the consoling trust that their loss is her eternal gain, and that her purified spirit now rests from the cares and trials of this life in one of those mansions prepared for the righteous of all ages. The deceased was in the 53d year of her age.

TO THE PEOPLE OF NORTHERN LENAWEE. I wish to state that I am still devoting, with the aid of my sons, the experience of 40 years endeavor to give GOOD GOODS for the least possible price. When you buy at less price you lose in the quality of goods more than you save in price.—When you find to a certainty the same quality of goods you will find my prices as low or lower than others, for the reason that I pay cash for my goods and give my customers the benefit of the discounts I get for cash. I have probably more goods in my line than all the other dealers in Adrian combined. Goods packed and sent with care on all railway routes. The Sand Blast.

Among the wonderful and useful inventions of the times is the sand blast. Suppose you desire to letter a piece of marble for a gravestone; you cover the stone with a sheet of wax no thicker than a wafer, then cut in the wax the name. Now pass it under the blast, and the wax will not be injured at all, but the sand will cut letters deep into the stone.

Or, if you desire raised letters, a flower or other emblem, cut the letters, flowers, etc. in wax and stick them upon a stone; then pass the stone under the blast, and the sand will cut it away. Remove the wax, and you have the raised letters.

Take a piece of French plate glass, say two feet by six, and cover it with fine lace; pass it under the blast, and not a thread of the lace will be injured, but the sand will cut deep into the glass wherever it is not covered by the lace. Now remove the lace and you have every delicate figure raised upon the glass.

In this way beautiful figures of all kinds are cut in the glass, and at a small expense. The workmen can hold their hands under the blast without harm, even when it is rapidly cutting away the hardest stone, but they must look out for their finger nails, for they will be whittled away right speedily.

If they put on steel thimbles to protect the nails it will do but little good, for the sand will soon whittle them away; but if they wrap a piece of soft cotton around them they are safe. You will see at once the philosophy of it. The sand whittles away and destroys any hard substance, even glass, but does not effect substances that are soft and yielding, like wax, cotton or fine lace, or even the human hand.

Woman's True Friend.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold at Drink Lemonade.

Lemonade is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable to all stomach diseases, is excellent in sickness—in cases of jaundice, gravel, liver complaints, inflammation of the bowels and fevers. It is a specific against worms and skin complaints. The pipins, crushed may also be mixed with water and sugar and be used as a drink. Lemon juice is the best anti-scorbutic remedy known. It not only cures this disease but prevents it. Sailors make a daily use of it for this purpose. The hands and nails are also kept clean, white, soft and supple by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It also prevents chilblains. Lemon is used in intermittant fever, mixed with strong hot black coffee, without sugar. Neuralgia may be cured by rubbing the part affected with a cut lemon. It is valuable also to cure warts and to destroy dandruff on the head by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. In fact its uses are manifold, and the more we employ it externally the better we shall find ourselves. Rub your hands, head and gums with lemon, and drink lemonade in preference to all other liquids. This is an old doctor's advice. Follow it.

American Ladies.

The first impression Sara Bernhardt received of the American ladies manifested itself thus:—"Oh! ze ladies, za are so beautiful—such ele' complexion. I never see ze like!" all of which is due to the universal use of Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases, which insures a clear and clean complexion, and a healthy color. This recalls to mind the divine precept "Cleanliness is next to Godliness."

Large Estates in California.

Large landed estates held by individuals is, next to the Chinese, the greatest curse of the state. The estates should be divided up into little farms. I am in favor of no person holding more than 160 acres. 500,000 farms of this size supporting from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 people. California has vine country enough to make from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 per year, and support 5,000,000 people; and if Congress would give us laws encouraging the growth of vines and the making of wines and brandies, we could save to the United States $100,000,000 every year. That is one of the remedies to employ the surplus muscle machinery drives out of our workshops. I would have the large farms cut up. The constitution should be so amended that when the owner of a large farm dies, it should be cut up and sold in 160-acre lots to the highest bidder. The hours of labor should be reduced until all the surplus labor is employed, even to five hours a day if necessary.—Sacramento Bee.

Renew Your Lease.

There are times in every one's life when energy fails and a miserable feeling comes over them, mistaken for laziness. Danger lurks in these symptoms, as they arise from diseased organs. Parker's Ginger Tonic will restore perfect activity to the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood and renew your lease of health and comfort.—Advocate.

Lamp shades made of autumn leaves are very beautiful. To make them cut the shade of stiff white paper, when the leaves, which have been previously dried and pressed, are arranged on it in a wreath, and fastened on by gum. It is then covered with a very coarse net, and the edges bound with gilt or colored paper. The effect of the light shining through the shade is exceedingly pretty, and it is one of the cheap decorations which all persons possessed of a little taste and ordinarily skillful fingers can make for themselves.

—Wilhoft's Fever and Ague Tonic, the old reliable remedy, now sells for one dollar.

THE SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Roondout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi, or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their reformation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

When "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Bilious disorders, constipation of the bowels, and all the class of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Roondout, N. Y. The doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Port Huron expects a building boom the coming year.

A public reading room and library is the talk at Niles.

Cole's new opera house at Mendon will be dedicated Nov. 30.

J. H. Shultz, formerly of the Minden Post, will start a paper at Port Huron.

Niles, Buchanan, and Berrien Springs will shortly be united by telephone.

Lloyd W. Penney, of Manistique, was killed by the accidental discharge of his gun.

C. E. Sears, of Circleville, O., has bought a site for a canned fruit factory at Three Rivers.

German musicians at Niles give sacred concerts Sunday evenings, which are well attended.

E. B. Hayes, at Whitehall, N. Y., is at Big Rapids, looking for a good place to erect a large planing mill.

J. W. Saunders has purchased the interest of the Michigan ready print company's branch establishment at Grand Rapids.

The Constantine local paper says they had a "bare back woman's race" at that place last week, but omits to say what it means.

The Kalamazoo Daily Times has suspended. The editor says he is sorry he started it, and more grieved that he continued it.

Some men don't appear to know when they have got a good thing. An Ionia county man deserted his wife because she became deaf and dumb.

The Cheboygan Democrat figures up $200,000 worth of improvements made in that village this year. What it needs now is a first class hotel building.

A petition has been sent to Washington for the appointment of Mrs. L. C. Crawford as postmaster at Crawford's Quarry, in place of her deceased husband.

The secretary of the state board of health reports bronchitis, whooping-cough, measles, and diphtheria prevalent, and the outlook in regard to the latter unfavorable.

The arms and acoutrements for the new companies admitted into the military service of the state last winter are being distributed by Quartermaster-General Church.

Some of the Battle Creek politicians declare that they will assist the red ribbon club in any reasonable way if that organization will only promise not to meddle with the spring elections.

The Bay City Tribune man has worked his brain into a headache in the endeavor to reach a logical conclusion as to how a cork-screw came to be wrapped up in his copy of the Free Press.

Thomas Dixon, Thomas and John Hanaway and Nathaniel Shaw have been bound over to the circuit court to answer for the active part they took in the recent labor troubles at Muskegon.

Some reckless thief stole a blanket from Sojourner Truth's back yard at Battle Creek, but when she threatened in print to use her influence with the Almighty for the destruction of the culprit, he hung it back on the line the very next night.

At the adjournment of court at Saginaw City, Tuesday, Sheriff Miller was presented with a fine solid gold badge by the jury. Two stags are engraved on the badge, emblematical of the sheriff's well-known swiftness of foot, and the fine run he made last fall.

Carriages are of no use on east Main street, Ionia, and something must be done, so the Sentinel recommends the council to buy two or more gondolas—doubtless with the view of "trusting to nature for an increase," as a Hibernian park commissioner in New York once proposed.

Herman Wehner, a talented young sculptor, has just completed a very life like bust of the late Mr. Bement, of Lansing, founder of the manufacturing firm of E. Bement & Sons. The bust will be placed in the free reading rooms recently inaugurated by the sons for the benefit of their employes.

Some very bad girls at Coldwater made so much noise on the street that they were locked up in the jail. There they got into a free fight, and Sheriff Wilcox was called upon to separate the combatants. Although the girls badly pummelled one another it is alleged that the sheriff got out of the melee without being scratched.

The coroner is not so unimportant and powerless an official as some people imagine. As a matter of fact he is the only person in each county clothed with authority to arrest the sheriff. Coroner T. B. Weldon, of Otsego county illustrated this a few days ago by placing Sheriff Hilton under arrest on a charge of selling liquor to a minor.

The funeral of Willie Stengle, killed at Saginaw City by a blow on temple inflicted by another boy, was attended by the scholars of St. Paul's Lutheran school. The News of that city says that as the procession came up Harrison street, a large number of the boys from the sixth ward school got out in the street and raised a hurrah that would have disgraced a tribe of savages. Besides making a great deal of noise they yelled such sentences as "it served him right!" "Glad Osborn killed him!" Nice boys they must have in that town.

The suit for $10,000 damages brought by John Eissenheiser against the M. S. Railway company is based upon the following circumstances: Eissenheiser and his family, consisting of his wife and a number of young children, emigrants lately arrived in this country, were put off a train on the Michigan Southern railroad near Manchester, not long ago. They were unable to speak a word of English, or make themselves understood. The night was rainy, and after wandering around for a time they found a place to stay over night. He claims that his wife contracted disease by being put off in the rain, and that the railroad company should pay him.

An Old-Fashioned Editor.

We were grieved to read the other day of the death of one of Michigan's jolliest pioneer editors—almost the last man of a band who published weeklies in the state when a coon-skin would pay for a column "ad," and three bushels of corn dumped on the office floor stood for a year's subscription. Never a publisher was more liberal with his space. It was hard work for him to charge for anything except the tax list and mortgage sales, and he measured short even on them. One day in the years gone by this paper copied an attack on a county official, and old Mark was dozing at his desk when the injured party stalked in and began:

"You are a coward, sir—a——coward!"

"Mebbe I am," was the editor's complacent reply.

"And I can lick you, sir—lick you out of your wrinkled old boots!"

"I guess you could," answered Mark as he busted the wrapper off his only exchange.

"I'm going to write an article calling you a fool, liar, coward, cur, slanderer, and body-snatcher, and go over to Ionia and pay five cents a line to have it published!"

"Hey?" queried the old man as he wheeled around.

"Yes, I'll pay five cents a line to have it published!"

"Say, let me tell you something," replied Mark, "I've got 200 more circulation than the Banner, and I'll publish your attack on me for two cents a line and take it out in mill-feed or corn-stalks! Don't trot over to Ionia when you can help build up your own town!"

Mark would have published it word for word, just as he said, and thrown in a cut of a horse or a stump-puller free gratis, but the official cooled off.—Free Press.

Epizooty.

This disease can be avoided by the timely use of remedies. Those who suffer the loss of their animals gave no heed to treatment, except nursing, thinking it would not amount to much; but when they saw the blood come from the nostrils then they sounded the alarm, but the thief had already stolen the animal. Treatment given from the first will remove all danger in three days, and secure perfect recovery in ten to fifteen days in 90 per cent. of all cases. Apply caustic balsam, one-half ounce, on the throat of the animal and between the jaws, thoroughly rubbed in for ten minutes. One application will be sufficient to check the progress of the disease. Internal treatment is indispensable to aid nature to throw off the poison and eradicate the disease from the system. Ferrum phosphate 3d, one ounce for each animal, dissolved in one pint of soft water; give one-half ounce at a dose three times a day. In severe cases a dose should be given every three hours until the above quantity has been consumed, which will cause the animal to grow off profusely. Then follow with kali mur. 3d, one-half ounce three times a day. If the animal should break out in pastular eruption, cracked heels, scratches, etc., use kali sulphur, 3d, instead of kali mur., in the same form, which should be given after the use of ferrum phos., to complete a cure.

RELIGION EVERY DAY IN THE WEEK.—One thing wanted in these times is a keen realization of the difference between Sunday religion and daily religion, and a conduct according. The difference is great. Sunday religion is a best dress; daily religion is a working suit. Sunday religion is put on; daily religion is an outgrowth. Sunday religion is a fashionable form; daily religion is a real necessity. Sunday religion is a compromise with conscience; daily religion is hunger of the heart. A true religious life is not a matter of great occasional performances, but of incessant little rightnesses.

Annoyance Avoided.

Gray hairs are honorable but their premature appearance is annoying.—Parker's Hair Balsam prevents the annoyance by promptly restoring the youthful color.

The late Rev. Dr. Symington, not feeling well one Sabbath morning, said to his beadle, who was a "character," "Man Robert, I wish you would preach for me the day." "I canna do that," promptly replied Robert, but I often pray for you."

The point of view has much to do with differences in literary criticism. The Boston Courier records this opinion of a boy of twelve on Cooper's novels: "Cooper fixes his books up pretty well; he don't have so much girl in them as Scott does in his."

Fire-proof shingles can be prepared as follows: Make a quantity of whitewash in a large trough, of a bushel of lime, half a bushel of salt, and five or six lbs. of potash. The bundles of shingles are to be saturated with this preparation for about two hours. Quite dry shingles will absorb the wash best, and with the bunches opened.

A Religious Newspaper.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to one of the greatest newspapers of the age—one that secures the best writers in this country and Europe, regardless of expense; has the best and fullest book reviews of any paper in the country; has able articles upon financial subjects; has departments edited by specialists and devoted to Fine Arts, Music, Science, Religious Intelligence, Missions, School and College, News of the week, Hymn Notes, the Sunday school, Legal and Sanitary questions, Biblical Research (something that cannot be found in any other newspaper in the United States), Farm and Garden, Insurance, Weekly Market Reports, &c. We refer to The Independent, of New York. "The largest, the ablest, the best." See advertisement, in another column, and send a postal card for free specimen copy.

Mrs. Annie A. Smithton, of Auburn, N. Y., writes: "I had doctored for years and tried various advertised remedies for my complaint, which was general prostration. I believe I suffered every ill that flesh is heir to. The least exertion caused the greatest fatigue. I was tormented with dyspepsia and every irregularity. My blood seemed poisoned, pimples and sores were all over my body, nothing I tried ever gave me more than mere temporary relief, and I felt myself growing worse and worse. Mr. Reynolds, the druggist advised me to use Brown's Iron Bitters. From the very start I began to improve; now I do not feel like the same woman."

No man is better for any business for having liquor in him. No liquor drinking man can do as much work with as little fatigue as he could if he abstained from the use of liquor. Solomen knew of what he was talking, and probably from experience when he said: "Wine is a mocker; strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

Thinkers will Read and Heed This.

When our most experienced and practical physicians widely endorse and recommend a medicine, knowing from the ingredients used it must have an excellent general effect on the human system, and be a true strengthener of every organ of life, and recognized as Nature's best assistant in curing dyspepsia, indigestion, general debility, nervous prostration, want of vitality, convalescense, fevers, chronic chills and fever, dumb ague, female diseases, broken down constitutions, ill health, weakness, debility, imperfect action of the organs of life and health, etc., all of which make life miserable; then indeed should the newspaper press of the country call the attention of suffering humanity to so meritorious a compound. We refer to Brown's Iron Bitters, a remedy having the largest sale in the east of any medicine ever invented, simply because it has true merit and gives permanent relief.—Herald.

Adrian Times: The Lake Shore depot at Deerfield, was broken into on Thursday night. The burglars entered through a window on the east side, by breaking out a light of glass, drawing the fastening, and sliding back the window. They attempted first to cut out the glass, but finding that slow work they abandoned that plan and broke it in. The money drawer was opened by means of a chisel. No money had been left in the drawer except pennies; a handful or so of those had been obtained.—They got no tickets. On Wednesday night the front of the depot was entered by some sneak thief, while the station agents were putting out the switch lights, and the clock was carried off. There was no clue left.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment: "I have used scores of pile cures, but it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment."

THE INDEPENDENT.

"The foremost religious newspaper of the United States."—The Rev. Joseph Cook.

Established in 1848, as an advocate of anti-slavery and of reforms in religion and politics, The Independent at once became a recognized power throughout the country. Its influence has ever since been constantly growing. As it has fought against slavery and for cheap postage, so it will fight against Mormonism, for Civil-Service Reform, and for purity in politics, and general uprightness in all things. It employs the best editorial talent and speaks fearlessly on all subjects. It pays for contributed articles and for editorial services more than double the amount paid by any other weekly newspaper.

It publishes more religious discussions than the religious reviews, more poetry and stories than the popular monthlies, and gives more information than an annual cyclopedia. The long cable dispatches recently published from the great Methodist Council in London are a good illustration of what The Independent is constantly doing. A list of the most prominent religious and philosophical writers, poets, and story writers in the country is the list of the contributors of The Independent.

The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1882.

THE SUN for 1882 will make its fifteenth annual revolution under the present management, shining as always, for all, big and little, mean and gracious, contented and unhappy, Republican and Democratic, depraved and virtuous, intelligent and obtuse. THE SUN'S light is for mankind and womankind of every sort; but its equal warmth is for the good, while it pours hot discomfort on the blistering backs of the persistently wicked.

THE SUN of 1868 was a newspaper of a new kind. It discarded many of the forms, and a multitude of the superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism. It undertook to report in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, omitting no event of human interest, and commenting upon affairs with the fearlessness of absolute independence. The success of this experiment was the success of the SUN. It affected a permanent change in the style of American newspapers. Every important journal established in this country in the dozen years past has been modelled after THE SUN. Every important journal already existing has been modified and bettered by the force of THE SUN'S example.

THE SUN for 1882 will be the same outspoken, truth-telling, and interesting newspaper.

By a liberal use of the means which an abundant prosperity affords, we shall make it better than ever before.

We shall print all the news, putting it into readable shape, and measuring its importance, not by the traditional yardstick, but by its real interest to the people. Distance from Printing House square is not the first consideration with THE SUN. Whenever anything happens worth reporting we get the particulars, whether it happens in Brooklyn or in Bokhara.

In politics we have decided opinions; and are accustomed to express them in language that can be understood. We say what we think about men and events. That habit is the only secret of THE SUN's political course.

The WEEKLY SUN gathers into eight pages the best matter of the seven daily issues. An Agricultural Department of unequalled merit, full market reports, and a liberal proportion of literary, scientific and domestic intelligence complete The WEEKLY SUN, and make it the best newspaper for the farmer's household that was ever printed.

Who does not know and read and like The SUNDAY SUN, each number of which is a Golconda of interesting literature, with the best poetry of the day, prose every line worth reading, news, humor—matter enough to fill a good-sized book, and indefinitely more varied and entertaining than any book, big or little?

If our idea of what a newspaper should be pleases you, send for The SUN.

Our terms are as follows:

For the daily SUN a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents per month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

CIRCULATE THE MONEY.—The way in which money, when once put upon the round of debt paying, will often cancel many obligations in a short time, has been frequently illustrated. The following loses none of its point for being on a small scale:

A singular financial transaction occurred in an office not long since. By some means or other it happened that the office boy owed one of the clerks three cents, the clerk owed the cashier two cents, and the cashier owed the office boy two cents. One day last week the office boy, having a cent in his pocket, concluded to diminish his debt, and therefor handed it over to the clerk, who, in turn, paid half of his debt by giving it to the cashier. The latter handed it back to the boy, saying that he now only owed him one cent. The boy again passed the cent to the clerk, who passed it to the cashier, who passed it back to the boy, and the boy discharged the entire debt by handing it to the clerk, thereby squaring all accounts.

What is a Good Salad?

A London paper declares that it should not be too miscellaneous. "In simplicity lies perfection." The endive and beetroot, fresh bean and potato, radish and mustard and cress, asparagus and celery, cabbage-hearts and parsley, and all the other ingredients that in this salad or in that find a place are, no doubt, well enough in their way, but the greatest men of modern times have agreed in saying that, given three vegetables and a master mind, a perfect salad may be the result.

But for the making there requires to be present a miser to dole out the vinegar, a spendthrift to sluice on the oil, a sage to apportion the salt, and a maniac to stir.

The household that can produce these four, and has at command a firm, stout-hearted lettuce, a delicate spring onion and a handful of cress, need ask help from none and envy none, for in the consumption of the salad thus ambrosially resulting all earth's cares may be for a while forgot, and the consumer snap his fingers at the boroughs, whether they go right or wrong.

The Medical Uses of Eggs.

For burns and scalds there is nothing more soothing than the white of an egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and being always on hand can be applied immediately. It is also more cooling than the "sweet oil of cotton," which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from ordinary accidents of this kind; and anything which excludes air and prevents inflamation is the thing to be at once applied. The egg is also considered one of the best remedies for dysentery. Beaten up lightly with or without sugar, and swallowed at gulp, it tends, by its emollient qualities, to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and by forming a transient coating on these organs to enable nature to assume her healthful sway over the diseased body. Two, or at most three, eggs per day would be all that would be required in ordinary cases, and, since the egg is not merely a medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

The Wife's Management.

To most wives, the very thought of asking a husband for money for personal expenses, is a delicate and dreaded task. Not that the wife of a man fears refusal, but to her it seems that he should see for himself what she needs, not compel her to ask for what is rightfully hers. The wife is the head manager of the home; the man is presumably the bread winner, the responsible head, but on her devolves the burden of planning and managing the home expenditures.

When a man marries, he takes away, in a measure, the opportunities which a woman possessed before of providing for her own support. There are many men who wed with the avowed intention of taking a partner in life who shall help them earn money, and who demand that a wife shall toil on, year after year, at cost of health and home comfort; no matter if both are sacrificed, so that she earns money to help swell the general fund. We do not propose to give such husbands even a passing notice; but allude to those men who when they enter into wedlock do so with the design of creating a home, and directing their best efforts toward the maintenance of that home, and the education of their children.

Were such men as the latter to realize how most women shrink from asking for money for the purchase of clothes and the numberless trifles they love to collect, they would not force them to do it. It is a very easy matter for a man to give to his wife a weekly or monthly sum from which she can provide herself and little ones with what they require; and he should also depute to her the duty of making the purchases for all departments of the home. A certain sum allowed her (and should be according to his income) would place her in a position to acquire judgment, by calling into exercise economy and skill in making purchases. A wife who is thus treated will become systematic and prudent. She will soon learn that it is more judicious to buy in large quantities. She will also learn that it is the truest economy to procure the best. A new delight will enter into her daily life. All women have, in a greater or lesser degree a taste for business; and a possession of a certain share of the funds will awaken habits of forethought, and common sense will dictate her outlays, besides she will know better what she, as the representative of her husband, can afford. She will no longer be kept in ignorance of his affairs, and she will determine for herself just how far money should be expended, with the happiest results.

If any husband doubts the correctness of our views, let him consult his wife upon the subject, and the answer will, perhaps, surprise him. And if he go still farther, and adopt the advice given, the result will surprise him also. He will be the gainer, both in true comfort, and increased respect of his wife, while she will enjoy the pleasant excitement of bargaining, and the development of an executive ability, which might have remained dormant.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

SPRINGVILLE.

Coal, coal, is the cry of the coal burners in this place.

Miss Rachel Mosher returned from Detroit a short time since. Glad to see her gentle face once more.

The band boys have added two new cornets to their band.

Henry Mensing has purchased the wagon shop formerly owned by W.H. Smith, and will commence business therein soon.

C. E. Jessup's stock scales are in good demand this fall, the most of the stock purchased in the township being weighed there.

Anson Ayres having sold his farm in Franklin has moved in with his brother Elvin, in this place. We understand he expects to stay here this winter.

Lyman & Laur shipped a fine car load of hogs to Buffalo on the 17th, it being their sixth car load this fall.

W. H. Smith is erecting a two-story building on his lot. The lower part to be used by himself for an agricultural implement room, and the upper part by the band boys, they having leased it for a term of years.

The roads are getting bad again.

John Kerr arrived home last Sunday.

The tinners have been at work on Samuel Morey's new house the past week.

The party at Nearing's hotel on Thanksgiving night, given by the band, was a very pleasant one, there being about fifty couple present.

Last Monday evening the band boys went to the residence of John Kerr, to serenade their friend John upon his return from the old country. They were somewhat surprised after playing two selections when Mr. Kerr and a number of his neighbors, who had called to see him, appeared on the front porch and invited them into the house, and they found that Mr. Kerr had heard of their coming to see him that evening, he having made preparation to receive them. After having a social talk the boys were invited into the dining room, where tables were spread in waiting for them with everything they might wish for,—oysters, roast turkey, etc. After supper music was furnished, and upon their departure Mr. Kerr presented them with $5,00, whereupon a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Kerr, by the band, for their reception during the evening.

HOLLOWAY.

The literary society met, as usual, last Saturday evening. The meeting was quite an improvement on the previous one, although the program was not long. There is some talk of meeting at the church again instead of at the Kelley school house where the society now meets. It would be a decided benefit to the literary as well as to the church society.

The following is the program for next Saturday evening, Dec. 3rd:

Declamation—C. A. Satterthwaite.
" —I. E. Arner.
Recitation—Carrie Doty.
" —Altha Binns.
Select Reading—Mary Chatfield.
Chip Basket—F. S. Rogers.
Debate—Question—Resolved, That education makes the men of to-day.
Affirmative—W. Chatfield, C. W. Arner.
Negative—E. M. Boyd, F. F. Rogers.

Burt and Ben Garlinghouse started for Chicago last Monday.

Mr. James Simonds has been on the sick list for some time.

School began in the Doty district last Monday.

CLINTON.

A new boot and shoe store is shortly to be added to our list of business houses: at least report says so.

"Vet" Erskine, of Tecumseh, has bought the Clinton Exchange hotel property, and already occupies the same, having moved in this week.—We are glad to see the hotel again thrown open to the public. Vet has the best wishes of our people, and we doubt not will meet with deserved success.

The walk from Tecumseh street to the Episcopal church continues to be an abominable nuisance, made and kept so by the disgraceful practice of some in hitching their teams on the sidewalk contrary to right and decency. Is there no power to correct the abuse? If not, why not?

Hudson Post: It took four teams and a score of men to move the leviathan boiler of the Eaton works. The stack soon followed, and Saturday saw the last of the wheelbarrow works in Hudson.

RIDGEWAY.

R. S. Houseman spent last Sunday with his parents in Clinton county.

Rich. Wiggins is selling peanuts by the peck at Britton.

C. H. Clark partook of Thanksgiving turkey at Ridgeway.

Mrs. C. A. Snarp is making a visit to her old home in the Buckeye state.

Frank Pocklington is himself again. His better-half having returned from a visit to Ohio.

Thanksgiving services were held in the M. E. church on Thursday evening of last week.

Mr. Bontecou gave us a temperance talk on the evening of the 15th and organized a branch Alliance with Hon. G. P. Waring, president; Rev. Killpatrick, vice; T. H. Temple, sec.; A. Sutton, treas.

Our village school is prospering finely; between 60 and 70 pupils in attendance. A number of foreign scholars. This speaks well for our teacher.

And now the pork market has opened at Britton. First shipment made on Tuesday. We believe 6½ cts. is about the price paid.

Richard Adams takes the cake for heavy sheep. He recently weighed ten head that averaged 160 lbs. each. Who's next?

The social will be held at Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson's, Friday evening. This is the third attempt to hold a social and everybody ought to have got a good ready. Hope the weather wont interfere this time.

Mr. Helm, of Tecumseh, has opened a harness shop in rooms in the exchange block.

The Chautauqua circle are holding their meetings at the homes of members now instead of at the church.

Morenci Observer: At about 1:30 A. M. Tuesday morning Watchman Follet discovered that the rear part of the second story of the old "headquarters" store in the western part of "the village," was thoroughly in flames and beyond any reasonable hope of being extinguished. The alarm was given, and soon a large crowd of firemen and citizens were on hand, and the efforts of the firemen were directed in saving the adjacent property. The hook and ladder company did effective work in pulling down the burning building, but somehow the engine, "Sitting Bull," could not be got into working condition until the flames had nearly done their work. Not having had a fire in a long time the "packing" to the connections were so much out of gear that a large amount of tinkering had to be done before a stream of water could be brought to bear on the flames. The building destroyed was one of the oldest in town, being known as the old headquarters store, and was in rather a dilapidated condition, having been used the last year as a paint shop by Mr. Geo. Conant.

MACON Grange, No. 167, will celebrate the anniversary of the Patrons of Husbandry, at their hall on Friday the 9th day of December, 1881. Oration to be delivered by Dr. George Howell. Exercises to commence at 11 o'clock A. M.; a picnic dinner at 2 o'clock, P. M., and a social after dinner. Members of the Grange and their families are invited to attend, and special invitation to the Editor of the HERALD. The members of the Grange are requested to meet at the Grange hall on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 7th, at 1 o'clock, sharp, to clean and decorate the hall.

C. MEAD.

Morenci Observer: Alexander Watrous, of this township, was arrested on Wednesday evening by constable Baldwin, and brought in Justice Killen's court on complaint of constable Bennett for hunting on the farm of the latter without permission. The trial is set down for Tuesday next and will be watched with interest by the hunting fraternity.

Worthy of Praise.

As a rule we do not recommend Patent Medicines, but when we know of one that really is a public benefactor, and does positively cure, then we consider it our duty to impart that information to all. Electric Bitters are truly a most valuable medicine, and will surely cure Billiousness, Fever and Ague, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints, even where all other remedies fail. We know whereof we speak, and can freely recommend them to all. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at

C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

REVIVAL meetings at the Baptist church are continued this week.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer has the hearty commendation of thousands whose "turning locks" have been restored by it to their former beauty of color and growth. It is in fact a miracle in its way, even in this age of wonderous improvement—a fact in which every one who has given its virtues a test will certify. The proprietors, R. P. Hall & Co., are men of liberality and enterprise, who give the benefit of their discovery to the world at large, and have placed it in the hands of every druggist in the country, that its benefits may be extended alike to all. If there is the least suspicion of gray hair showing itself upon your head, go at once and procure a bottle of this celebrated Hair Renewer.

IT is said that the churches are profiting by the refusal of the trades people to take punched coin. A man with a half dollar with a hole in it will put the coin in the collection box rather than contribute a ten cent piece without a blemish. The church officials are able to sell the mutilated coin at a discount, and they find that the collections are usually liberal, even though cunning christians are passing off uncurrent money in their lendings to the Lord.

A Free Acknowledgement.

I hereby certify that I habitually use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" in my family in all those cases in which a domestic medicine is needed, and that it has never yet failed to accomplish the purpose desired. We look upon it as an anchor to windward that is sure to hold in every instance mentioned on the doctor's bill of particulars. I make this acknowledgement freely, in hope of doing good to others, feeling that a medicine that is near at hand and to be implicity trusted is worth more than it costs. Rev. G. C. ESRAY,
Formerly Associate Editor Rondout Freeman.

AN exchange remarks that potatoes will soon be bought for mantel ornaments at $5 a pair, whereupon a punster remarks that they would look well pared.

A Remarkable Coincidence.

It is a matter of journalistic record, that some years since, a schooner set sail from Baltimore, having on board a crew of thirteen men. By a most singular freak of nature, the entire force was attacked by a skin disease, which manifested itself in large ulcerated sores on the arms and hands, wholly incapacitating the men from duty. The result was that the vessel was towed back to the city where the men were placed in the hospital.—Moral! Had Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases been used in the first place, the crew would have recovered in from 12 to 48 hours.

BLESSED is the man that unwittingly sitteth on the business end of a hornet, for he shall rise again—yea, with exceeding acceleration of motion.

A Word to Mothers.

Mother should remember it is a most important duty at this season to look after the health of their families and cleanse the malaria and impurities from their systems, and that nothing will tone up the stomach and liver, regulate the bowels and purify the blood so perfectly as Parker's Ginger Tonic, advertised in our columns.

ADRIAN will soon rejoice in the Herdic coach. Bachtel & Todd have bought the exclusive right to its use in that city.

Mr. Samuel McKenzie, Cumberland, Md., writes: "I am 68 years of age.—About four years ago I began to go into decline. I suffered from dyspepsia, stone in the bladder, weak lungs, and general nervous debility. Nothing I tried did me any good until I used Brown's Iron Bitters. This remedy has made me again robust and strong, and I feel all the fire and activity of youth once more in my veins."

Over all paths alpine clouds must lower,
Under all feet some sharp thorns spring,
Tearing the flesh to inner wounds,
Or entering the heart with their bitter sting.
Upon all arrows rough winds must blow,
Over all shoulders a cross be lain,
Bowing the form in its lofty height
Down to the dust in its earthy pain.

Into all hands some duty thrust,
Unto all arms some burden given,
Crushing the heart with its dreary weight,
Or lifting the soul from earth to heaven.
Into all hearts and homes and lives
God's dear sunshine comes streaming down,
Hiding the ruins of life's great plan,
Weaving for all a golden crown.

Fasting.

A KENTUCKIAN TRIES IT FOR THE SAKE OF SCIENCE.

A member of the Scientific Association, of Newport, doubting the fast of Dr. Tanner the writer, in order to prove to him beyond a doubt that a human being, in good health, could exist on air diluted with an occasional drop of water a given time, undertook a strict fast, beginning on Sunday morning the 11th inst.

After cautioning the partner of his bosom to feed the chickens regularly, the patient began his great test fast immediately after breakfast. The following is a true record of the endurance:

At 6:30 A. M.—Pulse normal, though a general cavity in the stomach is noticeable.

At 7 A. M.—Pulse not quite so normal as half an hour previous, but still tolerably normal considering.

At 7:30 A. M.—The patient sleeping soundly and snoring loudly; but the latter is not caused by a loss of tissue so much as that the subject lay on his back.

At 8 A. M.—The patient still asleep but called out "Zwei!" He afterwards explained that it wasn't because he was hungry, but had dreamed he was in a saloon drinking beer with some friends. Here several of the physicians cried out "Fraud! fraud!" and argued that the body could derive sustenance from eating and drinking in its mind while asleep. Dr. Jeancon argued that it could not.

At 8:30 A. M.—Patient bright; eyes same color as usual; stomach normal, but flatter; tongue moist. Nine physicians, seven reporters, fourteen sub-reporters, and a dozen or so friends of the undeceased in the room.

At 9 A. M.—Patient shows signs of hunger, is very crabbed, and wants to kick out of the room Dr. Davis, who stated that he believed the patient had just eaten a fly that had fallen into his throat.

At 9:30 A. M.—Patient asleep again, and snoring normally. Drs. Thornton, Gunkel and Locke determined to apply the sphymograph to ascertain the true condition of the pulse; also, the dynamometer to learn how his muscular strength is, and likewise the æsthesiometer (everybody knows what that is) to learn of the condition of his sense of touch. Dr. Jones objected to the use of the last named instrument, saying that the best way of ascertaining the sense of touch was to tickle the patient on the end of the nose with the ends of a few male hairs. He was finally allowed to make the test, which proved an æsthesiometer, a sphygmograph and dyamometer combined, for the same instant it was applied the the doctor lay on the floor insensible. The patient had touched him with the bunched end of his right arm.

At 10 A. M.—The patient experiences a kind of goneness in the stomach. He proposed to walk out in the open air, but Dr. Keener, being too keen for him, objected, on the ground that a person fasting so long could receive nourishment from the air; else how do the spirits live? Patient didn't walk.

At 10:30 A. M.—Here the fasting man's wife made her appearance, and wanted to know if they wouldn't allow him just a quart of beer only. She was refused; whereat she became greatly alarmed, and said she knew he would die, and that she did not want a dead man for a husband.

At 11 A. M.—Tongue a little unnormal, presenting a somewhat parched surface, and patient spitting cotton. A few ounces of water was suggested, but the irate faster threatened to whip any man who would offer him water—"never drank the stuff and wouldn't begin now."

At 11:30 A. M.—Stomach filling up with goneness, but its pulsations are tolerably normal. The patient wants to kick out a physician who doubts that the has fasted since morning.

At 11:45 A. M.—Dr. Phythian pronounces the patient's case a most critical one, but the latter exhibited great normal nerve, and says he feels just as well as ever, but a little thirsty, having been accustomed to take lunch at 10 o'clock. He takes a long walk about the room.

P. S.—A letter from George Francis Train has just been received, telling the patient for God's sake to cease not eating any longer; that he has already gained a victory; but the latter sends him word back to go—

The Labor of an Editor

The London Times, speaking of editorial labor says it can only be appreciated by those who have had the fortune to have some experience in it. The merest slip of the pen, an epithet too much, a wrong date, a name misspelt, or with a wrong initial before it, the misinterpretation of some passage, perhaps incapable of interpretation, the most trifling offense to the personal or national susceptibility of those who do not even profess to care for the feelings of others, may prove not only disagreeable, but costly mistakes; but they are about the least of the mistakes to which the editor is liable. The editor must be on the spot until the paper is sent to the press, and make decisions on which not only the approval of the public, but even great causes, may hang. He cannot husband his strength with comparative repose in the solitude of a study, or the freshness of green fields. He must see the world, converse with its foremost or busiest actors, be open for information, and on guard against error. All this should be borne in mind by those who complain that journalism is not infallibly accurate, just and agreeable.

Everything in nature indulges in amusement. The lightning plays, the wind whistles, the thunder rolls, the snow flies, the waves leap, and the fields smile. Even the buds shoot and the river runs. Yes, and the air frequently whistles.

Says a French critic: "I like a girl before she gets womanish, and a woman before she gets girlish."

from California, where oysters are very small and unimportant, not to say insignificant, and I had often eaten a hundred there at a time, and had always felt that I could eat more if I had them. So when I arrived at the Metropolitan Hotel I ordered my dinner to be served in my room, and told the waiter to bring with my dinner a strong cup of coffee and a hundred raw oysters. He looked at me a moment and then said:

"Did I understand you to say a hundred oysters?"

"Yes," I answered; "raw, on the half shell, with vinegar; no lemons; and as soon as you can, for I am very hungry."

"Ahem! Miss, do you want a hundred?"

"Yes, I do. What are you waiting for? Must I pay for them in advance? I want nice large ones."

"No, no, Miss. All right, you shall have them," and he went out. I continued my writing, and forgot all about my dinner till he knocked and came in with my dinner on a tray, but no oysters.

"How is this?" said I. "There are no oysters."

"Dey's comin', Miss, dey's comin'," and the door opened and in filed three more sons of Afric's burning sands, each with a big tray of oysters on the half shell. I was staggered, but only for a moment, for I saw the waiters were grinning, so I calmly directed them to place one tray on a chair, one on the washstand and one on the bed, and said:

"They are very small, aren't they?"

"Oh! no, Miss, de berry largest we'ze got."

"Very well," said I, "you can go. If I want any more I'll ring."

When they got out into the hall one said to the other:

"'Fore God, Jo, if she eats all them oysters she's a dead woman."

I did not feel hungry any longer. I drank my coffee and looked at the oysters, very one of them as big as my hand, and they all seemed looking at me with their horrible white faces, and out of their one diabolical eye, until I could not have eaten one any more than I could have carved up a live baby. They leered at me and seemed to dare me to attack them. Our California oysters are small, and with no more individual character about them than grains of rice, but these detestable creatures were instinct with evil intentions, and I dared not swallow one for fear of the disturbance he might raise in my interior, so I set about getting rid of them, for I was never going to give up beaten before those waiters. I hung a dress over the key-hole after I locked the door, and just outside my window found a tin waterspout that had a small hole in it. I carefully enlarged it, and then slid every one of those beastly creatures down one by one—one hundred and two of them—they all the time eyeing me with that cold, pasty look of malignity. When the last one was out of sight I stopped trembling, and finished my dinner in peace, and then rang for the waiters. You just should have seen their faces! One of the waiters asked if I would have some more. May he never know the internal pang he inflicted upon me, but I replied, calmly:

"Not now. I think too many at once might be hurtful."

LITTLE ONES FOR A CENT.

It is more blessed to give than receive—the itch.

A dispatch, a fresh one from Nashville, says there is not a barrel of salt in that city. A city is getting in rather close quarters when there isn't a salt seller in it.

A young man at La Crosse, Wis., looked in the key-hole of a girl's bedroom, and ever since the doctors have been trying to get a knitting needle out of the place where his north eye used to be.

A Boston lecturer astonished his audience by bringing down his fist on the table and shouting, "Where is the religiosity of the anthropoid quadrumana?" If he thinks we have got it he can search us. We never saw it in the world.

There is a fearfully harrowing story going the rounds of the papers headed "Ten Days in Love." It must have been dreadful, with no Sunday, no day of rest, no holiday, just nothing but love, for ten long days. By the way, did the person live?

It is said by fashion reporters that "cheese cloth" is being used for ladies' dresses and so forth. Those who have noticed the bandages around cheese will wonder if they can be made up into dresses without retaining the odor of the cheese. It would be pretty tough to take a girl to a party who had a suspicion of limberger clinging to her garments.

During the trial of Susan B. Anthony for illegal voting, the prosecuting attorney got one admission from the defense that should endear him to the hearts of the American people. He compelled Susan, through her attorney, to admit that she was a woman. That is a point gained that will be valuable in future litigation.

The Waupun Leader contains an article informing its readers "when to eat pickerel." We did not read the article, but suppose of course that the Leader says, eat pickerel at meal time. Nothing appears so much out of place as to see a man in business hours walking along the street picking the bones out of a piece of pickerel.

A boarder at a Leadville hotel investigated his beefsteak and found that it was a fried liver pad that a former boarder had pawned for his board. The landlord didn't want to lose it, so he had it cooked. A liver pad, if nicely cooked, is fine eating, with mushrooms, but of course, in that new country where they have not all the cooking utensils, it must be a trifle raw.

Two girls belonging to a church choir at Oshkosh, got locked into the church the other night, while they were talking over the fashions. They gave the alarm, when a man living near the church put a board up to the window and they slid down to the ground. The most singular thing was that after they had got safely to the ground they looked mad and went off without thanking the man, and they won't speak to the man when they meet him. He couldn't account for it until he went to take the board down, when he got slivers in his fingers and scratched his thumb on a single nail that stuck up through the board. Some men are mighty careless. He says he don't care only for the other hearts that may ache.

German statisticians calculate that the amount of money expended in railroads since the invention of locomotives reaches the vast sum of $15,000,000,000.

hours of the twenty-four; and others need eight. Avoid feather beds. Sleep in a garment not worn during the day. To maintain robust health, sleep with a person as healthy as yourself, or no one.

2.—Dress. In cold weather, dress warmly with underclothing. Remove muffler, overcoat, overshoes, etc., when remaining any considerable length of time in a warm room. Keep your feet warm and dry. Wash them in warm water two or three times a week. Wear warm stockings, large boots, and overshoes when in the snow or wet. Wear a light covering on the head, keeping it always cool.

3.—Cleanliness. Have always a pint or quart of water in the sleeping room. In the morning after washing and wiping hands and face, then wet with the hands every part of the body. Cold water will not be disagreeable when applying it with the bare hands. Wipe immediately; follow by brisk rubbing over the body. The whole operation need not take over five minutes. The result of this wash is, the blood is brought to the surface of the skin and made to circulate evenly throughout the body. You have opened the pores of the skin, allowing impurities of the body to pass off, and have given yourself in the operation, a good vigorous morning exercise. Pursue this habit regularly, and you will seldom take cold.

4.—Inflation of the Lungs. Five minutes spent in the open air, after dressing, inflating the lungs, by inhaling as full a breath as possible, and pounding the breast during the inflation, will greatly enlarge the chest, strengthen the lung power, and very effectually ward off consumption.

5.—Diet. If inclined to be dyspeptic, avoid mince pie, sausage, and other highly seasoned food. Beware of eating too freely of soups; better to eat food dry enough to employ the natural salvia of the mouth in moistening it. If inclined to over-eat, partake freely of rice, cracked wheat, and other articles that are easily digested.

Eat freely of ripe fruit, and avoid excessive use of meats. Eat at regular hours, and lightly near the hour of going to bed. Eat slowly. Thoroughly masticate the food. Do not wash it down with continual drink while eating. Tell your funniest stories while at the table, and for an hour afterwards. Do not engage in severe mental labor directly after hearty eating.

6.—Exercise. Exercise, not too violent, but sufficient to produce a gently perspiration, should be had each day in the open air.

7.—Condition of the Mind. The condition of the mind has much to do with the health. Be hopeful and joyous. To be so, avoid business entanglements that may cause perplexity and anxiety. Keep out of debt. Live within your income. Attend church. Walk, ride, mix in jovial company. Do as near right as you know how. Thus conscience will always be at ease. If occasionally disappointed, remember that there is no rose without a thorn, and that the darkest clouds have a silver lining; that sunshine follows a storm, and beautiful spring follows the dreary winter. Do your duty, and leave the rest to God who doeth all things well.

A Mother's Boy.

Is there a vacant place in this bank which I could fill?" was the inquiry of a boy, as with a glowing cheek he stood before the President.

"There is none," was the reply. "Were you told that you might obtain a situation here? Who recommended you?"

"No one recommended me," was the answer: "I only thought I would see."

There was a straightforwardness in the manner, an honest determination in the countenance of the lad which pleased the man of business, and induced him to continue the conversation. He said "You must have friends who could aid you in a situation; have you advised with them?"

The quick flash of the deep blue eyes was quenched in the underlying wave of sadness, as he said, though half musingly, "My mother said it was useless to try without friends;" then recollecting himself, he apologized for the interruption, and was about to withdraw, when the gentleman detained him by asking him why he did not stay at school another year or two, and then enter into business life.

"I have no time," was the instant reply, "but I study at home and keep up with the other boys."

"Then you have a place already?" said the interrogater. "Why did you leave it?"

"I have not left it," answered the boy quietly.

"Yes, but you wish to leave it. What is the matter?"

For an instant the child hesitated; then he replied with half reluctant frankness, "I must do more for my mother."

Brave words! talisman of success anywhere, everywhere. They sank into the heart of the listener, and recalled the forgotten past. Grasping the hand of the astonished boy, he said, with a quivering voice: "My good boy, what is your name? You shall fill the first vacancy that occurs in the bank. If in the meantime you need a friend, come to me. But give me your confidence. Why do you wish to do more for your mother?"

Tears filled the boy's eyes as he replied, "My father is dead, and my sisters and brothers are dead, and my mother and I are left to help each other, but she is not strong, and I want to take care of her. It will please her that you have been so kind, and I am much obliged to you."

So saying the boy left, little dreaming that his own nobleness of character had been as a bright glance of sunshine to the busy world he had so trembling entered.

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First.

Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts without the usual rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.

Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.

Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.

Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.

Because over 2000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.

Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.
